Glorious Fall Weather

This section has enjoyed the most glorious Indian Summer weather the past week (until Tuesday) that anyone could imagine. The days have been bright and sunny, and warm enough that a coat was not needed during mid-day, although white frost was common at night.

The canyon and hillsides have been truly beautiful, with the bright red of schumac and the brilliant yellow of poplar and willow contrasting against the green of conifers and grass.

In some areas combines were operating, gathering in the final remnants of the crop.

INTERNATIONAL FARM YOUTH HERE IN STUDENT EXCHANGE

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Slind and son Leland of Big Bear ridge will this week enjoy an adventure in furthering good international relations by sharing in the International Farm Youth Exchange, sponsored by the National 4-H Club Foundation of Silver Spring, Maryland.

Milton Duran R. is a tall, slender Exchange student arrived here Tuesday, and will spend a week in the Slind home as a member of the family.

In this close relationship he will be able to learn much of our way of life. Not only will he observe farm practices, but in this week he will get a feeling of warm hospitality, and see for himself what goes on inside one of our average American farm homes in their everyday life.

The plan asks that the host family take their International guest to as many community gatherings as possible, that he may observe community life in all its phases. But in no instance is he to be called on to talk.

Milton Duran R. is a dark skinned young man, with slow spoken English, and a warm smile, is 23 years old and a Junior in college. He is enroute from Washington, D. C., having arrived in the U. S. in May, and first visited farm families in Michigan, before coming here. He is an active 4-H worker in his own land and seems very interested and eager to learn of American ways.

His expenses while here are all taken care of by the state, with the exception of spending money, which is a gift from each family he visits.

The county 4-H officials select the homes in which the students are placed, and one of the requisites is that there shall be a boy 4-H worker in the home.

Also, to insure delivery of International foreign parcel post packages should be mailed to: South and Central America, not later than Nov. 10; Europe, Nov. 10; Africa, Nov. 1; Near East, Nov. 1. The Far East final date was Oct. 15, but a package mailed now might possibly arrive at its destination by Christmas.

SHORT NEWS ITEMS FROM OUR LOCAL SCHOOLHOUSE

Senior Ball Enjoyed

The annual Senior Ball was held at the gym. last Saturday evening, Oct. 22, with the theme "Stormy Weather," being carried out in decorations — which proved very effective.

Overhead a false ceiling was created with black and silver crepe paper. On the stage curtain appeared the words "Stormy Weather" in black and silver, with a huge silver lightning bolt.

In one corner was a "hower of rest" with lawn chairs and little tables — and on the floor beautiful fall leaves carried out the illusion.

There was a very good crowd present. The music was excellent, and the floor in top condition. All-in-all, it can be classed as a most successful dance.

Patrons and patronesses were Mr. and Mrs. Marion Rowden, Mr. and Mrs. George Merrick and Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Draper.

Senior Aptitude Tests

Mr. Lauder milk, representing the Idaho Employment Service in Lewiston on Wednesday, Oct. 12. The tests are to determine what job the individual is capable of handling. This way, if they do not know what they are best qualified to do, they have the opportunity to obtain this information.

Tournament Dates Set

The Valley Sub-District Basketball Tournament will be held at the Lapwai High school gym, on Feb. 17, 18, 23, 24 and 25, usually playing two games a night. The "B" squads will play on the nights on which only one game is scheduled.

Kendrick drew the "bye" this year, not playing until the second night of the tournament. This is the first time in many years that Kendrick has not had to play the first night. They will play the winner of game No. 1.

The two winners of the Valley will move on to Lewiston to participate in the District Tournament. The state tournament will also be held at Lewiston. There will not be a regional tournament this year.

The trophies will go to first and second place winners and the third team will receive a basketball.

The coaches of the five Valley teams will meet not later than Jan. 14, to select the tournament officials.

The Music Department is progressing as well as could be expected under the present circumstances. We are thankful to Mr. Stetslun for taking his time to give music instruction in our school.

Jackson drove three yards to cap a 55-yard push in the second quarter, then ran the extra point. Squires passed to halfback Norm Bisbee for 22 yards in the third period, and Jackson added the conversion on another line buck.

In the final quarter Squires passed for two touchdowns, 23 yards to end Bill Cochran, and 22 yards to Bisbee. Cochran stepped 36 yards after intercepting a Kendrick pass and scored when Squires set him free with a double block.

