Mr. and Mrs. George Finke, visited at the Elmer Souder's home Sunday. News is scarce here, the inclement weather of the past week having discouraged visiting and travel.

Extension Talent Contest

Colton, Wash. — Penny Sue Dial, '58, of Spokane, is this year's teen board representative for Notre Dame Academy in the 1957 Extension Talent contest sponsored by Extension magazine.

All students are eligible to enter one or all the contests. Their entries must be submitted to Penny Sue before Feb. 1, 1957.

The four different types of entries and prizes are: The best Extension cover idea, $100; a story written about an outstanding teenager in the school or community, $75.00; the best series of photographs telling a story will win $100.00, and $100.00 for the best publicity. Notre Dame won the last prize two years for having the most articles covering the contest published.

Special prizes include $100.00 to the school submitting the most entries, and $100.00 for the school that sponsors the largest percentage of entries used on school enrollment.

Don't Let Education Interfere
Every now and then comes a public utterance so egregious, so ridiculous, that it highlights an issue more vividly than could have reams of sober arguments — and often, as in this instance, helps immeasurably the cause the utterer opposes. At the beginning of the football season, which raises anew the question whether college athletics shall be a tool of education or whether the colleges shall be a mere front for a stadium, one such utterance obliges.

The owner of a big-league professional football team has told a football writers' gathering that 90 per cent of the country's college presidents should be fired to save college football!

Save it for what? For balancing the classroom with a proper measure of recreation? For mixing some muscular exercise with the mental? For school in fair competition and good sportsmanship? For furnishing a focus to college loyalties by having "our boys" (not our hired men) out on the field carrying the college colors toward victory?
Hardly. "Big-time" college sport have been the training schools and the great source of talent for professional sports, and many college presidents have been trying to recapture athletics for education.

Now, there is nothing intrinsically wrong with professional sports when carried on as frankly professional. But there is a great deal wrong when education is used as a disguise for professional sports. Nothing could have exposed the hypocrisy of such relationship more starkly than to have a tycoon of the sports business propose simply getting the educators out of the way. — Christian Science Monitor.

Eye Diseases Often-Detected For Several Years

NEW YORK—Strabismus or squint—the technical terms for cross-eyed and wall-eyed conditions resulting from lack of coordination between the eye muscles—don't usually make sudden appearances, according to the Better Vision Institute. Occasionally it is present from the day of birth, but it's generally apt to sneak up on a child so gradually that it goes unnoticed for a while.

During the early stages, in many cases, the youngster's eyes are only out of line when looking down to read or do other near-point tasks. They may be perfectly straight when looking up and at distant objects. This creates a dangerous situation, since parents are not likely to observe the way the child's eyes function when his head is bent over a book. But measures should be taken promptly to correct the condition, or it will develop to the point where the eyes are constantly crossed. And the turning eye may be suppressed until it loses its vision, through disuse.

As a rule, cross-eye begins before the age of five, and wall-eye after that age. Either condition requires the help of a competent vision specialist as soon as it is detected. He will probably advise occlusion, corrective glasses, visual exercises, an operation, or a combination of these.

Book Position Affects Reading

CHICAGO—The position in which a book or paper is held is a significant factor in reading efficiency. Recent tests have proved that the angle of the printed text has considerable effect upon both speed of reading and visibility of words.

A group of 300 university sophomores acted as subjects, from 31 to 75 participating in each of the different tests. A head rest kept their eyes at a distance of 17 inches from the reading copy, and a special reading stand held the copy in various positions, from the vertical to a slope of 30 degrees below the horizontal. Some of the text was in 10-point type, and some in eight-point.

Both sides of type were read most quickly over five-minute periods when the copy was held at a slant of 45 degrees from the vertical (that is, perpendicular to the reader's line of vision). The 10-point type was read 5.7 per cent more slowly when lying flat on the table, 8.8 per cent more slowly when slanted 10 degrees below the horizontal and 17.1 per cent more slowly when slanted 30 degrees below the horizontal. The eight-point type was read 8.7 per cent more slowly (than at 45 degrees) when lying flat on the table, 7.6 per cent more slowly when at -10 degrees, and 14.8 per cent more slowly at -30 degrees.

3-Horned Chameleon Fantastic Animal

WASHINGTON—One of earth's most fantastic animals is the three-horned chameleon of East Africa, recently added to the reptile collections of the Smithsonian Institution.

It is sometimes described as a replica, in miniature, of the ancient monster dinosaur Triceratops, which has been extinct for about 75,000,000 years. The two, of course, are in no direct way related.

