Hot Weather Seems Broken

The long, hot dry spell which this area has entertained for some weeks seems to have finally ended — a real rain falling Sunday night and early Monday morning with more falling early Tuesday morning — the first rain of any appreciable amount since June 30.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week were really "sizzlers" with the thermometer reaching a high of 100 degrees on Thursday and 102 on Friday.

Wednesday night was undoubtedly the hottest one of the year, with a reading of 77 degrees being recorded at 1:00 a. m., so despite the wind storm of that night, Thursday began as a real scorcher.

The rains of Sunday night through Tuesday effectively put an end to harvesting operations, but farmers say they arrived too late to be of much, if any, benefit to beans — and are a detriment to clover and grasses, not to mention spring grain.

However, they were a blessing to the weary fire fighters for the forests, who have been engaged in an almost continuous battle for the past three weeks, due to lightning and man-caused blazes — with far the larger percentage being caused by lightning storms.

Tree Falls Across Power Line

Wednesday evening of last week, following an unusually hot day — a strong wind arose, and near the Wm. Carlton ranch, below Juliaetta, blew a large tree across the 13,000-volt power line of the Washington Water Power Co. As the tree fell it snapped the line, which bouncing along on the ground, sent balls of fire rolling — and each ball in turn set a fire in the tinder-dry grass and brush.

Henry and George Jones of the State Forestry department were called, as was Otto Schupfer for the Washington Water Power Co.
In approximately ten minutes from the time of the break the fire was extinguished and the line repaired.

However, visiting the scene the next morning. The Joneses saw that where the power line had hit the ground, on each bounce, it left peculiar marks — so obtaining a shovel they dug where indicated — and found that the current had literally welded the soil into ball-like "china lined" sections. One of these they brought to the Gazette office, where it may be seen.

Entertain At Bridge

Mrs. Estella Leith and Mrs. John Johanson entertained at two tables of bridge Thursday afternoon of last week in the home of the former, complimenting Mrs. E. E. Sands of Seattle, who has been here visiting her sister, Mrs. W. L. McCreary.

Guests included the Mesdames W. A. Watts, E. A. Deobald, W. B. Deobald, E. H. Ramey, E. E. Sands, W. L. McCreary, Oscar Slind and daughter Maxine, and the hostesses.
Mrs. W. L. McCreary held high score and Mrs. Sands was given a guest prize.

Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the afternoon.

More Food Canned

A considerable quantity of winter food has been added to the Hot Lunch stores by the addition of berries and beans, as follows:
Black caps, 10 quarts frozen; 14½ quarts made into jelly and 8½ quarts into jam. They were donated and picked by the Dunham family, processed and made into jelly by Miss Emma Lenz, Mrs. Gerald Ingle and Marjorie Ingle, with Marjorie making the jelly.

A total of 55 pounds of string beans were donated by the Verne Dunham family. They were picked and prepared for freezing by Mrs. Dunham and Mrs. Gerald Ingle.

A Pension Or A Job?

We Americans put the absent on youth. Individually and collectively, we hate to think that our population is aging. Offices and factories "retire" employees at 65 or even 60 on the theory that their working days are over. Pensions, whether provided by the government, by private employers, or from personal savings are the best security our society offers men and women beyond "retirement age."

According to Dr. Martin Gumpert, in the Reader's Digest, this is "Inca" thinking. Dr. Gumpert recalls in an article reprinted from the N. Y. Times Magazine, that the great Inca civilization prescribed certain occupations for certain ages regardless of individual abilities. This, rightly, he implies, may have had something to do with the downfall of the Incas. He believes our arbitrary retirement policy is dangerous in two respects: it ignores present-day vital statistics, and it is medically unrealistic.

First, Dr. Gumpert points out, our present concept of retirement seems to be based on what the average life expectancy was in 1900 — about 43 years. Today life expectancy has climbed to 68 years for men and 70 for women. By 1975, the average period between retirement and death will be about ten years — or three times longer than in 1900.

The second point made by Dr. Gumpert is that the shrinking dollar makes a mockery of pension plans. None of the "security" programs can provide full maintenance under current conditions for the lengthening term of retirement.

