It's A Job For The "Pro"

Although "Do-It-Yourself" projects furnish a great deal of recreation and save countless thousands of dollars for millions of homemakers, technical wiring is one job the home handyman should not tackle, unless under competent supervision.

It is estimated that over 34 million homes in this country are inadequately wired — a tempting situation for amateur electricians. This is particularly true in rural areas, where the absence of inspection and the shortage of electrical workers makes it only natural to attempt to do the job yourself.

As the distribution panel — the place where the wires come into the house — is usually too complicated to tamper with, home work generally consists of installing new circuits and convenience outlets. Even if these circuits are properly installed, they invariably result in an extra current load being put on an already skimpy source. House lights get dimmer, the refrigerator motor slows down, the electric coffee pot takes longer to make coffee, and fuses blow or circuit breakers trip.

These are the typical symptoms of inadequate wiring, so common that most people think they are inevitable. They can't be eliminated by a few makeshift additions to present wiring systems. Larger wire is essential, both in branch circuits as well as in the main conductors and wires leading into the electrical service entrance. The distribution panel must be big enough to allow for as many as 15 to 20 circuits in a medium-sized house, all designed for the particular load they have to carry. Electrical contractors say the house have an overall electrical capacity of at least 100 amperes, which will provide up to 24,000 watts of usable electricity. This is not the electrical formula for a dream house, but the minimum current supply needed for today's living. Here's a sample: The automatic washer and dryer, the hot water tank, refrigerator, deep freeze, furnace (stoker and blower), iron or ironer, radio, TV, floor lamps, ceiling lamps, clocks, vacuum cleaner — and the list could go on and on.

The planning of such a system, at least, is pretty obviously a job for the expert. So, if you must do it yourself, have a competent electrician lay out the entire plan for you.

Pheasants Planted in Area

Four hundred Chinese pheasants were released in the Burnt Ridge and Little Bear Ridge areas this week, according to Hale Ebling, local State Game Conservation Officer. The year-old birds included 360 hens and 40 roosters and came from the Nez Perce County Game Farm at Lapwal.

Dalmatian Toadflax

Dalmatian Toadflax is a relatively new weed in Idaho, Latah, Kootenai and Boundary counties. This plant is a potential hazard to all North Idaho ranges. It may also cause trouble on cultivated land, according to Bill Mason, Nezperce county weed man.

An exhibit of this plant, now in bloom, is on display at the local Soil Conservation office for inspection by anyone who is interested in seeing this new weed.

1956 Allotment Notices Mailed

The 1956 wheat allotment notices were mailed to all wheat farm operators in Latah County May 31st. The allotments will be in effect for the 1956 wheat crop and farmers harvesting wheat in 1956 will be entitled to price support if they do not exceed their acreage allotments. Wheat producers having an interest in a crop of more than 15 acres of wheat for 1956 harvest will be eligible to vote at a marketing quota referendum on June 25, 1955.

An individual, partnership or other legal entity who either as landlord or tenant has a share of the wheat crop produced on a farm which will have more than 15 acres of wheat for harvest in 1956 will be eligible to vote. Wives of eligible voters will also be eligible to vote.

If the vote is "yes" for marketing quotas the support price for wheat in 1956 will be established somewhere between 75% and 90% of parity to those farms which harvest within their wheat allotments.

For farms on which the wheat is in excess of the farm allotment there will be assessed against all wheat in excess of the allotment or 15 acres whichever is larger.

If the vote is "no" the support price to those who harvest within their allotment will be 50% of parity and there will be no support nor parity if the allotment is exceeded.

A year ago there were only one half as many votes cast at the referendum for the 1955 wheat crop as were cast the year previously for the 1954 wheat crop.

It is the duty of every eligible wheat producer to vote, in as much as the outcome as evidenced by the total national vote will determine what the support price will be to all complying wheat producers in the nation.

Milk House Meets Several Needs One-Room Unit Easy To Build, Cost Low

Higher standards usually bring about better products, for which the consumer is willing to pay a better price. A case in point is the modern milk house, which helps the dairy farmer produce a Grade A product for the best available price.

A properly designed and constructed milk house with cooling tank performs several important functions for the farmer. It supplies a place in which milk can be handled without contamination or absorption of odors. Multiplication of bacteria is discouraged. There are efficient facilities for cleaning equipment and a sanitary storage place for buckets, milking equipment, strainers and other utensils.

