Slide Disrupts School

Tuesday morning school activities at Kendrick and Juliaetta were disrupted when a big slide on the hill near the Werner Brammer home between Kendrick and Juliaetta blocked bus and car travel, making it impossible to transport many of the pupils. Rather than hold school for those able to get to their respective stations, it was dismissed for the day.

The slide took place sometime late Monday evening or early Tuesday morning.

This is the spot that has slid a number of times before, and the road should be rebuilt at this spot before a slide catches someone and a life is taken or serious injury results. All are at a loss to understand why this section was not rebuilt at the time the mile link at the edge of Kendrick was constructed.

Tigers Drop Game To Bulldogs

Dave Denner sank a lay-in during the second and "sudden death" overtime of the Kendrick-Genesee basketball game at Genesee Tuesday evening to give the Genesee Bulldogs a 48-46 score over Kendrick.

Boy Scouts Take Hike

Four of the local Boy Scouts, headed by Lee Jones, took off on a winter hike Friday. Their destination was Moscow Mountain. The first night they camped at the foot of the mountain in some snowdrifts. As a lesson in resourcefulness, the boys put to a test some of the things they had learned in the book. As part of their equipment they had snowshoes and a tabogan.

Others in the group were George Jones, Jimmy Armitage and Darrel Brocke. They report a wonderful time and thrills galore — eating and sleeping in a snow bank.

EUGENE ELLIOTT, KENDRICK PIONEER, DIES IN FIRE

Eugene Elliott, 85, died from suffocation either Thursday night or early Friday morning at his home at 2234 3rd Ave., North Lewiston. Lewiston police said Elliott apparently choked to death from smoke when his bed caught on fire and smoldered into a pile of ashes.

Mr. Elliott attempted to escape through the back door of the house, but collapsed. His body, clad in undergarments, was found lying in front of the rear door of his home at 4:35 Friday afternoon by Lewiston police officers.

J. G. Eberling, a neighbor, was the last person to see Elliott alive, the police said. Eberling said he saw Mr. Elliott going into his home at 6:30 Thursday evening.

Friday morning Mr. Eberling noticed that the shades were still drawn. He became alarmed Friday afternoon and called police, who entered the house by breaking a window.

Eugene Elliott was a pioneer of this area. He settled at Kendrick with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Urban Elliott in 1886. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge at Kendrick for 50 years. He was born Nov. 1, 1866, at Rochelle, Ill.

The only survivors were two brothers, William Elliott, Lewiston, and Newman Elliott, Clay Center, Kansas.

Mr. Elliott farmed on the Big Bear ridge bench for many years, disposing of his interests to Ormand Mandfeld and moving to Lewiston about 1946.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the Vassar-Rawls chapel with Rev. Merritt Faulkner officiating.

Mrs. Thomas McCord was soloist and Mrs. Volney Miller, organist. The Kendrick I. O. O. F. lodge was in charge of burial services at the Wild Rose cemetery, Big Bear ridge. Pallbearers were E. A. Deobald, Bernard Jones, Edgar Long, Fred Gladen, E. H. Jones and Richard Blewett.

To Discuss Hell's Canyon

The Hell's Canyon controversy will be discussed at an open meeting of the Kendrick Commercial Club next Wednesday evening, February 13, by Orland C. Mayer, Boise, director of industrial development for the Idaho Power company.

Mr. Mayer is a graduate electrical engineer from the University of Idaho and has been with the electric utility in southern Idaho for 23 years. He grew up at Genesee, where he attended high school preparatory to his training in the engineering field, in which he has gained national prominence. He is a past president of the Idaho State Society of Professional Engineers and a director of the national society.

Mayer's company proposes to build five low-head dams on the Snake river between Weiser and Hell's canyon as the "most economical hydro development for this section of the river."

Groundhog Saw His Shadow

Yes, there is no doubt about it, the groundhog saw his shadow last Saturday, having that opportunity several times during the course of the day, but whether he will decide on his ancient prerogative and give us six more weeks of winter remains to be seen. At any rate, the weather this past week has far more nearly resembled March than early February.

There has been wind, rain, a very brief touch of sleet, and some very nice sunshine.

The dirty piles of ice and packed snow along the streets in town are disappearing rapidly, the water literally spurting from them with the wind and sunshine of Monday.

Given a few more days of this streets in town will be bare and dry. Roads in the country are also said to be bare, and drying up nicely in most places, despite plenty of rain.

Attend District Meeting

Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Schmidt attended a pastors' meeting of the Walla Walla sub-district in Astotin Monday. A pot-luck dinner was served at noon, with the business session following.

At this meeting a plan was formed whereby the pastors in the area would exchange churches for an instruction meeting on Missions.

The date for this meeting here has been set for Thursday, Feb. 21, when there will be a pot-luck supper in the Community church with the Rev. Ed. Knight of Orofino as guest speaker.