The stark facts, writes Dr. Gumpert, are that our old people are going to have to work.

Furthermore, "our old people" are qualified to work, prefer to work, and have much invaluable experience and talent to offer.

The implication of this article is that it's time we stopped being Incas.

Steelhead Covers Many Miles

A traveling steelhead trout was finally caught this week after swimming an estimated 2,200 miles up and down the Columbia, Snake and Clearwater rivers and nudging the shores of three states.

The fish, hooked 19 miles below Bonneville Dam, was tagged by the Idaho Fish and Game department personnel at the Lewiston dam on July 21, 1951.

"This steelhead was migrating up the Clearwater to spawn when tagged," Forrest R. Hauck, fishery biologist explained, "but probably did not spawn until the spring of 1952, since the steelhead spawning season was over when it was tagged."

"After spawning," Hauck said, "the steelhead returned to the ocean was migrating upstream to spawn again in 1954, when caught."

"Steelhead usually spawn in alternate years," Hauck advised, "and, unlike salmon which die after spawning, steelhead can and often do spawn three or four times during their lifetime, most of which is spent traveling to and from spawning grounds."

Trees Die in Winter, Too, Without the Proper Care

Trees die in winter just as they do in spring and summer.

They can be killed by drought and storms, by insects and diseases, by man's indifference and neglect, says Dr. Rush P. Marshall, director of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories.

Death may not be sudden. Next spring the trees may try to leaf out, then collapse and die within a matter of weeks.

Deciduous trees which appear to "sleep" in winter must take up a certain amount of soil water to replenish that lost by evaporation under high drying winds. Evergreens and pines which do not shed their leaves need an even greater amount. Unless trees go into winter with sufficient water around their roots before the ground freezes, injury or even death by drought may result.

Wind, ice and snow storms take a toll of trees in winter, toppling them over, or breaking branches and limbs. If a tree is conditioned properly by pruning out dead and dying wood, by cabling and bracing weak crotches and limbs, storm damage can be held to a minimum.

Not all insects are dormant in winter. Bark beetles often crawl from the thick bark to the cambium layer on mild winter days and girdle a tree as they feed. Elm bark beetles that carry Dutch elm disease present double trouble. For the fungus they carry builds up in the sap stream, and even in winter there is a certain pulsating of the sap that will send the disease further into a tree.

It is just as harmful to disturb a tree's roots in the winter as in summer. Trees are frequently killed in winter by a careless bulldozer used in construction or by roots mangled when a water main is laid or a sidewalk and driveway put in. Trucks and autos that bash into trees in winter can loosen or scrape off the bark as effectively as in the summer.

Death even for trees takes no holiday. Yet your tree needn't die any time of the year if you give it proper care.

Early Iron Men Served Country in Many Fields

The brothers Curtis and Peter Grubb, owners of Pennsylvania's historic Cornwall blast furnace during the Revolutionary War, not only made cannon but also test fired them and probably used them against the enemy while serving actively as colonels in the field. In addition, they manufactured stoves and supplied the equipment to support a war emergency salt industry, doing all these things with a furnace which produced 24 tons of iron a week.

The outbreak of hostilities cut off the salt supply of the United States and seriously affected the salting of meat and curing of fish for both military and civilian use. Colonel Curtis Grubb told the Council of Safety that he was prepared to cast the iron salt pans for making salt from sea water on the Jersey coast, but asked the army to release his manager, founder, carpenter and colliers from military service so that he could do it. The men were released to him immediately.

Cannon manufacture was a necessary innovation in this country; so much so that Generals Washington and La Fayette visited Cornwall furnace to watch the casting of the first 24 cannons ordered for the Continental Army. Early guns made at Cornwall showed lack of experience, for an official letter complained that they were too heavy and costly.

Cornwall furnace was built in 1742, and for many years thereafter was called "the hub of the iron trade." The famous Cornwall iron ores have been mined continuously for more than 200 years, the longest record of operations in the country.

