

GREATER LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION IS POSSIBILITY

U. of I., Moscow — New improved grasses, better grassland and grazing management constitute the best bet for increasing livestock production in Idaho, according to Dr. A. L. Hafenrichter of Portland, Ore. He is regional plant materials technician of the Soil Conservation Service for the western states.

Speaking at the annual agricultural research conference, bringing together workers in the University of Idaho agricultural experiment station he expressed the belief that Idaho could double — economically and feasibly — the production from its present pasture and grazing acreage. "During the past 25 years the Soil Conservation Service has been cooperating with the Idaho agricultural experiment station in the development of better forage plants," he reported. "At present 20 of these new improved species and varieties are available for Idaho farmers and stock raisers. Mostly they are improved native species."

A steady increase in corn acreage grown for feed and silage in Idaho was forecast by Dr. A. E. Slinkard of the department of agronomy at the University of Idaho. Current corn acreage for the state is estimated at 53,000 acres. This represents an increase of about 400 percent over the 11,000 acres in corn 10 years ago.

WORLD LEADERSHIP IN POWER

Since the day Thomas A. Edison invented the incandescent lamp the United States has led the world in the production of electric power to bring a better standard of living.

The people of this country use more electricity than any other country as servants in the home, as extra workers in the factory and as useful tools in business.

Engineers who make forecasts say this will always be so, since the demand for electricity doubles about every seven or eight years.

The second greatest producer of electric power is the Soviet Union. But the Soviets lag far behind. The United States produces 38.7 percent of the world's output, and the Russians turn out 12.4 percent of the world's supply of kilowatts.

Put another way, the United States has only six percent of the population of the world but it produces more electricity than the next seven countries highest in output. Power company officials recently toured Russian installations and they returned making this statement:

"Assuming that Russia will reach its 1965 goals in power supply, we can see no indication that Russia would reach the power capacity of the United States at any time in the foreseeable future. The average Russian home uses about 400 kilowatt-hours a year as compared to 3,400 kilowatt-hours in the homes of the United States."

Utility leaders point out that there is no necessity for any race with another country in the production of kilowatts, so long as the supply of electric power is adequate in this country to meet all needs.

The utilities now turn out 35 million kilowatts as reserve capacity in case it is needed. This is a 27 percent margin over present demand, showing that the power is there if it is needed.

PROSPECTS GOOD

U. of I., Moscow — Idaho's track and field prospects for the spring season appear to be the best in recent years, according to an early survey. Coach Bill Sorsby, who in his first season mentored the Vandal cross-country team into the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate championship in November, is working toward a squad which promises to be three-deep in all but field events.

It was Sorsby's opinion that the broad jump and the hop-step-and-jump may be Idaho's weakest events. The latter is scheduled because of the Olympic Games events this summer.

Sorsby will have veteran distance men. From the sprints through the longer races and hurdles, Idaho appears at this time to have better-than-average competitors.

Due to the snow and cold, trackmen have been working in the field house and the wrestling room. The runners have been getting outside three or four times each week to work out on the highways.

Freshmen prospects indicate a variety balance in the coming seasons.

UNDER PROTEST

Those who have tangled with the new Idaho State Income Tax know that it is a pretty vicious one — and of course the "pocket nerve" is one of the tenderest in the body.

We understand that further to the north, particularly in the Coeur d'Alene area, taxpayers are appending this to the reports: "Paid under protest."

The tax bill has been in and out of court, and it seems some hope the "paid under protest" might result in at least a partial refund, if and when the bill is remodeled or revised. Anyway, it is a definite way of letting the power-that-be know the tax rate is far from satisfactory.

Take 4-H Congress Trip Award

Among the 1,300 4-H delegates who attended the 38th National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago were four 1959 winners from Idaho.

They were the Gem state's top representatives of 4-H garden, boys' agricultural, dairy and girls home economics projects for 1959. Their work has been directed by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Joe Rohn of Pocatello raised his first 4-H garden when he was nine years old. He has completed 66 4-H projects.

He is treasurer and junior leader of his 4-H Club and a high school senior. As garden project winner he was the guest of Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. during the 4-H congress.

Two outstanding 4-H'ers attended the 4-H Congress from Coeur d'Alene. Kenneth Nelson, 17, was the boys' agricultural project winner. Clyde Weller, 16, was the dairy project winner.