Court Of Honor

A Boy Scout Court of Honor will be held at the High school auditorium in Lewiston, Feb. 11, at 7:30 p. m.

The troop will serve a lunch at 6:30 in the High school cafeteria.

BEVERLY SCHUPFER WRITES MORE INTERESTING LETTERS

Beverly Schupfer, exchange student now at Graz, Austria, has written her parents another very interesting letter, and again they allow us to reproduce portions of it. The letter, under date of January 17:

Dear Mom and Daddy: First of all I want to thank you for the things you sent for Christmas. The package was here when I got back from Schlading and I wrapped things up in the paper on December 24th, and the Christkind came that evening. Here the gifts are brought by the Christchild (Christkind), who also brings the tree, all decorated. Egon fixed it up in the bedroom in the afternoon and while he, little Egon and I went to the cathedral to see the Krippen (wooden figures representing the Christmas story) the Christkind came. It was a beautiful tree with real decorated candles and loaded with decorations and things to eat. Here they make little cookies with holes in the center and hang them on the tree, as well as little chocolate figures, fish, musical instruments, etc. We opened our gifts, and everyone was very pleased. I gave Elfi two pairs of nylon, and she was so happy with them, because she had never had a pair before. Little Egon loves the log set and he and his two little cousins have built just about everything imaginable already, but they seem to excel in churches of all styles. They gave me very nice things, and most of them little remembrances of Austria; a little picture of a street in Graz, a pin, made in Austria, a cute little coin purse of leather and in the shape of a Styrian hat with a chamisio beard, and a box of Christmas cookies.

It was almost 2:00 a. m. when I finally got into bed, and I hated to think of having to get up at 6:30 the next morning to get on the train for our trip.

The train left at 8:30 on Tuesday morning and we were both all excited about starting off on such a trip. We had books to read on the train, and a big net full of cookies, cheese, wurst, bread and oranges to last us for two days, because the trains very seldom have diners on them. We had very short stops in Salzburg and Munich, and from Munich to Heidelberg had a beautiful car on the train, and something quite modern. It was only second class so we had to pay a supplement, but had big overstuffed seats in a compartment all to ourselves for about two hours. This train also had a secretary trained to take dictation and type in four languages, and you could use her services or type letters for yourself while traveling.

We arrived in Heidelberg about 10:30 at night and were met at the station by a German friend of Bob's who had studied at Iowa state for a year. And this fellow has an American girl friend working for the Friends here in Europe, so there were four of us together. They were very nice kids, Horst and Gay, and the next day we went up to see the big castle, which is very famous and a landmark of Heidelberg. It was very impressive and the gardens were so beautiful. It is there that they have the "Big Ton," which is the largest wine barrel in the world, holding 50,000 gallons. I guess it only had to be refilled once and of course now has nothing in it, and is just a tourist attraction. I've put in a post card with scenes from Heidelberg and showing the castle, although it is quite small in the picture. In the afternoon we visited Horst's family and had a good time there, too.

Our train left at 10:00 at night, and we had a very old car and crowded, until we got to the French-German border. There were a couple of American soldiers on the train who insisted that the train didn't cross the Rhine river into Strassbourg and that we had to either walk, or take the streetcar, or a taxi. Against our better judgement we listened to them, and it turned out that they were wrong, and we just had to walk with our suitcases for the sake of our health, but we can say that we really crossed the Rhine river — on foot. We had to wait for about three hours in Strassbourg, and although it was rather late, we did walk to the cathedral and saw it in the dark; it looked even bigger and grander. The train from Strassbourg into Paris was also quite bad and very crowded. We bought third class tickets all the way, although not all of the cars are so bad. The train was just full of French soldiers going into Paris. It almost seemed as though we were on a troop train, but France is very highly militarized, and there are swarms of soldiers everywhere. It was an all-night ride; we didn't arrive in Paris until 7:30 on Thursday morning, and Fred and Ruth were at the station to meet us.

As soon as we took our things to the hotel and cleaned ourselves up a bit we made a trip across town to the office of the Spanish Consulate to get visas for Spain. After we were already there, Fred discovered that he had forgotten to bring a picture, so there was a frantic hour trying to find a fast passport photo shop that was supposed to be in the neighborhood, and when that failed stuffing Fred into a cab and sending him home for his picture, not knowing if we would ever see him again, because the Parisian taxi drivers give the passengers an exciting ride for their money. But Fred did make it back, just before the office closed, and we succeeded in getting the visas in one day, which was what we had hoped to be able to do.

