About Big Game Season
 There seem to be a few changes on the boundaries of the various big game season districts this year, and it would be well to study your map quite carefully before taking off.
 In general almost the entire northern section of Idaho, from the southern part of Benewah county and most of Shoshone county are open from Oct. 12 to Nov. 30.
 In District 2, comprising part of Shoshone and Clearwater county, the season is from Oct. 1 to Nov. 30.
 In District 3 comprising part of Benewah county, Latah County, Nez Perce county and parts of Lewis and Idaho counties the season is Nov. 1 to Nov. 30. But as said before — check your map.
 The elk season is in general the same — but again — check your map.
 No one is useless in this world who helps some one else bear the burden of it.

Caging Hens May Not Be Best Idea

Costs Are High and Results Inconclusive

A University of Wyoming poultry scientist cautions poultrymen to "think long and hard" before trying a caged-hen type of operation. Experiments under way in Wyoming are not complete enough to brand the cage system "unsatisfactory," but they and tests in other states show that caging can cut egg output.
 Early reports from trials at the Afton experimental substation show that pullets running loose in floor pens were outlaying caged pullets by 15 percent and were increasing the margin every month. Caged pullets also ate more feed.

The Afton trials are showing one slight advantage of cages. Of every 100 pullets started, one more of the caged birds was alive at the end of 24 weeks.

George T. Davis poultry scientist, says these early results generally agree with recent reports from other states.

Experiments in other places also show larger eggs from caged pullets but a higher percentage of clean eggs and fewer blood and meat spots from pullets on the floor. The Wyoming trial results, when complete, will include these factors.

Cobalt Helps in Search For New Cotton Uses

Radioactive cobalt (Cobalt 60) will soon be used by scientists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to speed up their investigations into new uses for cotton and other crops. Future research calls also for radiation treatments to help create useful new products from pine gum, tung oil, and castor oil, the Department says.

Dr. Jett C. Arthur, Jr., of USDA's Southern Utilization Research and Development Division in New Orleans is in charge of the new research project. He has been specially trained and licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission to use radioactive materials. A two-ounce supply of Cobalt 60 has recently been received by Dr. Arthur's group. It is one of the largest single supplies of this material outside of the AEC installation at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Cotton is the first commodity scheduled for radiation study. In the past few years, agricultural researchers have made much progress toward increasing the demand for cotton through physical and chemical modification of cotton cellulose. The scientists believe that Cobalt 60 will now provide them with a faster and more accurate means of determining how various modifications affect the chemical reactivity and physical properties of cotton. It will also be used to measure the absorption and adhesion of cotton dyes, and to obtain other information about the behavior of the cotton fiber under varying conditions.

Farm Beginner Needs Financing

Must Borrow Money For Extended Period

Beginning farmers today face many financial problems, a University of Illinois farm economist pointed out to Illinois production credit association fieldmen at their annual meeting.

F. J. Reiss stressed the high capital needs of beginning farmers. They may easily average $8,000 or more. And usually a sizable part must be borrowed from relatives or credit agencies.

Reiss warned against farming on a small scale to keep down the amount borrowed. That may mean operating with such high per unit costs of production that income is not sufficient to repay debts or maintain an acceptable standard of living.

The beginning farmer usually has as his first big task the business of overcoming sizeable financial problems.

In addition to paying off debts, those who start farming have a problem of building up volume. Earnings may actually be in the form of increased inventories, which can't be used to pay off debts.

So beginning farmers need borrowed money for longer than one year—usually three to five years. This time will usually be long enough to pay off debts for machinery and breeding stock.

Mastitis Is Still Causing Dairy Losses

There's at least one "old-timer" that isn't revered by Illinois dairymen. This one is mastitis.