Milk house such as the one shown above can be economically and easily constructed, will serve many uses. House shown is 12 x 12, plans for which are made available by manufacturer.

The one-room milk house shown in the accompanying sketch meets these basic requirements. It is of simple frame construction on a concrete foundation. Outside walls are Masonite 3/4" Presdwood and the inside lining is of the same material, 3/16-inch thick. Cut to size, the panels go on rapidly and hold paint well.

White paint is used inside, making a sparkling, easily cleaned interior which can be hosed down. The walls and ceiling are insulated.

An efficient, but inexpensive milk house like the one shown (12x12 foot) can be constructed from plans made available by most local dealers. The farmer unsuccessfully trying to produce Grade

A milk with inadequate facilities would be wise to investigate.

Animal Medicine Made Progress Last Year

America now has nearly 17,000 veterinarians, 65 per cent in private practice and 17 per cent in government service, including military, according to a report by the AVMA.

The association reported continued forward strides in animal medicine during the past year, including:

Use of hormone drugs, ACTH or cortisone to treat common intoxication of dairy cows, due to faulty metabolism.

A continued effort was made against rabies . . . and increased attention was focused on rabies among wild animals. In one group of seven central states 226 cases of rabies were among skunks, 56 among other wild animals, 141 cattle, 87 cats and 88 dogs.

Re-inoculation of a cow's paunch by transferring part of the "cud" from a healthy cow.

A fatal neurosis of sheep, known as "scrapie" continued to spread, entering three more states during the year.

In combating hog cholera, only 36 per cent as much virulent virus was used in the last year as in the past.

The swine malady, vesicular exanthema, seems to have been eradicated from all but six states, California, New Jersey, New York and 3 New England states. Garbage cooking has helped combat this, as well as combating hog cholera and trichinosis.

Poor Oyster Has More Than Share Of Natural Enemies

The oyster, despite its sedentary habits, leads a perilous life, from spawning to harvest.

When the "r" month rolls around, the mollusks are again in season and may be found in stews, scalloped, pan-fried and fried dishes everywhere. Those consumed by humans, however, represent only a tiny minority of the enormous potential supply, says the National Geographic Society.

Natural enemies garble up the larvae as they swim about for a brief period of freedom before attaching themselves to some solid object at the bottom of a bay or estuary. After the "setting," predators get to the soft body even behind its armor of shell.

The oyster drill, a small snail, bores through the hard outer covering. Drummfish, skates and other rays crush the shells between grinding teeth. Conchs chip away at the oyster's bill (opposite the hinge) to make an entrance. Starfish pry the shells apart with arms equipped with suctionlike cups, then turn their digestive mechanism inside out to absorb the flesh.

Muscles may starve a whole oyster colony by growing over it and cutting off the food supply—the microscopic plant and animal organisms that the oyster filters from the many gallons of sea water it pumps in and out of its shell each day.

Sharp temperature change may also kill the bivalves. Too much or too little salt in the water is a hazard. So is a soft mud bed in which oysters may smother. Polluted water may infect them or retard growth.

Naturalists have always found the oyster interesting. Some varieties, they say, change sex in mid stream of life.

Treat Eye Defects Early, Report Says

MINNEAPOLIS—Unless certain common eye defects are treated before children reach school age, the damage to their sight is likely to be permanent, says a national life insurance company report which recommends a thorough eye examination for every child by age three or three and a half.

If a child's eyes are even slightly crossed, or if one eye deviates outward, upward, or downward, normal vision frequently fails to develop in the "off" eye; the same thing often happens if one eye is more nearsighted or more farsighted than the other, says the report.

The worst handicap to a child's future chances, it adds, is the well-meaning friend or relative who tells the parents, "Wait a while. He may outgrow it."

Children simply do not outgrow crossed eyes or definite refractive impairments. And if treatment is delayed, permanent damage to the sight commonly results—the weaker eye fails to develop normally unless it is put on the right track by the time the child is five or six years old.

Crossing or other deviation sometimes do not show when the child looks straight ahead, but only when looking up, down, or to the side. Treatment of crossed eyes should begin as soon as detected. Glasses, exercises and alternate covering patches, if used in time under competent direction, will correct many cases without surgery.