In the afternoon Ruth and Fred had other things to do, so Bob and I set off on a walk to see some of Paris. Although it poured rain in the morning, by that time it had cleared and the sun was shining. We walked to the Arch de Triomphe, down a big boulevard to the Eiffel Tower and the Palais de Chaillot, where the United Nations are now meeting. Then we walked up the bank of the Seine to the cathedral, Notre Dame. It was a long walk, and by the time we were half way there, and I could see the towers of Notre Dame in the distance, I was so exhausted that I thought I would have to collapse in a nearby park bench. However, we plodded on and the walk was very worthwhile. We had a small map and noticed all the historical buildings on both sides of the river, and the cathedral was worth walking miles to see. It is just breath-takingly big, solid and beautiful. The stained glass windows were more beautiful than anything I had seen, and there is no way that I can describe to you the beauty of that old colored glass. The art has been lost for centuries, and I very much doubt if there is a building anywhere in the U. S. that has anything that could begin to compare with it. When the light comes through the colors are like jewels and the sunshine streams down in shafts of colored light.

We took the Metro back to the hotel and were just worn ragged from the train ride and the walk, although it happened to be the highlights of the stay in Paris. It is really true that Paris is the most beautiful city in the world, it is more beautiful than any of the cities I have seen, anyway, and it has something about it that just keeps telling you that this is Paris and different from every other place. Of course Vienna is still my favorite city, because the people in Austria are so wonderful and it is different in France. One gets the impression that the French, or the Parisians, anyway, tolerate the Americans just for the sake of the dollars, and they assume a very superior attitude. Even if they know how to speak English, many of them will not try to help, and some are almost rude. We have just been spoiled by the Austrians, who are so genuinely friendly and helpful and gracious, besides. The prices in France are another thing not in its favor, and we could have gone through our money very rapidly if we had stayed much longer. You must pay for every little service or you get disapproving looks from those concerned. And in a restaurant one must pay for the napkin, silver and china on the table.

Paris has a marvelous subway system and we spent a good deal of time underground, traveling from one place to another. The subway is called the "Metropolitan," and is easy to use, because it is so well marked and they have so many maps and guides helping you find the right direction. The trains travel very fast, and only stop for a short time — 30 seconds, I believe. Anyone who doesn't make it in that time just has to wait for the next car, or possibly gets caught in the wicked door. We had horrors of being separated while getting on or off, because there were four of us and sometimes others would squeeze in between.

The next day, on Friday, December 28, we spent almost all of our train tickets to Spain. While in the office we met a couple from Vienna who were spending a vacation there and we all had dinner together. They also were Fulbright students.

As happens so frequently here, our train left Paris at night, but it wasn't so bad as the others had been and since there were only four of us in a compartment for eight, we weren't so crowded for space. We tried to sleep as best we could, but I couldn't be very comfortable. We were to have reached the Franco-Spanish border about 8:00 a. m., but the train was about three hours late. There had been a terrible tidal wave that night in southern France and northern Spain, and the electricity was off for several hours, which meant that we didn't travel far, because it was an electric train. While we waited for the train to start moving we watched the people outside rowing around in little boats rescuing pigs, chickens and other animals that had been stranded by the sudden high water. We heard later that it was quite a disastrous flood, 16 people were killed. When we arrived at Irun, the border station, we discovered that the train for Madrid hadn't waited, so we were stranded there for six hours. When we did leave, about 5:00 in the afternoon, we bought second class tickets because that was a little more comfortable, and we had another all-night ride ahead of us. That train was very crowded and our compartment was full, but I was tired and slept well, considering the conditions. But poor Fred and Ruth nearly didn't make it. I remember waking once and they were discussing getting off at the next big town and finding a place to stay. We were all so tired and uncomfortable that we hardly knew or cared what happened next, and so sick of trains that we all swore we would never set foot on one again, although it was only a passing fancy.

It was fairly early on Sunday morning when we rolled into Madrid — about 9:00, but that is considered to be early for Spaniards, and not much was happening in the streets. Luckily the weather was beautiful and quite warm, so after we had our breakfast we couldn't resist seeing

Well Progress Slow But Steady
Drilling operations on the new 10-inch bore Kendrick well are progressing at a slow but steady pace, the extremely hard blue-black basalt rock giving way at the rate of six inches per hour.

Depth, as we go to press Wednesday, is 239 feet.

Jim Burns, drilling contractor, says not a crack, seam or pocket has been hit to date, the rock apparently being one big, solid sheet.

In last week's issue of the Gazette said that Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brown had received word from their son, Pfc. Don Brown that he and his cousin, Cpl. Leonard Weber, are now in Korea.

Town Team Wins Another

Monday evening, before a small but appreciative audience, the Kendrick Town team took the Erb Hardware into camp to the tune of 56-53 despite the best efforts of the former college star, McNair.

Kendrick took the lead in the opening seconds, and the score saw-sawed back and forth during the first stanza, never but a point or two separating the two teams. However, Kendrick was 1-point to the good at the quarter-horn, and from that point on was never headed.