Much Summer Food Available

Big summer crops of many kinds bring a wide choice of food at reasonable prices to September markets, according to reports received by Mrs. Elizabeth Rettig, county home agent, from the department of agriculture. The list of plentiful includes beef, pork and young chickens as choices for the main dish. Throughout the country beef is abundant in a variety of cuts and grades with the "good" grade particularly prominent. Pork is plentiful because the spring pig crop was larger than it was last year. Broiler and fryer chickens continue in good supply. Keeping company with these meats are large supplies of potatoes. There is also a big crop of rice. Milk and milk products continue abundant, offering fine choices for school lunches and after-school snacks. Fresh fruits include Italian prunes, grapes, mostly Tokay, Thompson seedless and blue Concord.

Attitude of Farm Youth Is Sampled

No, On Drinking; Yes On Attending Church

What are some of the social attitudes of America's young farmers? A poll conducted by rural sociologists at the Pennsylvania University shows they frown on social drinking and advocate regular church attendance, among other things.

The poll, which sampled 2,807 sophomore boys and girls in 74

A sampling of opinion among rural youth in Pennsylvania indicates that our young farmers believe that regular church attendance is a requirement for those who would be community leaders.

different rural high schools, revealed that:

1. Drinking of alcoholic beverages was disapproved by 76 per cent.
2. Regular church attendance was advocated by 62 per cent who felt it a requirement "in order to be a community leader." A total of 49 per cent disapproved Sabbath labor.
3. On Sunday movies, 40 per cent approved, 39 per cent objected, 21 per cent remained undecided.
4. Card playing was approved by 45 per cent, "loafing up town" was approved by 55 per cent, dancing won approval of 87 per cent, and 54 per cent approved the use of tobacco.
5. Divorces in cases where a couple can no longer remain happily married were approved by 56 per cent.
6. Makeup for girls won approval of 63 per cent.
7. High school students should be allowed to spend their money as they see fit, according to 56 per cent.

Research on Fertilizer Carryover Reported

Every farmer who pays off a fertilizer bill naturally wonders just how much of this year's fertilizer will carry over into next year's fields.

It's been a guessing game until recently. Now, agronomists at Iowa State College have conducted research to determine the amount of carryover and have come up with some figures which make fertilizer savings possible.

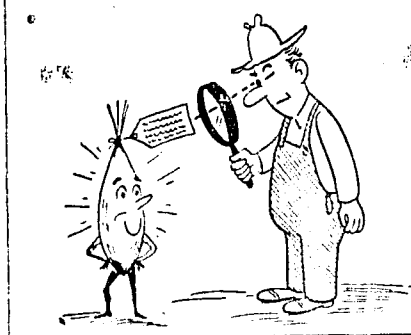

Nitrogen carryover, the Iowans have found, amounts to 25 per cent on the average. It may go higher following a dry year, or it may be less after a good crop or in sandy soils.

Phosphorus generally has a higher carryover than either nitrogen or potash. The rule-of-thumb figure given by researchers is about 40 per cent phosphorus carryover where 40 pounds of soluble phosphorus is applied, or as high as 60 per cent when 80 pounds or more is applied.

Many farmers apply phosphorus to small grains with the expectation that it will carry over at least the first hay year. Researchers found this a sound idea. Where phosphorus is applied to corn, the corn is followed with small grains and legumes, there will be some carryover and though probably not enough for maximum legume yields.

Potash will usually last two years at average application rates.

Bargain Seed

Buying "bargain" seeds is a practice that often pays off in poor stands and low harvest yields. Even a high price does not always assure quality, either. The safest bet is to always buy certified seed—even though it may cost more.

Pasture Top Feed For All Cattle

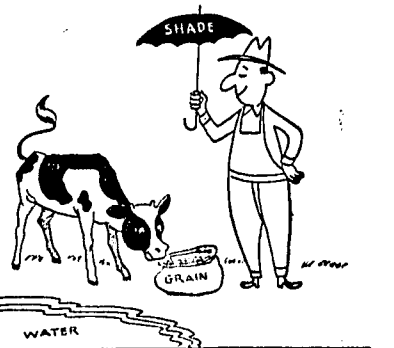

But Young Calves Need Extra Roughage

Pasture is an excellent feed for cattle of all ages—but very young calves cannot eat enough of it to meet their requirements for rapid growth.

Yearling heifers can make satisfactory growth on good pasture and will need little or no supplementary feed except access to salt and minerals. But heifers under a year of age will need some grain, and very young calves will need extra roughage.

J. D. Burke, extension dairy specialist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture says it generally is best to keep calves born after January 1 in the barn on a full feed of good-quality hay and 4 to 5 pounds of grain.

You can let the calves run on pasture near the barn, Burke says, but they should be free to return to the barn when weather or insects begin to bother them. You can shift heifers to pasture gradually after they are six months old.