The three-horned chameleon grows to a length exceeding twelve inches. The curious horns, an inch to an inch and a half long, protrude from the nose and between the eyes of the males. Females are hornless.

These chameleons are extremely pugnacious and sometimes use their horns in fights to the finish. At times the contests develop into tedious pushing matches, with the horns interlocked. At other times, a really vigorous fighter will dispose of a weaker adversary in a few minutes.

Fatty Foods Linked To Heart Disorders

PINECREST, N.C.—Your taste for fatty foods may have been burned to a crisp by Dr. Harvey Estes, associate in medicine at Duke University Medical School, who told a medical meeting that coronary heart disease and other atherosclerotic diseases are associated with too much fat in the diet.

"In view of the high incidence of coronary heart disease in this country, there is a serious question as to whether a permanent reduction in the level of dietary fat should be advised for the population as a whole," he said.

Magic Radio

CHICAGO—A sun-powered portable radio developed by a Chicago concern is said to operate satisfactorily, even on overcast days. The transistorized unit converts sunlight or artificial light into electricity with a small attachment made of 32 silicone cells. At night the unit works on flashlight batteries.

Placid Possum Has Survived For Generations

WASHINGTON—The placid possum, one of nature's unassuming mammals, rates a number of distinctions—among them the height of his family tree.

Possum ancestors waddled the earth millions of years ago with dinosaurs and other prehistoric monsters, and the possum out-survived the lot. How they did so has never been explained—unless it is that the possum is not so stupid as he is supposed.

Like the bear and the eagle that contributed "bear hug" and "eagle-eyed" to the language, the possum's ability to feign death gives meaning to the expression "playing possum." Some experts think possums may actually swoon from fright. Others compare the exhibition to the rigid state of severe human mental cases.

The possum ranges across much of the United States and as far south as Patagonia. As North America's only marsupial, the inoffensive creatures have served and amused generations of man, while creating strange beliefs. One old legend credits the possum with fishing with its foot-long rattlesnake tail. Mexico's Aztecs brewed possum-tail broth as a cough remedy, used it to draw ailments from flesh and bone and to accelerate childbirth.

Beset by hawks, owls, foxes, bobcats and man, the possum has few defenses other than an odor sufficient to give attackers pause.

No Prospecting in 'Garden of Gods'

WASHINGTON—In the Garden of the Gods, scenery is more important than atomic energy.

Such, in effect, is the ruling of Colorado Springs officials who have declared the famous city-owned park "off limits" for would-be uranium prospectors. Any blasting, it was felt, might threaten the park's weird limestone formations particularly its "Balanced Rock."

The Garden of the Gods, near Pike's Peak, has been a tourist attraction for decades. As early as 1886, when only one National Park—Yellowstone—had been set up, Congress considered a bill to make the site a public recreation and sightseeing area.

The name "Garden of the Gods" came into use in 1859, soon after the discovery of gold in the vicinity. A couple of traders, seeking a place to establish a trading post on the road to the gold fields, came upon the natural gateway leading into the fantastic rock-strewn region. Here, one of them remarked, would be a place for gods to assemble, "a garden of the gods"—and the name stuck.

Surgery Held Safe For Polio Patients

CHICAGO—Paralyzed polio victims who are dependent on mechanical respirators may undergo "practically any" surgical procedure with little more risk than the normal individual, provided they receive special care and preparation.

Three Michigan physicians reported recently on 17 paralyzed patients who safely underwent various types of surgery. None developed any respiratory complications, which might have been expected in such a group, the doctors' said.

The 17 patients ranged in age from 16 to 35 years, and underwent a total of 21 operations, fourteen major and eight minor operations.

Psychological preparation is important in such cases, they said. The paralyzed patient must be reassured that his breathing will not stop during surgery and that others have undergone the operation successfully. He should be accompanied to the operating room by someone he knows and trusts.

Growing Old Also Concerned Ancestors

LOS ANGELES—Research at the University of California, Los Angeles, has thrown new light on how ancient peoples viewed the physical and mental process of growing old.

Senior citizens of Rome were revered and obeyed, largely because it could be disastrous to do otherwise. A Roman father had absolute power over every member of his household. A wayward son could be murdered or sold into slavery if he displeased his father.

The Greeks' view of old age was more like our own. They recognized the physical ills inherent in long life and accepted them, if somewhat grudgingly. It was believed that if a man continued to read all his life, his mind would not decay.

Plenty of Soil

NEWTON, Iowa—John Wilson, County conservationist, built a new home in Newton and was facing the problem of getting good topsoil for his yard. High winds had moved some of Iowa's best topsoil into roadside ditches, so Wilson easily gathered all he needed.