The score by quarters follows:
Kendrick ..... 12 22 44 56
Erb Hardware ..... 11 19 37 53

ing some of the city in the sunshine and taking pictures. We went down to the Sunday market, called the "flea market" in English and quite famous. It was a hour looking at the things that the people had to sell in their little stands. The market stretches for a length of about five blocks or so, and there were throngs of people. There, you can buy anything at all — trinkets, screwdrivers, old pieces of rubber, scraps of material, second hand things; new clothing, clocks, nails (new and second hand), and just everything imaginable. I took some pictures so that you can see and bought a pair of castanets as a souvenir. I didn't buy many souvenirs on the trip because we had so much to carry anyway, and my suitcase was just jammed full.

Next to Paris, Madrid is the most beautiful and modern city that I have seen. We had heard all kinds of stories about how bad conditions in Spain were under Franco's dictatorship, but the man on the street looked well-fed and very well dressed, on the average, more prosperous looking than the Germans or Austrians. There were many more automobiles on the streets, and that seems to be an indication of the better conditions. The city was very clean. Most of the buildings modern and white, and there are many beautiful squares and statues, with running fountains and flowers, some of them in bloom now.

Ruth lives at a Pension in Madrid, and the Senora had rooms for all of us, so we stayed there for a day and half and completely upset that household by our constant scurry and bustle. The Spaniards really believe in the idea of doing something tomorrow instead of today, and there is no hurrying any of them, either. Two things were especially hard for us to become accustomed to, everywhere in Spain and Majorca, and they were the hours for meals and the constant haggling with taxi drivers and the necessity for bargaining for everything. The meal times just got us all mixed up. Breakfast is from 10:00 a. m. until noon; lunch from 2:00 until 4:00, and dinner between 9:00 and 10:00 p. m. And, although the cooking is good and shows quite a bit of imagination, they use strong olive oil for everything, and none of us could stand it.

Whenever we would take a taxi to go anyplace, which was quite often, because they are quite cheap, Ruth would have to argue for five minutes afterwards to get the price down to where it should have been. Some of the drivers would have charged twice as much as the meter showed and then they would have come up later with a long story about how many children they had at home to feed.

So we had a good night's sleep in Madrid, and in the morning went downtown to buy our railway tickets to Valencia. In Spain that is a terrible process and takes hours. First we went to the American Express Co., hoping that we could take care of everything there, but that wasn't possible, and they sent us to the downtown ticket office of the railway company. After standing in line there for quite a while we discovered that if we want tickets for that afternoon, we had to go to the train station. At the train station the window was closed until afternoon. Ruth was so mad that she talked a man at another window into giving us tickets and reservations just so that we would go away. It was almost noon when we finally had everything we needed to board the train at 2:45, and we had a mad rush getting back to the Pension, packing and eating lunch.

We did make it to the train and at about 9:00 p. m. we were in Valencia. At the depot we were met by hordes of hotel representatives who were trying to drum up business and just about grabbed the luggage right out of our hands. Fred had a good guide book of every country, and it had lists of recommended hotels, so we had already picked out a cheap one not far from the station. It was within walking distance, so we carted our things there, followed about half way by the horde of hotel men, waving their arms and screaming at us. Our hotel was clean, but certainly not very fancy and the food was so bad that we just about starved before we left the city. Valencia is a big orange growing center, so we practically ate nothing but oranges for a day.

Latin American Program

The "Latin American Evening" sponsored by the C. C. Y. Sunday evening in the Community church was greeted by a sizeable and appreciative audience.

The program included the following numbers: Tango, a piano solo, by Roger Jones; three songs sung in Spanish by Mrs. Ruth Hoffman, Mrs. Bob Nelson and daughter Patti; two piano solos by Mrs. Oscar Slind "Bolero" and "La Rosita," an instrumental duet by Mrs. Bob Magnuson on the accordion and Burton Sanders on the electric guitar, "La Cucaracha." They also accompanied Bernadine Glenn who sang a Spanish hymn.

Mrs. F. C. Schmidt then reviewed a chapter from "He Wears Orchids." A movie entitled "Wings To The Word" was then shown, and the evening concluded with an exhibit of Latin American articles, both of handicraft and commercial items.

The proceeds of the evening went to the fireplace fund. The young people wish to thank all for their generous support and those who loaned articles for the exhibit — a special "Thank You."

Squirrel Provides Big Part Of Nation's Yearly Game Bag

Although it is generally recognized as a prolific game species of extensive range, comparatively few people realize the truly important part the squirrel plays in the nation's game bag.

Several years ago the Remington Arms Company, Inc., conducted a survey of national wildlife resources and sportsmen's hunting preferences. The survey revealed that the squirrel ranked second only to the rabbit as the most sought-after game species in the country.

