Soap Holes Found Value in Disguise

Produce Magic Mud With Multiple Uses

Ever since Belle Fourche, S. D., was a rip-snorting cattle town at the end of the old Chisholm trail its residents have been damming the "soap holes" that plagued the area.

Fast-riding cowboys often took a nasty tumble in this super-slippery mud and cattle were forever getting bogged down in them.

But now, like a man discovering his hives are really a blessing, Belle Fourche has found its soap holes are one of its biggest assets.

Every one of them is filled with a magic mud called bentonite. It's an odorless, tasteless, soapy mud with a thousand uses and scientists are thinking up new ones every day.

Most of us already are using it a half dozen times a day, but almost nobody has heard of it. Men use it in shoe polish and hand cleaners. Women use it in face powder, lotions, beauty cream.

Bentonite is the most absorbent material found in nature. When moistened it swells to several times its normal size. This quality makes it useful in waterproofing housing foundations and many other industrial uses.

Bentonite also is found in many types of paint, plaster and cleaning agents. It's handy for filling holes in giant dams and for casting moulds for molten metal. Forced down thousands of feet into the earth this magic mud lubricates the drills in oil wells and sends the debris up to the drillers.

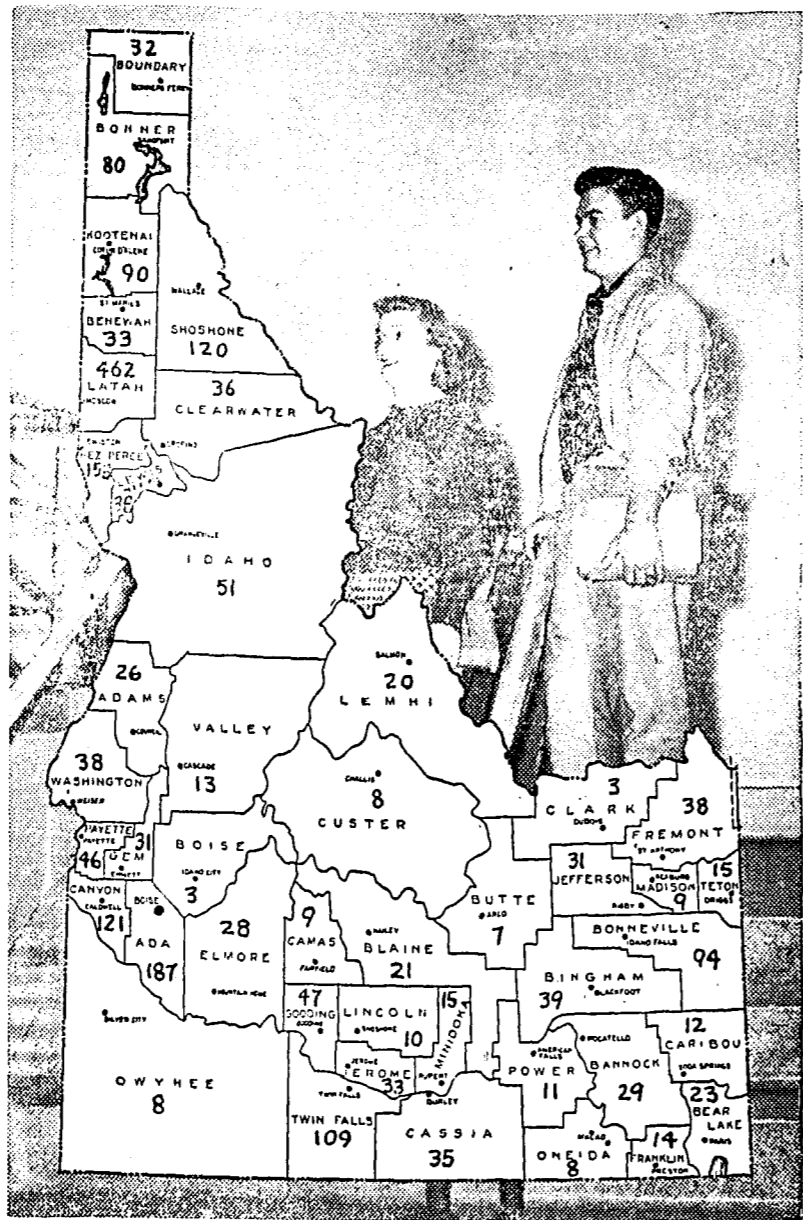

Its new uses and increasing popularity for its older uses all add up to a boom such as Belle Fourche hasn't seen since the gold rush.

In the past 10 years the population has practically doubled and bentonite now pours $600,000 a year into the town in the form of additional purchasing power.

Fifteen years ago Belle Fourche shipped out three carloads of bentonite. Last year its production was 6,187 carloads and this year they expect carloading to go considerably higher.

Scientists say that bentonite, a strange mixture made up mostly of dust from prehistoric volcanoes, is found almost nowhere in the world except in the Black Hills of Wyoming and South Dakota.