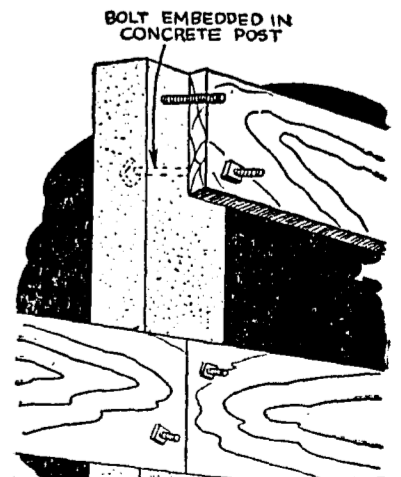

Veterinarians at the University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine say that, despite the long time in which mastitis has been recognized as a serious disease of dairy cows, it is still causing dairymen heavy losses.

What causes mastitis? Udder injuries are considered important factors in opening the door to invasion of various types of bacteria that can cause infectious mastitis. So the farmer will do himself a favor by cutting down on the ways in which a cow can injure herself. Some causes of injury are stalls that are too short, inadequate bedding, high door sills or jump gates and forcing the cow to run.

The dairyman should be on the lookout for any change in the milk or the cow's udder—a warning that mastitis may be present. A few flakes in the milk or a firm area in a teat or quarter is usually the first sign of the disease. If proper veterinary treatment is not given, the quarter may become swollen and inflamed and the milk may change greatly within a few hours.

If you suspect mastitis, contact your local veterinarian to help him start a herd control program. This will include a new milking order which consists of milking healthy cows—especially first-calf heifers—first and those with mastitis, or suspected of having mastitis, last. It's also a good idea to use a strip cup or bakelite cup to check the milk of each cow before milking. This shows abnormal changes in milk.

...FOREST MANAGEMENT IS RESEARCH IN ACTION

YESTERDAY'S LESSON— TODAY'S APPLICATION— TOMORROW'S PROGRESS

Applying the experience of yesterday to the forest practices of today, we have learned that wise use of our natural resources brings a better tomorrow. Sound conservation practices, selective logging and more complete utilization of our forest products mean future progress, a healthier economic climate, more and better recreational areas, protection of wildlife and watersheds. Another reason why we say — Forest Management is Research in Action.

Grass Important To Cattle Raising

Herefords Raised in Southwestern Georgia

In the southwestern corner of Georgia nestled in a setting of pine trees and rich pasture land is the Pineland Hereford Ranch owned by Ed Kelley.

Pineland Hereford Ranch was the scene of the first attempt at planned pasture improvement in the state. Kelley planned Bahia grass on his native pastures and pioneered its use in the area with tremendous success.

"All too often we find ourselves ready to trip and fall into the ways of those who think our soils are inexhaustible. We overgraze the land and do not care for it, thereby losing its full potential," says Mr. Kelley.

"Cattle are best suited to grass country, and that's what this is," he adds. "We have to make the best possible use of grass to show a profit and we're doing it with 250 head of commercial Hereford cows."

"The cattle population and industry is in its infancy here," he continued. "We have just scratched the surface of our ability to produce beef from grass and as our farm people realize the demand for better cattle, more and more feedlots are coming into the area. The demand for top quality steers is good now and will improve as packers and feeders become aware of this source of supply."

Nitrogen Is Subject Of Soil Research

University of Illinois soil scientists are studying the nitrogen and protein content of soils with equipment used to study the content of blood serum.

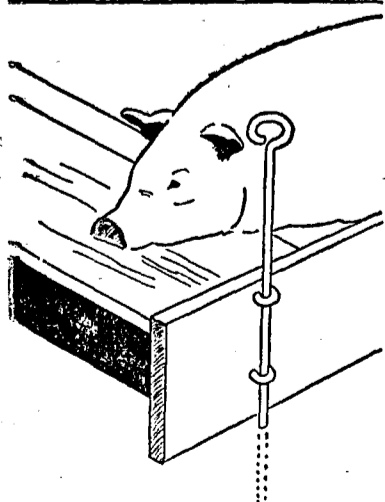

Frank Stevenson, who is doing this research, says that very little is known about the chemistry of nitrogen compounds in the soil. Nitrogen differs from other soil nutrients because it occurs almost exclusively in the organic form.