Seeing Babies

For the first four months of life an infant has no effective vision but sees the world as more or less of a blur. Then eyesight starts its development at an incredibly low level which an ophthalmic specialist would rate as 20/2400. This means that the baby can only see at a distance of 20 feet objects which normal mature eyes can see at 2400 feet, or nearly half a mile. By the end of the first year the child's vision has improved to 20/130, which would indicate extremely bad acuity in an adult. Not until the fifth or sixth year is a level of 20/40 attained. During all this time the child is learning not only how to see clearly, but how to see single instead of double. Some time between the sixth month and the end of the second year binocular single vision develops, whereby the separate images formed in the two eyes are fused into one in the brain.

Revealing Facts

Publication of the newest Army history book, "Washington Command Post: The Operations Division," brings to light the complicated task of the military staff that planned and directed the first world-wide military operations. The book, seventh to be published in the "U. S. Army in World War II" series, is a part of nearly 100 contemplated volumes covering all aspects of the war.

Horace Heidt Show At Moscow
 U. of I. Moscow — Horace Heidt's nationally known two-and-a-half hour stage show, "The American Way," will be presented at the university Memorial gymnasium at 8:00 p. m. Tuesday, Sept. 15, with at least two local acts added.

Auditions for local professional and non-professional performers interested in appearing on the show will be held in the ballroom of the university Student Union building at 7:00 p. m., Thursday, Sept. 10. The show at Moscow is being sponsored by the Associated Student of the U. of I.

Heidt said that it is not necessary to make an appointment for an audition. The only requirements are that all performers must be over 14, that no more than four persons may appear in an act, and performers must bring their own music and accompaniment.

If judged ready for stardom, local performers will be offered places on Heidt's Youth Opportunity network radio program, and may then be offered regular appearances with the "American Way" show as it continues its tour.

Published by the Kendrick Creamery

HELLO, THERE, FOLKS —

Well, the rain has slowed down harvesting operations, but it isn't over by any matter of means. Lots of busy days still are ahead. You, Madam Housewife, are you doing your canning the hard way, or the modern, easy way, with one of our locker boxes? If using the former, come in and let us show you these modern boxes. We have one to fit every purse and need.

After a good looking girl passed through the hotel lobby several times, a polite young man stepped up and asked: "Pardon me, Miss, are you looking for some particular person?"

"I'm satisfied," she replied, "if you are."

During this busy season don't let cream and eggs accumulate on the farm. Send or bring them in to us as often as possible. No amount too large — none too small, but the fresher both are the better.

"Johnny, who on earth gave you that black eye?"

"Nobody gave it to me, Mom; I really had to fight for it."

Going fishing a soon as harvest's over? Most everyone is — but before you go, bring in that portable ice chest and let us fill it with pure ice. It will then supply you with ice water as well as keeping those camp necessities cold. The cost too, is very little.

First Hunter: "Say, John, where are you?"

First Hunter: "Are you all right?"

John: "Yes."

First Hunter: "Then I've shot a deer!"

Sell us your cream!

Law Covers Minors Deeds

There having been considerable discussion about the attendance of children at school — and particularly of children driving cars about the streets of towns and on highways after night, Hap Moody, sheriff of Latah County, sent the following information to the Gazette:

In all districts of the State of Idaho, all parents, guardians or other persons having care of children shall cause them to be instructed in reading, writing, spelling, English, grammar, geography and arithmetic. In such districts every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of 7 and 18 years, shall send such child to a public, private or parochial school for the entire year during which the public schools are in session in such district: Provided, however, that if a reputable physician within the district shall certify in writing that the child's bodily or mental condition does not permit its attendance at school, such child shall be exempt during such period of disability from the requirements of this section.

Parents, guardians and other persons having care of children are also responsible for the acts of delinquent children. Such delinquent children — meaning any child under the age of 18 years; is habitually truant from home or schools; or wanders the streets in the night time without being on any lawful business or occupation; or so departs himself as to injure or endanger the morals, safety or health of himself or others; or who after notice that a driver's license of any such child has been suspended or revoked, knowingly permits or encourages said child to operate a motor vehicle during the period that such driver's license is suspended, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. The penalty for such misdemeanors may be a fine of $300.00 and or six months in jail — or both. —Geo. K. Moody, Sheriff.