A recent analysis of "Hunters' Scorecards" returned to the office of the Mississippi Game and Fish commission placed the squirrel in an outstanding position in the hunting activities of the sportsmen of the Magnolia state. The analysis brings to light the fact that 79 percent or 150,000 of the licensed hunters in Mississippi sought squirrel during the 1950-51 hunting season. The cotton-tail rabbit and the Bob White quail practically tied for second high rank, with the rabbit nosing out the quail by the slight margin of 47.15% to 47.12%. Next in line was the lowly possum with the somewhat surprising score of 23.06%, topping the dove's rating of 21.58%.

A breakdown of the analysis in hunting activity percentage and estimated total statewide kill follows: deer 6%, 1,370; wild turkeys 1.35%, 249; quail 47.12%, 2,119,532; squirrel 79.83%, 2,418,574; rabbit 47.15%, 900,360; coon 16.2%, 208,712; possum 23.06%, 386,145; dove 21.58%, 522,876; ducks 8.97%, 182,217.

Patients On Salt-Free Diet Given Hope for Meal Variety

Patients on a monotonous salt-free diet were given the hope of adding more variety to their meals in two reports on further experiments in the recently developed exchange resin therapy. Exchange resin compounds have been administered to patients having congestive heart failure, cirrhosis of the liver, or kidney ailments which cause excessive fluids to collect in the system. The resin compounds eliminate the sodium which locks in the fluids. Because of this action, it becomes possible for the patient to take more sodium in his diet than would otherwise be possible.

In a report on resin therapy presented by Drs. Carl Voyles, Jr., and Edward S. Orgain, Duke University School of Medicine, Durham, N. C., it was concluded that, "Resin therapy is a useful adjunct to conventional therapy in the management of chronic congestive heart failure, and it can be used safely in conjunction with strict sodium restriction in patients who are followed closely. Resin therapy also makes possible the addition of sodium chloride in amounts sufficient to render the diet more palatable," the report added, and it facilitates the action of mercurial compounds that help in fluid elimination.

The second report on exchange resin therapy reviewed studies by Drs. B. L. Martz, K. G. Kohlstaedt, and O. M. Helmer, at the Lilly Clinic for Cardiovascular Research, Indianapolis.

Sleep Anywhere

One of the most energetic causes of sleep is fatigue. It is said that prisoners upon the rack have slept through sheer exhaustion while undergoing the horrors of torture. In a like manner, if one is tired enough he will be able to sleep on the floor or on any manner of uncomfortable bed, although he will not thoroughly relax. To the person who has known the luxury of sleeping on a good quality bed, though, sleeping on a worn out, sagging mattress and spring is almost as much torture as going to sleep on a prisoner's rack.

War and Peace

Development of the flame thrower, which first became a military weapon during World War II and has been used extensively by the Army in Korea, led to the peacetime perfection of a highly proficient weed killer. Tests at the Army Chemical Corps Center, at Edgewood, Maryland, proved that a thin jet of burning, jellied gasoline would kill weeds between rows of plants without harming the plants themselves.

Deciding Issue

If it had not been for the magic of the name "George Washington" the fabulous Phineas T. Barnum may have lived out his life in obscurity as a poor country storekeeper. One day, the man who was to become known as "the greatest showman on earth" heard an interesting story of a remarkable Negro woman, Joice Heth, who claimed to be 161 years old. When he went to see her, purely out of curiosity, she asserted that she had been the nurse of George Washington. Barnum became so excited upon discovery of documentary evidence to back up her claims, he decided to sell his store and exhibit the strange old woman in the east. The tour proved so successful, and stirred up so much interest, he was inspired to engage in other similar ventures. Finally, he formed the partnership with James A. Bailey out of which grew the most famous circus in America.

Juliaetta School News

The fifth and sixth grades, through arrangements of Supt. Nutting, made a trip to Kendrick last Friday, where both boys and girls played basketball games with the seventh grade. The seventh grade won, but the games were interesting, and all attending reported a fine time.

We have a few new pupils, which have made our enrollment the largest to date. Still, no rooms are overcrowded. The first grade has 28; second grade 17; third grade, 27; fourth grade, 26; fifth grade, 30; sixth grade, 20, for a total of 148.

A new class in singing has been organized with some pupils from each of the three upper grade rooms. They meet with Mr. Sower twice a week. Mrs. Gruell plays the piano for the class.

All rooms have been studying famous pictures and their artists. We have some new display pictures frames. Every three days each room has a new picture, accompanied by a study of it and a sketch of the life of the artist. By this method we hope to increase our knowledge and appreciation of art.

The first grade pupils have finished their fourth Reading book, and the second work book.

The second grade girls are having sewing once a week at the noon hour, while the boys do painting once a week. At those times special refreshments are provided by the pupils.

The third grade have been studying about Eskimos and their land. They have made pictures of polar bears and reindeers.

The fourth grade are taking up Idaho History. Many pictures are made to illustrate the study.

The fifth grade have charts showing the different classes of food, balanced diet, etc.