Shortstop Stops Game By Taking Short Walk

PARIS, Kentucky—All kinds of excitement broke out when the LaGrange Reformatory baseball team shortstop took a walk—one that wasn't indicated by the game umpire.

His team had taken to the field when it was noticed he wasn't at his position. Somebody saw him running away. The entire team, including players sitting on the bench lit out after him—28 of them.

The convicts swarmed all over Paris looking for the shortstop. One other player got lost, stopped at a grocery store and was told how to get back to the ball park. Eventually the team gave up the search and went back to the prison.

The police didn't give up, later found the missing player, who had donned ordinary clothing. He was returned to prison, no doubt with a mighty error chalked up against him.

In the excitement, nobody remembered to report the score of the interrupted game—or the opponent.

But, He Made It! FORT WORTH, Tex.—Dr. John Nesslerode, an interne at City-County Hospital, was to pick up his wife, a nurse at the same hospital, when she got off duty.

But Nesslerode, who got off earlier, arrived at the hospital in an ambulance. En route to pick up his wife, Nesslerode's car collided with a truck and he suffered a hip fracture.

Crimean War History Told
The Crimean War, 101 years ago, though it saw such gallant action as the "Charge of the Light Brigade," was the most "casual and offhand" war in history, writes Cecil Woodham Smith in the Reader's Digest. Large numbers of tourists, witnessing the war for the fun of the thing, as people go to a big sporting event, became an accepted part of army life. Often they visited the front lines, making presents of food and brandy to the men in the trenches.

Many German Descendants
Just before the American Revolution, German immigrants and their descendants in the colonies numbered more than 300,000 — ten percent of the colonial population. More than 1,500,000 Germans reached here before the Civil War. Another four million have settled among us since. Today, writes Albert Q. Maisel in the current Reader's Digest, at least one of every six Americans can trace his ancestry to German-speaking immigrants.

Hunger Fighters
When we speak of mass production, we automatically think of industry. Few of us connect it with agriculture as well. Yet, as an eastern bank points out, "recent developments in farm machinery have been so rapid that the farmer has outstripped other segments of our economy in mass production methods."

The farmer now has available combines capable of harvesting 30 acres of wheat a day; mechanical corn pickers that can harvest two acres in an hour; cotton pickers that do the work of 40 men, and all manner of other machines and appliances that do the work of agriculture swiftly, efficiently and economically, and with a minimum of human sweat. And modern equipment does more than just handle the crops. It makes it possible for the farmer to conserve the land for future generations.

We have over 30 million more mouths to feed than in 1940. We eat better than ever. Yet, in those 15 years, some 2,500,000 farm workers have left the farms and entered industry. The machine, by bringing mass production to agriculture, made that possible.

Moreover, American farm equipment doesn't stay home. Since 1946 we have exported $2 billion worth of it. The eastern bank says: "Abroad, American farm machines are known as 'hunger fighters.' They are helping to solve the grave food problem that has plagued most of the world since history began."

Good Friend To The Farmer
"With the exception of butter and lard, products of livestock have enjoyed a growing position in the diets of American consumers," states H. F. Breimyer, U. S. department of agriculture economist. "As their incomes have risen, consumers have materially increased their demand for these products."

Moreover, when meat prices are judged by the accurate barometer of earning power, we get better value for our meat dollar than ever before. The work time required to purchase a pound of meat is the lowest on record. It took the average factory worker only 20.8 minutes to earn enough money to buy that pound of meat in 1954, as compared with 30.8 minutes in the depression year of 1931. And this year the situation has shown still further improvement from the consumer point of view, as earning have increased and prices have declined.

At the same time, meat has been a good friend to the farmer. Livestock and livestock products have displaced field crops in many areas as the foremost source of agricultural income. The biggest and most consistent increases have come from cattle and calves. Where, in their early 1920's, these animals accounted for 11 to 12 percent of farm income, the average has been 19 percent in the last four years. This is a significant development — particularly in the light of the fact that the basic field crops are supported by the government, while livestock is not. In the long run, the free market best serves the legitimate interests of all.

Motion Picture Available
A colorful motion picture containing seldom-photographed views of the rugged Snake river below Hells Canyon will be ready for general showing in May, V. S. Casebolt, Palouse division manager for the Washington Water Power Co., announced this week.

