SATURDAY MARCH 14

CHICAGO -- Most "accident. prone!" individuals, are considered! a liability in their, work, but there ane some "happy accident-prone" people who are pretty important.

They're the researchers, scientists; and doctors; who, accidentally, discover some important thing while looking; for something; else, according; to, a special article in the Journal of the American Medicall Association.

Among the most famous of medicine's: "happy, accidents" are Fleming's discovery of penicillin when he left a Petri dish uncovenedi andi vam Leeuwenhoeck's discovery of bacteria when he forcusedi al magnifying; glass on a. drop of water instead of on a fly's. leg. Out of these grew, the "penicillim age" and the science of bacteriology;

This ability to make some valu. able or pleasant discovery, without deliberately looking for it is called. serendinity.

The most recent screndipitous, event to make headlines, was Dr. Winston H. Price's discovery of a common cold vaccine. This reseancherr at the Johns, Hopkins School of Hoygiene, and Public Health, wass not looking for a commom coold preventive, but was working on isolating influenza. vinuses:

Some of medicine's happy, accidents: includes:

-The conquest of smallpox after-Edward Jennen recalled the boast. of a former milkmaid that she was immune because she had had cowpox-which then became the agent: for mass immunity against small-

-The development of the stethoscope after a Paris physician. Rene Theophile Laennec, saw chilldrem tapping messages to each other along opposite ends of a discanded plank. He recognized in the game the principle of the stetha-SCODE.

LOS ANGELES-A 30-ton killer, as vicious as a shark but as playful as a porpoise, roams the Callfornia coast, making forays into such well-known waters as Santa Monica and Monterey Bays.

This is the killer whale, which has been an object of special study by Dr. Richard Boolootian, zoologist at the University of California.

Los Angeles.

Dr. Boolootian has observed these whales killing cormorants apparently for the sheer pleasure of killing. They seize the birds, kill them, and spit out the bodies. He has also seen the marine killer come in as close as four or five feet offshore, leaping out of the water, swimming on its back, and engaging in other playful antics much in the manner of a pornoise. "There is no record of a killer whale killing a human being," Dr. Boolootian says, "People just don't stop to argue with them."

Dr. Frank W. Crowe, Boise, chairman of the professional education committee of the American Cancer Society, Idaho Division, sponsors of the first Idaho Cancer Conference, which will be held in Boise on April 10 and 11.

Visual Checkups Aid School Work

CHICAGO - Approximately 450 textbooks have to be studied nowadays during the school years from first to twelfth grade. And from the grades to college more than 90 per cent of school failures can be blamed on poor reading ability. The startling fact is that from 50 to 70 per cent of the slow-reading pupils have normal or even superior intelligence but are handicapped by seeing problems.

When you read a page of print, your eyes make a series of stops. The number of stops depends on the number of words your eyes can grab at each fixation. The slow reader (150 words or less a minute) stops at almost every word and quickly tires. The fast reader takes in several words at each brief pause.

Comics, TV Mix With Good Books

LOS ANGELES - Parents shouldn't hold books up to their children as "something good" while deriding television and comics as a "waste of time."

This attitude, according to Mrs. Doris Ryder Watts, visiting lecturer in children's literature at the University of California, Los Angeles, creates the impression in a youngster's mind that books, like castor oil, are good for you-but are most unpleasant.

This leads to erroneous conclusion that if suspense, excitement, and thrills are wanted, one must turn to the comics, TV, or movies. Mrs. Watts believes there is no reason why young people shouldn't think of a book as a synonym for adventure.

Farm Acres Increase NEW YORK-The typical American farm in 1940 contained 174 acres; by 1950 the average size had grown to 215 acres and that may go to 220 acres by 1960, according to a recent study.

HELLO, FOLKS: How well do you know your own license number? As a test, we will this week give a free lubrication job to the person hold-ing car license No. 1L 2083. Bétter check — you may be the owner of that car!

A lady who may best be de-scribed as a perpetual talker was asked by one of her long-suffering neighbors if she had ever thought about what she was going to say before she said it. "Why, no," said the lady solemnly. "How on earth could I know what I think about a thing until I've heard what I have to say on the subject."