Nelson, a senior at Coeur d'Alene High school, was sent to Chicago by International Harvester. Weller, a junior at the same school, was a guest of the Oliver Corp.

Nelson learned through his 4-H work a variety of methods for good productive farm management. He has been active in the Kootenai County Fair and the state 4-H Club. He was president and junior leader of the Fernan Homesteaders 4-H'ers.

Blue ribbon young Weller won with his first Guernsey calf when he was 11 — six years ago — were an inspiration for him to continue with his dairy project.

He is treasurer and junior leader of the Mica Livestock 4-H Club, vice president of the county 4-H Club, and chairman of the leadership panel of the state 4-H organization.

Karen Lou Reid, 17, of Mohler, won championship awards with her Angus steers and her livestock record book was considered best in Lewis county. But her emphasis in 4-H work has been on the girls' home economics project. Thus, she won her trip to Chicago under sponsorship of Montgomery Ward.

Miss Reid has been serving as leader for several 4-H Clubs, including the Willing Workers, the Cheerful Chefs and Mohler Mix-masters. She is a Nezperce High school senior.

HEART ASSN. DRIVE SOON

"As a voluntary health agency, the Idaho Heart Association during the current year has expended 50 percent of all its contributed funds directly in the vital fields of research and community service," states Dr. Richard A. Forney, president of the association.

This year alone, in Idaho, Idaho Heart will spend $14,000 on drugs for some 748 young people who have been stricken with rheumatic fever.

Research projects under grants from the Idaho Heart Association are currently being conducted at Idaho State College at Pocatello; the University of Idaho, at Moscow, and the College of Idaho at Caldwell.

"In this way we are giving the young men and women of this state an opportunity to work and share in the vast heart research program," Dr. Forney points out.

Participating in the research projects at Idaho's institutions of higher learning are students from Pocatello, Hailey, Glenns Ferry, Shoshone, Twin Falls, Kendrick (Glen Wegner, Jr.) and Cullisac.

The student leaders agreed to permit, in season, water and snowball fights between groups, but the duels will be strictly "formal" affairs, no more impromptu clashes.

DO YOU KNOW

Now we are told that if you are touchy, it is not an intellectual problem, but emotional. Gifted individuals with a lot of common sense can become as sensitive to supposed slights as downright ignorant people. Their trouble always starts with a conviction of not being wanted or appreciated, and leads to no peace of mind, if not downright illness. The cure? Remember many people are more touchy than you are. Stop feeling so important. Laugh at yourself once in a while, and always try to be friendly and understanding.

The Washington Water Power Company has one of the lowest residential rates in the nation. While the price of bread and automobiles has doubled and tripled, electric rates have been held down by operating economies and short-cuts. Now your electric company has reached a point where rates must be changed to meet labor costs and material costs which are still rising.

I see by the papers that Memphis, Tennessee, a public power town that pays not one penny of federal taxes, and very little other taxes to help with national security, farm subsidies and other government needs, has been forced to raise electric rates 18.5% immediately. "Costs of doing business are more than we can absorb," was the explanation. Wonder what public power would do if 23c out of each revenue dollar was taken for taxes?

If you own an insurance policy, and look forward to old-age security, chances are that some of those insurance funds are invested in your private electric company. In addition to insurance, the Washington Water Power Company has some 22,000 stockholders who depend upon company security and growth for money help in old age.

HELLO, FOLKS:

How about that fuel oil tank? Have you checked it lately? Better do it right now and call us at 4251 — for those wonderful Union Heating Oils!

Friend: "How's the wife, George?"

"Not so well," old boy. She's just had quinsy."

Friend: "My gosh! How many does that make for you now?"

"Let us drain out that old, thin winter-worn oil and replace it with Royal Triton — the oil that has no peer. Then you'll be set for hundreds of miles."

Sailor: "My girl friend is a twin."

Pal: "She is? How can you tell them apart?"

Sailor: "Well, her brother is built quite differently."

Bring you car, pickup or truck in for a grease job. Don't let winter's mud and water take its toll. The cost is low — and Union Lubricants last and last.

A customer in a restaurant had complained about the pastry. "I was making pastry before you were born," replied the idignant cook.

"Maybe," replied the customer, "but why sell it now?"

Need tires this spring? Then see us. You'll be surprised at how cheaply you can own new ones for safe summer driving.

There are no better products than Union. Try them.