It is the most absorbent material nature ever has devised, they say, and a half dozen teaspoonful will soak up a glass of water.

For many years, the University of Idaho has drawn its students from each of the state's 44 counties. The current year is no exception, as the map indicates, with Delores Linfors, Mullan, representing the northern part of Idaho, and Terrence Hanson, of those from Latah county are married veterans from various parts of the state who have established residence in Moscow. The university this year has been dubbed the "All-American School," because all of the 48 states are also represented.

Yep! It's Really March!

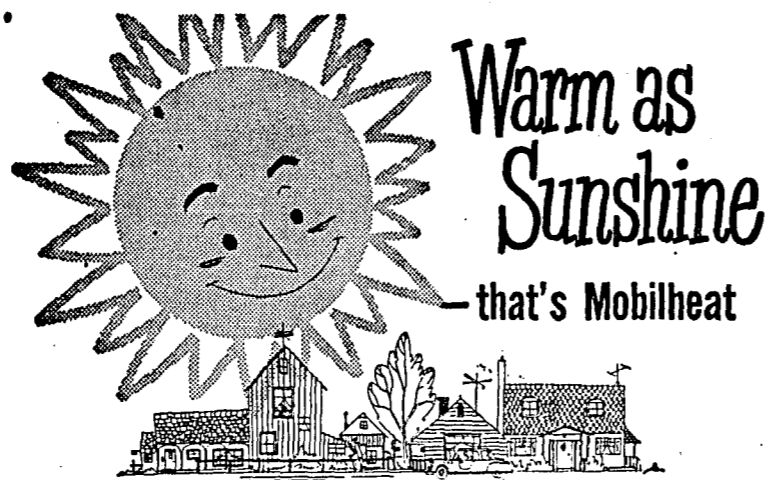

There is no other way to describe our weather of the past week than "March-like!" We have had brilliant sunshine, rain, snow, wind, sleet — and various assorted combinations of the same the past several days.

Oh, yes, we forgot to mention that the thermometer has gotten as low as 26 above — but that hasn't seemed to hurt the early flowers.

Daffodils are now coming into bloom, tulips are up several inches, and the lilac and forsythia buds are huge, in fact, some forsythia is beginning to bloom.

Lawns are a bright green, and most any day home owners can be seen out with rakes and pitchforks cleaning up their premises.

Insect Killers Made By Synthetic Means

New pyrethrum-like chemicals that kill insects have been made synthetically for the first time in the laboratories of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, it has been announced by the U. S. department of agriculture.

The chemical makeup of the synthetic materials is almost identical with that of the insect-killing principle in pyrethrum, according to the chemists.

Civil Defense Draft Hinted
Wash., D. C., Mar. 9 — Val Peterson, the new civil defense administrator, said Sunday night it may be necessary to draft men and women into civil defense work.
"I don't want to have to do it," Peterson said, "but I wouldn't hesitate to ask for a draft."
For the present, he said, an attempt will be made to get enough volunteers.

The possibility of a civil defense draft was brought up by questioners on a television show when Peterson said many millions more are needed than the four million civil defense volunteers now signed up.
In furtherance of Mr. Peterson's remarks come these from William G.

Key on "Soviet Polar Potential" as reprinted by the 25th Air Division of the Air Defense Command.
"Two new and deadly intercontinental air weapons are coming into the Soviet arsenal. Added to the existing long-range Red bomber fleet, they impose disquieting over-tones to evidence already disclosed about the present Russian capabilities for strategic attack against the United States.
The critical time stroke, which up until now has been fixed by arbitrary estimate at mid-1954, may well have swung. Defensive arrangements and strategy in the political and military arena now must weigh the fact of Russia's possession of the capability to launch sustained air operations against the North American continent with atomic and conventional weapons against which our defenses are still meager.
The two new weapons are (1) an intercontinental bomber with speeds between 550 and 650 miles per hour and a radius of action more than adequate for attack on the industrial heartland of the United States, and (2) a refined version of the long-range V-2 weapon which the Nazis had designed for eventual attack against the eastern seaboard from European bases. These are supplemented by two older model bombers in the B-50 Superfort category, available today in quantities of hundreds and now equipped with refueling devices for necessary range in round-trip trans-polar operations.
The Russians have countered the United States with the big punch of their high speed intercontinental bomber — in the general class of the B-52, and it is known to be in production. There are indications that it is operational in at least small units with the special Russian Army set under direct control of the Kremlin for attack against the United States.
* The above information was given us by Marvin Vincent, commanding officer of the Ground Observation post near Leland — and Mr. Vincent states they can use volunteers — in any number. If you are interested in giving a bit of your time to this cause, contact Mr. Vincent.

Low Cost Essential For Farm Building
Concrete Blocks Filling Farm Construction Needs

Concrete blocks are being used more and more in the construction of farm buildings, according to American Builder magazine.
They have been found very serviceable for dairy barn construction, low in first cost and in upkeep.
Attributes that contribute to concrete's value as a building material on the farm are its durability, cleanliness, and weather and insect resistant qualities. Concrete foundations, masonry unit walls, concrete floors, and precast floor joists can be utilized to construct enduring farm structures and to repair old ones.