He said the new 16-mm color and sound movie, titled "The River That Wants to Work," will feature the activities of Pacific Northwest Power company, now studying the feasibility of constructing major hydroelectric dam sites at Mountain Sheep and Pleasant Valley on the middle Snake, between Idaho and Oregon.

The regional generating firm — composed of Pacific Power & Light, Montana Power Company, Portland General Electric and the Washington Water Power companies — expects to develop over 1,000,000 kilowatts of new power from the Snake river sites. It is carrying on exploratory work under F. P. C. preliminary permit.

"Spectacular boat trips through the treacherous rapids of the Snake river as veteran river pilots ferry in men and equipment for diamond drill operations make unusually interesting sequences in the new film," Casebolt said.

"Bulldozers are shown gouging new trails in North America's deepest river gorge, and motorized supply caravans are seen rolling in from the Idaho side of the river at Pittsburg Landing, and from the Oregon side to Dug Bar above the Imnaha river," he added. "Some of the filming had to be done under severe winter storm conditions."

Casebolt said Kinsey M. Robinson, president of Washington Water Power Company, would appear in the film to discuss area power needs and the role Pacific Northwest Power company is taking to help provide new kilowatts for the Northwest.

Casebolt expects to make general showings of "The River That Wants to Work" for local audiences. Future bookings may be made through local Washington Water Power offices.

Never Take Chances
"Smart bicycle riders don't take chances." This was the tip given to Idaho cyclists this week by Harold Davis, Idaho traffic safety director, as he commented on the dangers of riding carelessly in traffic.

It must be remembered that under the Motor Vehicle Laws of Idaho, a bicycle shall be deemed a vehicle. It is the wise and safe rider who knows and remembers his rules for safe bicycling, which are:

1. Observe all traffic regulations—red and green lights and stop signs.
2. Keep to the right. Ride in single file and a safe distance behind all vehicles.
3. Have white light on front and reflector danger light on the rear.
4. Give pedestrians the right of way. Avoid sidewalks. Never ride on them.
5. Look out for cars pulling out into traffic. Keep a sharp look-out for sudden opening of auto doors.
6. Never stunt, race in traffic or hitch on other vehicles.
7. Never carry other riders — or packages that will obstruct vision.
8. Be sure your brakes are good.
9. Slow down at all intersections.
10. Always use proper hand signals.
11. Don't weave in and out of traffic.
12. Remember, a bicycle is a vehicle, when you ride keep to the right, travel with the traffic. When you walk, stay on the left side of the road facing oncoming traffic.

PASCO MAYOR SAYS PUD NOT CARRYING ITS FULL TAX LOAD
Franklin County PUD is not carrying its share of the county power bill, not even a mill." Custer said the PUD pays $40,000 in taxes a year—the same amount Pacific Power and Light Company was paying in Franklin County 10 years ago when the PUD took it over.

"A few days later (after learning how much taxes the PUD wonder just how cheap it is paid) I learned the PUD has made capital improvements of two million dollars. I went to the court house and found they have a mortgage of $3,017,000. "So just how cheap is that federal power? It needs closer scrutiny."

THE Bull itin

Published Weekly by the Union Oil Service at Kendrick
W. L. "Bill" Rogers, Editor

HELLO, FOLKS:

Need Tires? How about letting us figure with you on a set of those wonderful U. S. Royals or U. S. Royal Masters? They're the "ne-plus-ultra" in rubber.

Hostess (whose dog has been climbing all over guest) "Our dog is just like one of the family."
Disgusted guest: "Which one?"

Golfer: "The traps on this course are very annoying."
Second Golfer (trying to putt): "Yes, will you please close yours?"

An American was seated opposite a nice old lady in the compartment of an English railway car. For several minutes, he chewed his gum in silence. Then the old lady leaned forward.
"It's nice of you to try to make conversation," she said, "but I must tell you that I'm terribly deaf."

A little boy, caught in mischief, was asked by his mother: "How do you expect to get into heaven?"

He thought a minute, and then said: "Well, I'll run in and out, and in and out, and keep slamming the door till they say, 'For goodness sake, come in or stay out.' Then I'll go in."

Hotel Clerk: "We have only one room with a bath but it's taken. Would you mind sharing it with a man?"

Lady: "Not as long as he stays at his end of the tub."

Let us wash and grease your car and wax it before summer comes!