Very young calves need extra roughage and grain, access to shade in hot weather if they are to grow rapidly.

Heifers of all ages need free access to salt, a mineral mixture and plenty of water and shade. Short or scant pastures will require supplementary feeding of roughage and grain.

You must keep your heifers growing at a normal rate if they are to reach full size by the time they are two-year-olds. Too often farmers tend to overlook this point during the pasture season.

For normal growth, Holstein heifers must make an average daily gain of 1.5 pounds, Brown Swiss 1.4, Ayrshires 1.3, Guernseys 1.25, and Jerseys 1.1.

Ten Commandments for Premium Quality Wheat

Grain harvesting and home storage methods often make the difference between little or no profit and good returns.

T. R. Robb, Wyoming extension entomologist, lists the wheat farmers ten commandments for higher yields of premium quality wheat—harvested and sold:

Let grain ripen before combining.

Don't combine too early in the morning, too late in the evening, or too soon after a shower or rain.

Plan ahead that everything will be ready for full-scale operation in the warm part of the day.

Adjust the combine to prevent excessive cracking of grain, to thrash cleanly, and to avoid loss of grain from running too fast.

Clean combine of old grain before harvesting new crop.

Do not store wet grain in large bulk.

Store grain in clean places, free of old grain and old livestock feeds.

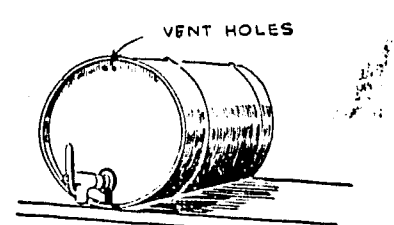

Clean storage bins and keep them free of all insects.

Never, under any circumstances, place new grain on top of old grain.

Make it impossible—by screening and rodent-proofing all openings—for birds, poultry, mice and rats to contaminate precious grain in bins.

Do these things and you will reap higher returns from less waste and premium prices for high quality grain.

Safe Vent Holes

One of the simplest ways of venting an outdoor drum which is mounted horizontally is to drill two ventholes just under the rim. Fuel will then flow freely and overhang of rim will prevent moisture from entering through the holes.

Climate Study May Aid Crops

Microclimate: Down
Next To Ground

Plant scientists are concerning themselves with an unusual kind of climate, known as microclimate. It's the environment down next to the ground.

Microclimate, according to agronomists at the U. S. Regional Pasture Research Laboratory at the Pennsylvania State University, differs from the generally observed climate in many ways.

Night temperatures next to a bluegrass sod, for example, may be as much as 6 degrees lower than at shoulder height. In close-growing crops where plants restrict air movement, temperatures during the night may range as much as 12 degrees higher than the atmosphere at shoulder

The temperature at ground level may be as important as soil nutrients when it comes to producing top yields, since science now says plants are susceptible to high and low temperatures and light changes. As science learns more about the effect of "microclimate" on crops, the farmer should be able to better protect his crops and get higher yields.

Height.

These differences are of great concern to scientists and have necessitated the development of special instruments to measure moisture, light, temperatures, and other conditions of both low-growing and taller plants.

Studies under way for the past five years have revealed that some plants are susceptible to light deficiencies, some to low temperature, and still others to wide variance in daily temperature.

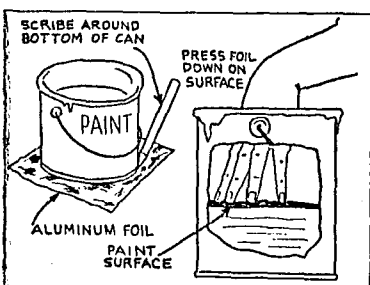

The studies also are revealing information affecting the breeding quality, growth habits, and insect-disease relations to plants, particularly forage crops.

Fumigation Program Against Khapra Beetle

A grain-storage-building fumigation program that the U. S. Department of Agriculture believes is the largest of its type ever undertaken is now underway against the Khapra beetle in California, Arizona and New Mexico. In this unique program, entire buildings—not just their contents—are sealed over, so the fumigant will reach every crevice that might conceal the cranny-seeking beetle. Fifteen large California grain warehouses were fumigated with methyl-bromide gas in an all-out effort to eradicate this recently introduced, stored-grain pest, first discovered in this country in 1953. State pest control agencies, property owners, chemical companies and pest control firms, USDA's Agriculture Research pest-control personnel and Agricultural Marketing Service research entomologists are cooperating in the work.

