Farmers Back At Field Work

Many farmers in this area have resumed field work following the rains of last Friday, Saturday and part of Sunday. Plowing is the most popular work, although some are seeding, now that there is ample moisture to assure germination.

Almost without exception, however, is the statement that "I can turn up dry dirt by putting the old plow down." So it would seem that a great deal more moisture is needed before snow falls.

Some farmers, who seeded in the dust of early fall, say that the last rains were just what was needed to germinate the wheat, and hope that warm weather will prevail for a few days more — and then snow to cover the tender shoots.

Candlelight Vandaleer Concert

U. of I., Moscow — The annual University of Idaho Vandaleer Candlelight concert, scheduled for 8:00 p. m., December 14, in Memorial gymnasium, will present more than 60 students from all over Idaho in the mixed choral group.

In past years the Vandaleers have been heard over several Northwest and national radio hookups with their Candlelight concert.

Vandaleers appearing in the December 14 performance will include Richard Coulter of Glenns Ferry, a former resident of Kendrick.

In a resort night spot, we watched a group of college boys, each trying to pick up a pert, shapely blond. She was playing the field, keeping them impartially at bay.

Helium Effect on Living Organism Reported at U.C.

Helium, argon and possibly other inert gases—gases which do not combine chemically with other elements-are far from inert in their effect on living organisms.

This is reported by Dr. S. F. Cook, professor of physiology in the University of California school for medicine. Dr. Cook has completed experi-ments in which he studied the reactions of small animals living in an artificial atmosphere consisting of oxygen and helium or of oxygen and argon.

The artificial atmosphere con-. tained the same amount of oxygen found in the normal earth's atmosphere—about 20 per cent. But nitrogen, which forms nearly all of the remaining 80 per cent of the earth's atmosphere, was removed and the inert gas substituted in this same proportion. The ordinary atmospheric pressure of sea level was maintained.

When helium was used in such an atmosphere, the physiological processes of mealworms, lizards and mice were markedly changed. Similar, but less marked, changes were observed when argon was used.

The principle effects of the two gases were retardation of growth in the animals and an increase in the metabolic rate—a stepping up of the pace of work done by the body in the living process. The research indicates that it may be useful to substitute helium for nitrogen in air used by men working in some tunnels, underwater construction projects, and some other conditions of high pres-

Hard Pad Canine Disease Gives Dog Owners Scare

A serious distemper-like infection. that leads to hardening of the foot pads and nose is being seen in. American dogs, but there is no evidence that it is a new disease or that it is becoming more prevalent.

Alarming reports from England, where the so-called hard pad condition is reported to be widespread, have made many United States dog! lovers overly fearful of the disease.

Thickening, hardening, and peeling of the foot pads and nose sometimes occur in advanced stages of distemper or distemper-like illness, but this condition always is seen in company with other symptomsnever alone.

Among theories as to the cause

(1) The canine distemper virus may undergo a change, under certain conditions, that causes it to produce symptoms that differ from those seen in typical distemper cases. "Hard pad" may be one of the symptoms so produced.

(2) In some cases, the pure disrespiratory distress, and diarrheamay be accompanied by a second virus that brings on the changes in foot pads and nose.

(3) The severe illness caused by: distemper or complicated distemper can lead to a temporary nutritional deficiency and loss of body fliuds that may account for the thickening and hardening.

Immunization with biological products is the best means of preventing distemper and the hard' pad condtion.

New Course in Science

A revolutionary approach to the teaching of science which combines all the sciences in a single course emphazing their relationship to man was described to the 118th national meeting of the American chemical society held in Chicago, by Dr. John Xan, head of the department of chemistry of Howard college, in Birmingham, Ala. Taught without a text, the course is designed to give students a broad acquaintance with the modern scientific world and an effort is made to stimulate their interest in scientific discoveries and periodicals by basing examinations mainly on knowledge acquired outside the classroom, Dr. Xan reported. Ninety to 95 per cent of students finishing the combined general science course have voted for it in preference to the conventional type of science course.

"Candling" Eggs Candling is used on practically all eggs before they reach the stores. An electric light is placed inside a box with a hole about the size of an egg, in which the egg is placed. In a darkened room, with some practice, it is possible to detect cracks, blood spots, developing germ and the size of the air cell. The latter is the most important criterion of freshness because it gets larger as moisture escapes and is replaced by air. By comparing a few eggs known to be fresh with others that are older, one may learn how to judge the size of the air cell and the age.

Changing "Hand-Me-Downs"

Giving "hand-me-downs" a new and different color via the dye-bath is one sure way of getting little sister or brother to wear them with-out resentment. Adding a hem, collar or beit will still further accentuate the "new look." Wash and thoroughly rinse all articles before dyeing, and also remove buttons. buckles and trimmings. Use color remover first, the bureau counsels, when the article is unevenly faded or spotted and when changing to a different color.

Water Supply Vital In Farm Fire Control Annual Damage Amounts To Over $100 Million

Recently a New Jersey farmer's barn was set afire by lightning, and despite the efforts of three fire dpartments from nearby villages, the barn was a complete

Two factors combined to defeat the firemen. There was a delay in notifying the fire department because the fire wasn't immediately noticed. There wasn't a good supply of water near the barn from which the pumpers could draw.

These conditions are common to most properties in rural or small town areas. If rural residents can find means to correct them, they will go a long way toward reducing the large number of "total losses" that occur on farm properties, causing damage amounting to $100,000,000 a year and taking the lives of 3,500 farm residents.

In spite of efforts on the part of county agents, farm groups, insurance men, and volunteer fire departments to encourage the building of farm ponds, there still are thousands of farms in all parts of the country with inadequate water supplies.