One reason a test to determine the amount of nitrogen in the soil has been so hard to perfect is that the amount of nitrogen released from organic matter varies with soil temperature and moisture, Stevenson points out.

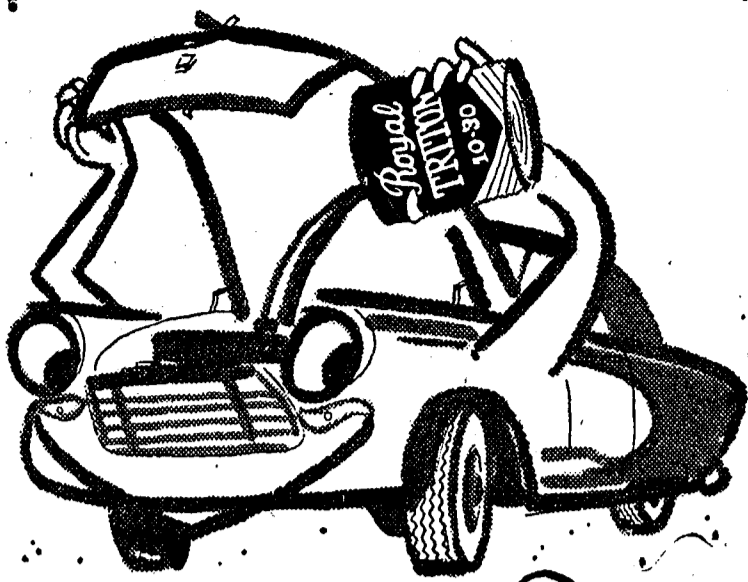

Several tests for nitrogen have been proposed in other states, but Illinois soil scientists have not considered them too successful. Before a suitable test can be devised, they feel that more research must be done on the chemistry of nitrogen in soils. Progress is being made in this direction, and it is possible that a satisfactory test can be developed in a few more years.

The famous Morrow plots at the University of Illinois have also been used in part of this soil nitrogen and protein study. The proteins in the soils from the untreated continuous corn plots were found to be low in the kinds of amino acids that would be ready sources of nitrogen. The proteins in the soil of the rotation plots that had received soil treatments were high in the amino acids that would supply nitrogen.

HELLO, FOLKS:

It's said the northern lights we saw Sunday evening — despite their outstanding beauty — are a sign of coming cold weather. We hope not — but just in case that's true — how about your fuel oil tank? Is it full, ready to heat your home when that "chill day" arrives? If not, pick up your phone and call us at 1251. Say "Fill 'er up," and we'll do the rest! Union Products, of course!

Truck Driver: "The portions you served me on the way up yesterday were twice as big."
Waitress: "Where were you sitting?"
Trucker: "Over near the window."
Waitress: "That accounts for it. Those portions were for advertising purposes."

Hunters: We're told it's freezing ice back in the hills every night. Be sure you bring in that pickup or truck for Prestone and some of that famous Royal Triton Motor Oil before you go. It's far better to be safe than sorry!

Jim: "How did you get that black eye?"
Jerry: "Kissing the bride after the ceremony."
Jim: "But that's the custom."
Jerry: "Yeah — but not two years after the ceremony!"

Late with fall plowing? Need gas or diesel fuel — lubricants or oil? If so, a call to 1251 will get you those items — in Union Products — in a hurry! Try us, won't you? You'll like our service and our products.

Homemakers Booth Gets Honor

The Cameron Homemakers booth at the NezPerce County Fair a couple of weeks ago, has been placed in the Clearwater Power Co.'s meeting room. It has received many complimentary remarks there and at the Fair.

It is actually a plaque, measuring 6x7 1/2 feet. On the plaque the "Homemakers Creed" was printed in large letters made of seeds. Alsike clover was used for the letters. Also in clever combination and on the border were used Brevor wheat, Alaskan peas, beet seed, popcorn, fescue, and several other seeds.

Anyone wishing to see it can do so at the Clearwater Power Co., Lewiston, any time.