Millions of Life Policyholders Use Income Plans

NEW YORK—Millions of American families now have at least a portion of their life insurance set up to provide income payments rather than lump sum payments when benefit payments begin, says a recent report.

The income uses of life insurance have become so important a part of family financial planning in this country that the amount of policy benefits used to establish income plans this year will be 40 times the total so used in 1920, whereas aggregate benefit payments have increased 7-fold in these years.

The income payments to American families from these accumulated funds are increasing steadily and now run about 90 percent of the amount of benefits set aside each year for the purpose.

Huge Locomotive Poses Big Problem For Ford Museum

DEARBORN, Mich.—Because locomotives, like automobiles, have grown in size over the years, the Henry Ford Museum found itself facing a big problem.

Some automobile owners are having to squeeze their present-day cars into garages built only a few years ago. It took the museum a longer time to be caught with the same problem.

Nine locomotives have been handled in the past with ease. Parked inside the museum on two parallel tracks, they have been pushed in and out of the 11-acre museum grounds as the occasion demanded.

THE Bull itin

Published Weekly by the Union Oil Service at Kendrick
W. L. "Bill" Rogers, Editor

HELLO, FOLKS:

Are you ready for winter? The changeable weather of the past few days reminds all of us that anything can happen almost overnight these days — so pick up your phone and call us at 1251 and say: "Fill 'er up" — the stove oil tank we mean — then you'll be ready, come howling blizzard or gentle rain. There's a heap of comfort in a stove or furnace these days.

In a Washington department store the other day a middle-aged gentleman dropped by the perfume counter, picked up a sample atomizer and gave himself a couple of squirts.

With a wink at the surprised saleslady, he remarked: "Like to keep my wife guessing," and went on his way.

If you are one of those who doesn't want to buy mud and snow or sawdust tires, yet desire anti-skid protection, bring in your car, pickup or truck and let us tractionize your tires. The cost is low, the results highly satisfactory. Come in today — for tomorrow you may need that traction.

An Indian was sending smoke signals in New Mexico, when an atomic blast let loose.

"Gosh!" said the awe-struck brave, as he gazed at the mushrooming cloud, I wish I'd said that!"

Car a bit hard to start these winter days? If so, bring it in for a crankcase full of Royal Triton Motor Oil and a tank of Union Gasoline. You'll be mighty pleased at the difference!

Try To Cut Traffic Toll

Boise — A program in which Idaho's 4,000 Air and Army national guardsmen will join state, county and local law officers in an effort to cut down Idaho's mounting traffic death toll was announced this week by Gov. Robt. E. Smylie and Mjr. Gen. John E. Walsh, Idaho adjutant general.

The governor said each of the state's 52 Guard units would conduct a one-hour lesson in safe driving for Guard members during one of their regular drill periods.

Local police officers and civic officials will be invited to the drill periods, Smylie added, and in many cases the officers will be asked to act as instructors.

Primary purpose of the periods of instruction would be to impress upon each Guardsman the importance of safe driving of both military and civilian vehicles.

The lessons are to be completed during the month of December. This program should be of great help to state officials and law officers in their attempt to reduce anticipated highway deaths during the holiday season.

Members of local Guard units will be asked to distribute safe-driving posters to augment the program, according to Mjr. Gen. Walsh. The posters advise drivers: "Don't drive your car like a tank. But if you want to drive a tank, join the National Guard" and "Don't fly on the highways. Do your flying with the Air National Guard."

Gov. Smylie concluded: "I am delighted that the officers and men of our army and National Guard of Idaho are taking such an active role in the endeavor to reduce the useless slaughter on our state highways. This is another indication of the many benefits Idaho receives from the National Guard."

Our Comment: We think the above is excellent, but do not believe that highway safety instruction goes far enough. It should begin in our schools, particularly high schools. There safety talks should begin on the proper operation of motor vehicles, with such talks given by duly authorized law enforcement officers, preferable the State Police.

It is our frank belief that not many of high school age realize the power and the danger of today's cars, where even the cheapest boasts horsepower ratings of from 145 to 283, and speeds well in excess of 100 miles per hour.

How many teen-age drivers realize the danger of a ton-and-a-half to two tons of steel hurtling down the highway at high speeds? Or for that matter, how many of the so-called older but "drinking drivers"?

Please Mail Early

"Please mail early" is the plea of F. O. Stedman, local postmaster, and he adds further, "Please write or print the address clearly." On large parcels it is better to put the address on one side as well as on the top of the package. Clear writing and printing helps assure fast and safe delivery.