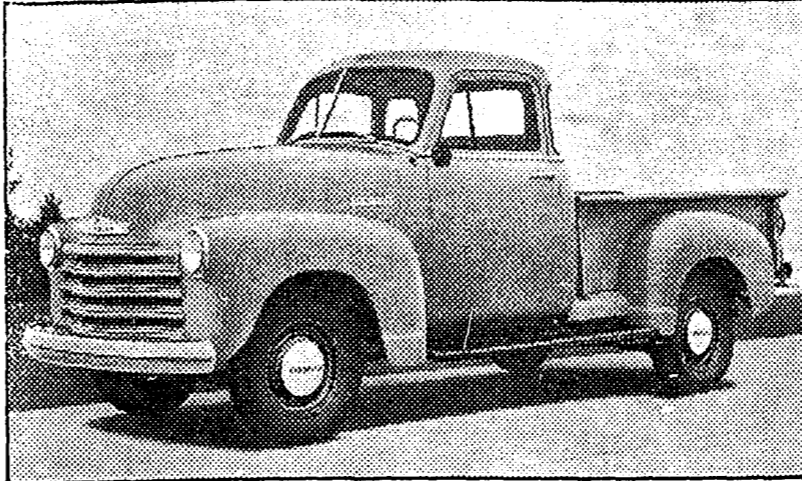

The sixth graders are having dictionary drills in English. They have just finished an interesting study of Africa in geography, and in Science are beginning the study of the universe. This grade has a nice new flag stand and staff, with a flag on display.

in public monopoly than there is in private monopoly, for when the government goes into business it can always shift its losses to the taxpayers. If it goes into the power business it can pretend to sell cheap power and then cover up its losses.

"The government never really goes into business, for it never makes ends meet. And that is the first requisite of business. It just mixes a little business with a lot of politics and no one ever gets a chance to find out what is actually going on. I feel so strongly on the government keeping out of business that if I had my way . . . all the government should have is an efficient inspection bureau."

MISS ALLENE RIDER TELLS OF CALIFORNIA STORMS

Miss Allene Rider, a former Kendrick resident, who will be remembered by many here, writes under date of January 18, from Alhambra, Calif., saying in part:

"Have you read anything in your northern papers about our rains? All this week it has rained so steadily that we have finally reached the saturation point and our ground area has turned into a mud-like jelly. The people who have hill side homes are really suffering, for almost every home on the slightest bit of a hill has either caved in, slid off its foundations or slid down the hill or canyon, foundation and all. Wish you could see all the pictures of this disaster, for it really has reached disaster proportions now! They made us go home from work early last night and thank heaven they did because it took me nearly half an hour longer than ordinarily while it was yet daylight — it was raining so hard and the streets are all flooded so that one must travel about 15 miles per hour to keep from flooding your car (cars stalled all over the place anyway trying to cross intersections where gutters would be a good-sized torrent) and if it had been dark you could see just about a car's length ahead of you.

would be no school today (Jan. 18). They called mother out of bed about 1:00 this morning to tell her not to come since all managers of cafeterias leave so early and get there so early in the morning I guess they figured they better call them first. However, she's home now waiting to be called back to school for disaster duty — all schools down here are equipped with special supplies, food, etc., apart from the regular supplies, for disaster purposes. The cafeteria managers and school principals are automatically on that committee. It finally stopped raining this morning, but there is another storm expected this week-end — and only God knows what we'll do with any more rain!

"I haven't yet read the statistics on just how many people are without homes, but I'm afraid the losses have been pretty bad. Within a few blocks of where Betty and I live a flood control channel went berserk, washed out a foundation from under a two-story building and took out a whole row of garages (about six) to some apartment houses. We went over to look at it and all that was left of the garage area was a little blacktop sticking out into space with the dirt all washed out from under it and about six feet back in. If I had stopped on my way in from work when it was pouring I probably would have seen the garages go down the stream. Can you beat it — just a

Medical School Enrollments Are Setting New Records

Medical schools of the United States in the last year took further steps to protect the future health of the nation by enrolling the largest number of students in their history.

This was revealed in the 51st annual report on medical education in the United States and Canada, compiled by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association. The report was prepared by Dr. Donald G. Anderson of Chicago, secretary of the council, and his aides, Dr. Francis R. Manlove and Mrs. Anne Tipner.

A total of 26,191 students were enrolled in 79 approved schools in the United States for the 1950-51 academic year. This compares with the previous high record of 25,103 in the year before, an increase of 1,088 (4.1%). Since 1941, when there was an enrollment of 21,379 students in 77 approved schools, the increase has been 4,812 (22.5%).

The report also disclosed that the current academic year will see a continuation of this increase in medical education because of the enrollment of a record freshman class. It is estimated that about 7,400 new students will enter medical schools, compared with the previous record of 7,182 a year ago.