Dairy barn of concrete blocks and with a roof of fire-resistant asphalt shingles provides an efficient structure low in cost and in upkeep.

If a dairy barn is well-constructed and insulated, body heat of the cows would keep interior temperatures at 45 to 50 degrees in almost any kind of weather.

Lightweight aggregates in monolithic concrete or in masonry units, vermiculite floors and underlayers, hollow core walls, and masonry units with granular loose-filled cores all have qualities that can contribute to the efficiency of rural buildings.

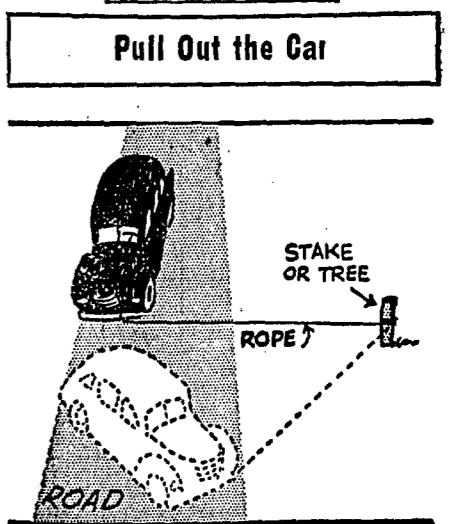

Less Than Half of U.S. Farm Homes Have Baths

Less than one-half of the nation's more than 4,000,000 farm homes have baths and only half of the rooms are heated, a study of rural housing accommodations revealed.

Excessive standardization to relieve early postwar housing shortages resulted in the building of mediocre farm homes of rectangular, box-like design with too small rooms, too little privacy and absence of adequate plumbing and heating facilities.

However, under impetus of a U.S. department of agriculture program, farm house plans have recently been developed that are expected to fulfill the fundamental requirements. The new plans call for space, equipment and storage facilities in proportion to the number of persons in the family.

Coupled with the benefits of a 10-year electrification program that has brought electricity to 75 per cent of the farm homes, this new home designing will open an untapped market for manufacturers of automatic equipment and home appliances.

Although most farmers these days live on a hard surfaced road, there may be an occasion when it would be necessary to pull a car or tractor out of a ditch. The above illustration shows how to get out of that ditch with the least amount of effort. A tow rope hitched to the front end of the car and tied to a stake or tree at right angle at the side of the road, will give you the leverage to get out of almost any place without help.

Crested-Wheatgrass Seed Production Reported Up

The 1950 production of crested-wheatgrass seed is estimated at 5,330,000 pounds of clean seed. This is 5 per cent larger than the 1949 production of 5,090,000 pounds. Larger crops than last year reported for North Dakota, South Dakota, and Montana, more than offset the smaller crops indicated for Nebraska, Colorado and Washington. The Colorado crop was near failure in 1950.

How Do You Drive?

Authorities frown on One-Arm driving.
 To many people the term "one-arm driving" means romantic distraction while driving. But there's another form of one-arm driving that is also dangerous.
 It's the too common practice of driving with the right hand alone at the wheel, while the left arm rests idly on the ledge of the open window and the left hand dangles uselessly or perhaps clutches the top of the window.
 There's no romance here — just false confidence in that right hand — or, as most often is the case, just plain laziness. Any driver should realize that he cannot control his vehicle as well with one hand as with two and that trouble can sometimes strike before there is time to get that other hand working, says the Traffic Safety division.
 The safest car is no safer than its driver makes it on the road or street. Left-handed or right-handed, one-arm driving gives safety only half a chance.

Published by the Kendrick Creamery

HELLO, THERE, FOLKS —

Well, the grass is growing greener and greener, and milk production will rise — and that's what we want to talk about.

We want to buy your cream. It takes cream to make butter, ice cream and other dairy products — so we need yours.

Bring that next can in to us. We pay spot cash, and in addition return a steam-sterilized, ready-to-use can. There is no waiting for the can or check to come back.

What could be fairer? And also remember, that no quantity is too large or none too small.

"Your advertisement said that this room had a heavenly outlook," complained the prospective tenant.

"Well, hasn't it got a skylight?" said the landlord.

Don't go through the summer without a locker box — and now's the time to come in and select yours. We have one to fit every purse and purpose — and with the new cold compressor we have just installed you can feel sure that temperatures will be maintained at just the right degree.

When Calvin Coolidge was in the Massachusetts legislature, another member, thinking to trip him up, asked whether the people where he came from said, "A hen lays, or a hen lies."

"The people where I come from," Coolidge replied, "lift her up to see!"

Milk is one of the necessities of life, for it furnishes vitamins, minerals and other body needs. Keep your refrigerator well stocked. Get your needs of pure pasteurized milk here or from the deliveryman.

And don't forget — we want to buy your cream!