The easiest way to provide adequate water is to dam a brook. quate water is to dam a brook, or deepen an existing marsh or water hole near the barn. Or a farmer may be able to buildoze a suitable pond near his buildings a suitable pond near his buildings. For proper drainage, the pond should be laid out with surveying instruments.

'Sound of Corn Growing' Recorded by Professor

Probably every farmer in the United States at one time or another has heard the old saw "it's so hot you can almost hear the corn growing." Now, seven men, in-cluding three University of Wisconsin experts, have joined the ranks of believers.

They have a tape recording of what they describe as corn growing. Herbert Jacobs, telegraph and farm news editor of the Madison Capital Times, thought up the idea. With the aid of Wisconsin U. experts the experiment was conducted in a 100-acre stand of university raised corn. Recording equipment was carried 500 feet into the field. Microphones were carried deep into the corn rows. There was no wind or other noises to complicate the recording, the experimenter reported.

When the experiment was over and the recording played, Verner E. Suomi, associate professor of meteorology at the school, said, "When background noises subsided, you could hear that corn growing."

Farm experts report corn makes 80 per cent of its growth during night-time and will grow as much as two to five inches in one night.

Hinged Fence

Here is an idea a number of midwest farmers might use in their feed lots. Hinged at the bottom and held in position by chains, a section of fence is lowered to form a manger. It can be raised when not in use to become again part of the fence. Posts should be set along the length of the manger as illustrated.

Farm Land Prices Up Sharply in Nebraska

Farm land dollar values in Nebraska have increased 124 per cent since 1939, according to figures of the bureau of agricultural economics. In the west north central region of the country, of which Nebraska is a part, prices have increased 3 per cent during the four months ending in July. This despite the usual seasonal reduction in farm real estate activity and a downturn in farm products. Game Birds Getting Break

U. of I., Moscow — Game birds are getting a break in the management of the University of Idaho experimental forest.

"Our aim is to fit wildlife into good forest management program, explains Dr. K. B. Hungerford, assistant professor of wildlife management, "Then we can actually show foresters how good forestry and wildlife go together." During the past two years, nearly 300,000 board feet of salvage timber has been logged off the Flat creek unit of the 7,000 acre university experimental forest, reports Dr. Merril E. Deeters, professor of forestry. A great deal of this was blown-down and beetle infested timber. Principal objective in the salvage logging has been to clean up the forest and put it on a permanent production basis. In this salvage logging, as in all big-time operations in the woods, tractors and bulldozers leave miles of torn-up skid roads and trails. On the university forest these logging roads and trails are being revegetated just as quickly as possible -to prevent erosion and for the benefit of grouse, other wildlife, and livestock allowed in the area under limited permit.

Based on three years of ruffed grouse research, Dr. Hungerford seeds logging roads to a combination of Kentucky bluegrass and white dutch clover. Seeding is done in the first fall or spring following logging.

IDAHO POLIO CHAPTERS IN FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES

Boise - Idaho's epidemic incidence of polio plus the responsibilities imposed by "long term" hospitalization of patients stricken in former years has placed Idaho county chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile paralysis in their most serious financial difficulties in hstory, it was dsclosed this week by Joe Imhoff, charman of the Idaho State Polio Planning committee.

"The unprecedented drain on the March of Dimes funds has been inalso those assisting with the music, tensified by the unusual severity of also those assisting with the music, and serving as pallbearers. We especially want to thank the many friends who called, and for the many lovely flowers and nice things they brought the last year of his illness, to help pass the lonely hours. Again we thank you all. — Mrs. G. W. Schetzle and Family.

Nationally last year, 69.7 percent of the March of Dimes dollar went directly for patient care; 18.1 percent was expended for research and professional education, while only 4.4 percent was earmarked for administration. Other costs include: Medical department services, 2.13 percent; services to chapters, 1.6 percent; state offices, 3.5 percent, and public information and health education 0.6 percent.

New Aviary Being Occupied Dr. D. A. Christensen, a bird lover, has completed a modern "Aviary" (bird house) on his ranch just out of town. This interest in the beauteous feathered friends has become an active hobby for the whole family.

The construction of the building was done by Dr. Christensen and his sons, and his father-in-law, Mr. Snowling, and we understand his daughter did her share by painting the interior. This new housing unit measures 12x30 feet, with 14 cages on each side and an aisle down the center. Over head light streams in through windows down the center of the roof. Electric heat has been provided, and water too. Lucky are the birds who

MELLO, THERE, FOLKS -

Well, seems like there are just a few more days in which to do your Christmas Shopping — and when you come to Kendrick to do that shopping, bring in a can of cream. Its sale to us will help provide you with the necessary money for that Christmas gift list — and when you're ready to go home, pick up the can and the check. You'll find the can has been steam sterilized, and is ready to fill again. No washing, no fuss, no bother.

Teacher: "What is a 'deficit,' Johnny?'

Johnny: "That's what you've got when you haven't got as much as when you had nothing."

We understand that the Washington wags now refer to the WSB as the "Wage Stimulation Board." Rushing here — rushing there — doing Christmas shopping. But still your family likes a dessert at the close of a meal. Well, give then the quick, easy, flavorful and satisfying dessert that comes in cartons from the Kendrick Creamery — "Potlatch Chief" Ice Cream. In all the standard flavors, plus specials. Keep it on hand always during the busy holiday season.

He: "Something came into my mind just now and went away

She: "Perhaps it was lonely."

Milk is the perfect food for winter. See to it that your children have at least a quart a day each — and you yourself a pint a day — for health's sake. And be sure that milk is pure "Potlatch Chief." It's pasteurized for your protection. Bottled in either raw or homogenized form. Fill that refrigerator — today.