Also important from a future health protection standpoint was a survey which showed plans were under way in many states for the opening of additional medical schools and for the expansion of existing facilities.

"Significant progress is being made toward resolving the financial problems of the medical schools," the report also said. "Funds available to the schools during 1951-52 will total approximately $109,600,000, which represents an increase of $36,000,000 in the last four years.

Find Clue to Mortality Among Baby Calves, Pigs

Nobody knows definitely why many newborn calves and pigs die shortly after they begin to nurse, but a theory advanced by research veterinarians is winning acceptance because it seems to be the most logical explanation yet offered.

Picture a starving man who eats food that makes him violently ill, only to die from the illness rather than from starvation, and you will have an idea of what is believed to be happening to countless pigs, and calves too, on the nation's farms. The main difference is that the newborn animals die after consuming their mother's milk—the very thing upon which they depend for life.

This is how the trouble starts: While the cow or sow is pregnant, she is attacked by a virus disease that may or may not be apparent to the owner. Her natural body forces produce substances called antibodies that fight off the infection, and at the same time some of these antibodies find their way to the unborn calf or pig.

Large amounts of them also go into the colostrum or first milk, that will nourish the youngster after birth. These disease-fighting substances have a sensitizing effect on the unborn animal. Then, after birth, when the youngster starts to consume colostrum, it gets a large dose of the antibodies and dies from shock.

Prevention of such losses is a problem now confronting veterinarians. While the colostrum from affected cows and sows is obviously harmful, it also has many properties vital to the survival and health of calves and pigs. Ordinary milk and other feedstuffs do not contain all of these essential properties, and so far satisfactory artificial foods have not been developed for practical farm use.

Veterinarians Tell Ways To Prevent Pig Scours

These five suggestions for keeping scours out of the spring pig crop are offered by swine disease authorities of the American veterinary medical association:

1. Set up a definite schedule for feeding the sow. Irregular feeding results in an uneven flow of milk that causes nursing pigs to go hungry at one feeding and then scour from overeating at the next.
2. Don't overfeed the sow. Newborn pigs often scour because the brood sow is being overfed. Give her only warm water and no solid feed the first day after farrowing, and a small amount of bran or oats the second day. After that, the ration can be increased a little each day so that she is on full feed within two weeks.
3. Feed a balanced ration. If the sow gets too much corn, her litter is almost sure to scour.
4. Keep sows away from mud holes, manure, and filth. Many cases of pig scours are traceable to filth consumed while nursing.
5. Protect pigs against sharp changes in temperature. Failure to keep pigs warm when the weather suddenly turns cold will cause outbreaks of digestive trouble.

Saws Used in Home

The saws commonly used in the home are the hacksaw and the handsaw. The hacksaw is used to cut metal and the handsaw to cut wood. There are two types of handsaws, the rip saw to cut with the grain and the crosscut to saw across the grain. All saws should be kept sharp. In starting a saw cut, the thumb of the left hand should be used to guide the blade until the cut is started at the desired location. The first stroke of the saw should be in the up direction. Sufficient pressure should be used when starting the cut so that the saw immediately begins to bite into the wood.

Warning to Cattlemen

Stock owners who use grazing land that adjoins oil lines and tanks are warned to watch out for crude oil poisoning in their herds. A bulletin from veterinary medical authorities cautions that the lines and tanks occasionally spring leaks, leaving pools of oil, and cattle may consume enough of it to be fatally poisoned. Animals on poor grazing land seem to have a special liking for crude oil, the bulletin adds. Cattlemen also are advised to keep their animals off pastures fronting recently oiled roads, particularly during rainy weather. The reason is that rain may wash enough oil onto the pasture to poison all or part of a herd.

Early Days of Indiana

Indiana territory's initial 1,000 settlers came from Kentucky, Virginia, and the Carolinas. They built their cabins in the south, along the Ohio and lower Wabash. They found the farm land rich, and when, in 1813, they moved their capital to Corydon, 20 trail miles west of Louisville, their number was 30,000. The total had jumped to 75,000 by late 1816, when statehood was won. There were a million and a half Hoosiers in Civil War days. By that time, the state's "naturals" in crops—corn, wheat, and hogs—had been found. Hominy and hogs continue to be good Hoosier fare.

flood control ditch. We don't have anything you can call rivers down here, or even creeks, so when we have these flash floods it's the flood controls they watch. One of the reasons I'm so homesick for Idaho I'd give a lot to cast my eyes on a river or good-sized lake, or even a stream of clear running water at this point. Of course I've seen plenty of those the last few days, but they were pretty muddy."

American Inventions Make For Better Living Standard

During the period prior to World War II, when Adolph Hitler was building up an arsenal of weapons with which he hoped to conquer the world, a nuclear physicist at the University of Berlin had an idea for a death-ray gun.

The only thing wrong with the idea was that the inventor intended to use the death rays to kill microorganisms that spoil food. Hitler wasn't interested.

