I am Florence Frances Alderman, the last survivor of a famly of eight, of which three are buried in your local cemetery.

My father, Emerson Everett Alderman, passed away here in Los Angeles, in 1927.

I can just remember the Printing Office on the hill across from the bank, as I was sent to Spokane to enter school in 1904. The paper didn't run long after that. My Dad had what was known in those days as "walking typhoid" and his health was too poor to continue newspaper work. We lost my mother, a sister and brother during the typhoid epidemic.

The motto of the paper, "Hew to the Line, Let the Chips Fall Where They May" was my Dad's proudest quotation, and he lived by it. So have I. His philosophy has always kept me in good standing with life. Another of his pet lines was: "Never trust a liar. If a man will lie, he will steal." I am the wife of Mike J. Reed, Yardmaster of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and am enclosing a recent snapshot of myself and grandson. Your article was of great interest to me, and we thought you might like a little elaboration on the facts.

Patching Oil On Main Street A state highway department crew with a tank of hot oil and a truckload of chip gravel was busy on Kendrick's Main street Monday afternoon, patching the somewhat wrinkled and broken surface where needed. This was particularly true from the foot of the schoolhouse hill to about the front of the Kendrick Hotel.

It is believed that this condition was caused by the application of the brakes on heavily loaded logging trucks in that two-block area, causing the oiled surface to "slide" or "roll" ahead of the wheels.

Terramycin Said Effective Against Pinworm Infection

Infection caused by the pinworm the most common and widely distributed of all human parasites, can now be successfully treated with terramycin, according to a team of 6 American doctors conducting clinical trials in Haiti.

Treating 61 cases of pinworm infection, the physicians found terramycin effective in all but two patients. Clinical trials with the widerange antibiotic drug were under-taken because, said the doctors. "the usual treatment with gentian violet often does not eradicate the infection, and not infrequently the drug must be discontinued due to toxic reactions." Several of the patients who had taken gentian violetients who had taken gentian violetients who had taken gentian violetients "considerably more toler-

Pinworm infection is found throughout the world and in all ages. Public health experts estimate it affects 35 per cent or more of the general population. In southern states 50 to 60 per cent of all: children have had it. Caused by a small white worm, its most disturbing symptom is itching. Often scratching brings about a secondary infection. Pinworm may interfere with eating and result in loss of weight and anemia. The disease usually infects the entire fam-

In their clinical report, appearing in the current issue of the medical journal, "Antibiotics and Chemotherapy," the doctors point out that successful therapy depends upon simultaneous treatment of the whole family. In this respect one of gentian violet's disad-vantages, they say, is that young children often cannot swallow the enteric-coated tablets.

Whenever possible, the medical team in Haiti examined whole families and treated them simultaneously with terramycin. Full cooperation was not always obtainable, but "despite inadequate dosage in a large number of cases," says the report, "in only 2 instances did treatment definitely fail by the fourth week after therapy was begun."

North Carolina Attacks Highway Safety Problems

A sound program to promote safety on the highways has been set in motion by the state of North Carolina. The appalling number of deaths and injuries resulting from motoring accidents in recent years has provoked this state to take action of a new and decisive

Since the first of July, applicants for driver's licenses and renewals have been required to have their eyesight tested on a complex instrument which measures 12 visual skills, including muscular balance, acuity at near and far distances. Remember we vacuum the inside of and depth perception. The instrument makes it impossible for drivers with poor vision to slip by, by memorizing the letters that they must read — a trick sometimes played with conventional charts. Those who fail the tests are advised to consult an eyesight specialist, and many of them will undoubtedly be enabled to pass by professional eye-care.

> Good vision has long been recognized as a major factor in accident prevention, and thousands of hours have been spent in attempts to establish proper standards for motorists. But the results were always inconclusive, because too much of the element of personal opinion was involved. Under the new system, however, definite statistics on 1.300.-000 drivers will be obtained by next July 1, and it will be possible to judge accurately which visual errors contribute most to accidents and which visual skills are most essential to highway safety.

A Comet's Weight

What is the weight of a comet? Weight is a measurement of the attraction of the Earth for a body on or near its surface, and as a comet moves far out in space, and is subjected to a varying attraction from the Earth and other planets, one should not speak of its "weight." Its mass, which is a measure of the amount of matter it contains, can only be determined roughly. It has been estimated that with Halley's comet the nucleus which contains most of the material, has a mass of about a two-hundred-millionth of the Earth's mass. This would be about thirty million million tons. It has also been determined that the particles of which Halley's comet is made could not be held together by the gravitational attraction of a mass smaller than one twenty-fifth of the above figure. Most comets, however, are much smaller than Halley's, and have considerably smaller mass.

Schedule 1s Wise

A regular painting schedule actually simplifies property protection. One wise farmer does a fourth of his buildings each year. In that way, each gets its necessary coat of protection every four years without fail, and each year's painting project can be fitted in as other outdoor work permits. While city dwellers do not have as many structures to safeguard, they are wise to look on painting as property-value insurance and to follow

Pleased With Jury Verdicts Boise (Special) —The state highway department expresses "complete satisfaction" with the verdicts handed down by the juries in two recent condemnation trials in Lewiston for highway right of way. A department spokesman said that Dunclick, Inc., a concrete block company in Lewiston, was awarded $19,-500 for a strip of land needed by the re-routing and widening of the new highway. "The block company had highway. "The block company had requested $117,000 for the six-tenths of an acre that we needed," the spokesman said. "Our right of way department offered to give 21/2 acres which we owned immediately adjoining the concrete block company's property. We had offered to grade, gravel, fence the property and move their stock onto this area in exchange for the less than one acre. Cost of our property and the improvements were estimated to amount to about $16,000."

It was also pointed out by the deparetment that a "favorable settlement" was secured in the second trial. The department endeavored to negotiate for two acres at the Stables night club east of Lewiston. "In this case we were offering $3,000 and the owners of the night club were asking $17,000," the department spokesman said. The jury awarded the firm

"In both cases we felt that the demands of the property owners were excessive and would be an inequitable charge against our highway user funds," it was said. "We felt justified in going before a jury to determine whether we were in the right." The state highway department was represented by assistant attorneys general Allan Shepard and Robert Hodge.

Many Students Employed U. of I. — The old salesman's story college" is no joke at the University of Idaho, where a high percentage of students are engaged in some form of part-time employment to assist them in obtaining their university education.

According to figures compiled during second semester registration 33 percent of the university's full-time undergraduate students have some type of a part-time job. Using these statistics as a guide, Charles O. Decker, acting director of student affairs, estimated today that 50 per cent of the total student body have some form of employment on the campus or in the city of Moscow.

Decker based his total estimates on several types of employment that furnish income for students but which are not classified as part-time jobs. These include:

(1) An estimated 175 students who live in cooperative dormitories sharing the work therein and thereby reducing their own cost of living.

(2) An estimated 30 graduate students who hold fellowships or teaching assistantships which pay stipends of $120 a month.

(3) Almost 300 junior and senior men participating in the various advanced ROTC programs who receive $27.00 per month.

(4) A large number of student wives who hold either full or parttime jobs on the campus or in downtown Moscow.
