RICHER SOIL means better crops, yet the West has never had enough soil-building fertilizer. To help meet farmers' needs. Standard opens a $16 million plant next month which will produce petroleum-derived plant food* in pellet form for Western soils and crops.

This uniform blend of essential plant growth elements is so effective that 400 pounds on an acre of grassland often enables it to feed 3 to 5 times more livestock. On other crops, too, it increases profits per acre. With this better use of Western land, your family will get tastier, more nourishing meals for every budget dollar.

Soil Testing Service Available

A reliable soil testing service from which results can be obtained for the present seeding and fertilizing season is now available to Idaho farmers. In addition to tests that have been made the past few years, analysis for nitrate-nitrogen and organic matter are now being made. To obtain such tests soil samples are submitted to local county agents offices, along with required information concerning the sample and fee payment. The cost of sample analysis varies with the kind and number of elements for which tests are desired. It is suggested that all persons who desire to have soil samples analyzed follow this procedure: Collect soil samples in a recommended manner; have the samples air dried when submitted for testing; supply all requested information possible on soil sample envelopes, and leave them at your county agent's office, at least ten days before the results of the tests are desird.

Why drive miles and miles, when you can buy it in Kendrick.

Ask for More Trained Men For Animal Disease Study

Solution to some of the nation's most costly animal disease is being slowed by lack of highly trained research men.

There is urgent need for giving promising young scientists an opportunity to learn the techniques of animal disease investigation.

The only way this can be done is by a long range fellowship program.

Such a program has been spon-sored by the AVMA for the past six years. Under this program, which will be expanded as funds permit, research-minded graduates of colleges of veterinary medicine get financial aid to engage in animal disease studies at leading scientific institutions. This gives them background and experience needed for unraveling highly complex diseases.

Many livestock and pet owners who ask for "more research to solve disease problems" have given too little thought to how the job might be done.

Finding out what causes a perplexing animal disease isn't much different from tracking down a dangerous criminal, and neither is a job for anyone but a well-trained person.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation would not put a man on any of its cases without first training him in FBI methods. The same advantage should be given to people interested in disease investigation.

Funds for expanding the fellowship project should come from private sources rather than the federal government "because the nation already has gone too far toward dependence on federal hand-outs."

The germ responsible for most

Survival time of the germ was observed after mastitis-infected milk was poured on manure, hair, wood, bricks, udder cloths, and other materials commonly found or used around dairy barns.

The germ stayed alive for 4 days on rubber boots; 5 days on a broom handle, 7 days on an udder-washing cloth, 8 days on a bucket, 13 days on hair, and 20 days on hay. However, when some of these objects were treated with a disinfectant before being smeared with infected milk, the germ didn't do so well.

Harmless though it may look, a new case of bovine mastitis.

cases of bovine mastitis can stay alive for as long as 20 days on objects around the barn, and for as long as 26 days anywhere on a cow's skin. From these jumping - off places, the germ can eventually get into a cow's udder, where it starts the disease known as mas titis.

Enough of the disinfectant lingered to cut down the survival time to a day or less.

This research emphasizes the need for clean barns, clean cows. clean attendants, and prompt disinfection of any object that gets splattered with milk.

Use of Columbium

John Winthrop, Jr., who supervised the construction of America's first successful blast furnace at Saugus, Massachusetts, in 1643, found an unidentified rock fragment near his home. About 150 years later, an English chemist, Charles Hackett, saw this fragment in the British museum, analyzed it, and thus discovered the element columbium. Today, this element is playing an increasingly important part in the manufacture of stainless and heat resistant steels for such uses as jet aircraft engines.

Columbium is one of the most recent elements to find use in the steel industry. It was used commercially as an alloy in the 1930's, although experimental work had been done with it as early as 1920. Last year 632,000 pounds of columbium metal was consumed in the manufacture of steel.

Origin of Camouflage

The origin of the word camouflage has, it seems, been lost in the shuffle. One of the stories told in connection with it is that, during the Indian troubles in the Southwest, one Jacques Camou built a circular mud fort. This fort had large square openings at regular intervals around the walls. Through these, the garrison of the fort would fire. As the Indians' shots also found 'heir mark through these openings, Camou painted the en-tire fort like a checkerboard with large black squares on a white field. This confused the Indians so they were unable to determine at which dark squares to aim.

Thermal snow removal from sidewalks and driveways by means of embedded piping is a new and interesting development in the heating industry. The snow is removed auto-matically and without effort by the heat from pipe coils installed under the surface of the pavement. Hot water, circulated through the coils, transfers its heat to the pavement, thus melting the snow and keeping the surface dry. Automatic snow removal is economical. There is no necessity for using snow shovels or chemicals. All the owner does is to pasture near Southwick — year-ling White Face heifer, branded JHJ with underbar on left hip.