The beetle was eradicated from an infested California warehouse in an experiment last January. This and other tests have shown the effectiveness of the only practical method yet developed for eliminating this hard-to-kill insect from infested buildings. More than a million cubic feet of storage were wrapped in a gas-tight cover of sealed tarpaulins and given 2½ times the methyl-bromide dosage and 12 times the exposure duration normally required to kill exposed Khapra beetles.

Prevent Scum

It's always annoying to return to a paint job and find that paint scum has formed. Scum will not form in a closed can if you cover the paint surface with a disc of aluminum foil before storing it away. Set can over aluminum foil and scribe around it to cut disc to proper size. Push foil disc into can and down to paint level. Later, simply pinch and lift off foil, stir paint and begin painting immediately.

Give Pullets A Good Start
A clean house gives your pullets a good laying start. In getting ready to house the pullet flock, Jim Hurst, assistant county agent, recommends scrubbing the interior of the building with a solution of lye water, and scraping the roosts, nests and walls near the floor. The scrubbing solution is made of one can of lye to five gallons of hot water. Use it liberally on the house, but be careful not to get it on your skin, because it burns. When you have the house thoroughly cleaned, apply a disinfectant. Cresote base materials are good. To make sure mites and lice are under control, paint or spray the nests, roosts and low woodwork with carbolineum and a one-half percent solution of lindane. After these steps are taken it is wise to let the house air out for a couple of weeks before moving in the pullets. At the time the birds are moved it is advisable to worm them. A satisfactory method is to give each bird a de-worming tablet and see that it goes down. Birds that are wormy are not economical producers because worms take food that should be nourishing the pullet.

A big heart does more for humanity than a brilliant mind.

Blood Drive This Week

U. of I. Moscow — University of Idaho students are expected to go over the 10,000-pint mark in the annual blood drive which began on Tuesday, Oct. 25.

Since campus blood drives began in 1950, Idaho students have contributed a total of 9,102 pints, reports Dale Carlisle of Walla Walla, Wash., the energetic yell king who is chairman of this year's campaign. He pointed out that the 1953 total of 1,671 pints was tops in the nation in collegiate competition.

Prior to 1953, two blood drives were held on the campus each year, but since then students have concentrated on an annual campaign. John Champson of Twin Falls, who is publicity co-chairman with Gretchen Holmes of Warren, said that "Idaho's average yearly total of contribution is greater than any other campus of comparable size."

"Part with a pint" is the theme of this year's three-day drive. The campaign will feature living group competition, with trophies in the form of blood bottles being given to houses achieving 100 percent participation of eligible students.

Assisting Carlisle, among others, is Donald Ingie, Kendrick, representative of the Intercollegiate Knights service organization.

Watch Those Kitchen Fires

The alert wife has few kitchen fires.

She watches out for defects and overheating in appliances, and it's a wise precaution, heartily endorsed by Mrs. Elizabeth Rettig, county home demonstration agent.

There are many ways to avoid a fire in the kitchen. The careful homemaker has respect for a frayed wire. She won't use it. She doesn't load a lot of appliances on one circuit. She keeps curtains away from stoves so they don't catch fire. She has asbestos on the under side of shelves above a stove. Her wastebaskets will not burn. Matches are out of sight and reach of children. She keeps the handles of hot pans or are less likely to be snatched accidentally.

If fat gets on the fire, she smothers it with soda or salt.

She has a fire extinguisher handy in all parts of the house where fires may start.

HELLO, FOLKS:

Did you ever see more glorious fall weather? And with the sum-mach brilliant red and other brush as brilliant a yellow — never has the scenery been lovelier. But, as much as we hate to mention it — this means that winter is on the way. Phone 1251 — say: "Fill it up" and we'll take care of that fuel oil tank. Do it now. There's no time like the present.

Little Jimmy: "Mom, father wouldn't murder anyone, would he?"
Mother: "Why of course not! What made you ask that?"
Little Jimmy: "Well, I heard him down in the basement last night saying 'Let's kill the other two, Joe!'"

How about the tires on your car — are they "baldies"? If so, come in and find out how little it will cost to put those famous U. S. Royal Mud and Snow Tires on all around. It's better to be safe than sorry.

Patient: "Doctor, I don't drink and I don't chase around with women. Will I live to 100 years old?"
Doctor: "No, probably not, but it'll seem like it."

Bring your car in for a wash and wax job before winter sets in. Protect it's finish with wax. The cost is low — results high!

Friend: "Why have you given the general such a peculiar pose?"
Sculptor: "Well, it was started as an equestrian statue, and then the committee found they couldn't afford the horse!"