America thrives on inventions that promote health and make for better living. It provides a Patent System as an incentive for such inventions. Dr. Arno Brasch, the nuclear physicist with the death-ray idea, and his associate, Dr. Wolfgang Huber, left Berlin for New York 12 years ago.

Food is an important item of trade, here, and financial interests backed the two physicists in developing their electronic gun to the extent of a half-million dollars. They rented an icehouse on Long Island and scrounged the area for hard-to-get parts required for their electrical apparatus. The pilot model, resembling somewhat the steel skeleton of a skyscraper, began to tower toward the third-story ceiling. Near this was a cylindrical structure, tapering in sections to the top.

Cut of this combination of transformers, insulators, and giant electronic tubes there protruded something similar to the muzzle of a gun, aimed straight down to hit the target directly underneath. A 220-volt house current was thus stepped up to shoot 3,000,000 volts.

It was five years ago that this amazing gun began its operation of shooting electron bullets into specimens of food.

Poison Deaths of Children Caused by Careless Parents

Parental carelessness plays a big part in the more than 600 deaths of children each year due to the accidental swallowing of poison, according to Dr. Jay M. Arena of Durham, N. C.

Dr. Arena is associate professor in the department of pediatrics, Duke University School of Medicine and Duke Hospital.

"Children who survive the ingestion of poison may be left with permanent disabilities," he added.

"Poisons contained in household agents are responsible for most of the deaths and disabilities. If all drugs and household agents that contain poison were made inaccessible to children, such poisonings could be almost entirely prevented."

Lye, he explained, is one of the most common causes of poisoning in childhood. During the first 18 years of the Duke Hospital, more than 136 children were treated for stricture of the esophagus caused by swallowing lye. Many of these cases were due to sodium hydroxide in washing powders, drainpipe cleaners or certain paint removers.

Among other causes of childhood poisonings listed by Dr. Arena are the following: strong acid, kerosene, iodine, strychnine, phenolphthalein, barbiturate, salicylate, aniline dye, lead, and mercury.

Farm Land Boom

Farm land prices on an over-all basis may have experienced a record rise over the last decade, but the increases varied widely as between one section of the country and another, according to figures compiled by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The boom was led by eight states, headed by Kentucky, which enjoyed increases of more than 200 per cent between the 1935-39 average of dollar farm land valuations and July of this year. More than half these states are in the South. Thirteen others, mostly in the South and Middle West, showed rises of between 150 and 200 per cent, and fourteen more between 100 and 150 per cent. The remaining thirteen showed gains of less than 100 per cent.

High Hat

The expression "to high hat" or be snobbish toward one of lower rank probably goes back before the days when the top hat became a symbol of wealth and social position. The rank of a Spanish lady in the latter days of the Roman Empire could almost be measured by the height of her head covering. The more important the lady, the higher her turban towered above her head.

Sea Food

The ocean contains enormous quantities of small plants and animals, many of them microscopic in size, which cannot swim but float with the tides and currents. These are called "plankton" and they form the principal food of various whales, as well as sharks and many other kinds of fishes. The animal plankton is said to have a nutritive value equal to the best meat, since they consist largely of protein, while the plant plankton equal rye flour. The main difficulty seems to be in harvesting. A biologist who studied the matter has said that to meet the normal food energy requirements of one person would require the animal plankton each day from a volume of ocean water equal to an area the size of a football field, and about five feet deep.

Potlatch Chief Sez

Published by the Kendrick Creamery

HELLO, THERE, FOLKS —
Well, there just isn't any doubt about it — the Groundhog saw his shadow, and according to ancient "mythology" we're in for six more weeks of winter. But regardless of whether or not you subscribe to the "groundhog theory" there is going to be quite a space of time before you can get into the fields, so why not devote it to picking up some extra income by taking better care of those cows and chickens, and selling that product to us? You'll be agreeably surprised how it piles up. Tryit, won't you?

Restless youngsters (at 3 a. m.): Mommy, tell me a story.
Mother: "Hush, dear, father will be in soon and tell us both one."

Hot roll season will soon be at hand again — and man, how good they taste, especially when dripping with pure, sweet delicious

Potlatch Chief Butter. It's made from pasteurized cream. Your assurance of purity. Always ask for it by name — don't just say "Butter," say "Potlatch Chief" Butter.

A very stout man was walking on the Board Walk at Atlantic City when he saw a weighing machine with the notice: "I speak your weight."
He put a penny in the slot and stood on the platform. The voice said: "One at a time, please!"

Yes, it may still be winter, but it is never too cold for ice cream. It's a dessert that will please old and young any day in the week. Keep at least a quart of "Potlatch Chief" brand on hand in the refrigerator all the time. You will find it mighty tasty, too, for between-the-meals snacks, for the children or yourself. The cost is low, but it is high in nutrition and satisfaction.
