The board has had the matter under consideration for some time, knowing that the first grade would have at least 43 enrolled this fall at the Juliaetta school. It is also known by the Board, that for the first time in the history of the district, there the same building. Plans are already under way to hire another teacher to handle the extra class.

The new addition, proposed by the Board, which would be ample to handle all forseeable needs for the next six years, at least, would be 30x30 feet, or 900 square feet, and It would be constructed on the upper Kendrick. side of the existing structure.

The Idaho Public Utilities Comlatch Telephone Co., Inc., their desired rate increase, with one outstanding provision.

The provision calls for all "farmer" owned lines" now being switched manually by the company, will be completed by June 1, 1962, or make other arrangements for manual switching service.

In other words, this provision means that if the farmer lines are not completed and ready for dial by June 1, 1962, they will have to pay KENDRICK HIGH for the operator, it will not be the responsibility of the phone company. The rate for all phones on the Potlatch Telephone Company, Inc., switching system will be raised, in most cases 75c per phone on the

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET

was held Tuesday evening of this week, at the Kendrick Community Church basement. The theme was "Neptune's Court," which will also be the theme of the Junior Prom. The banquet room was cleverly decorated with things depicting underwater loveliness.

The menu read as follows: Sea Water Cocktail, Roast Octopi with Seaweed Dressing, White Sand with Seafoam, Ocean Floor Pebbles, Molded Jellyfish, Assorted Mollusks, Sponge and Ocean Currents, Neptune's Nectar, and Iceberg on a Raft. Translated into our language the menu included roast turkey and dressing, potatoes and gravy, tomato cocktails, corn, molded jello salad, a relish plate, rolls and jelly, coffee licious.

Homes On The Half Shell

NEW HOMES SHIPPED IN TWO PIECES is prefabricating twist that a Leesburg, Fla., construction firm has recently developed. Idea allows buyers to occupy their new two-bedroom dwellings a mere 12 manhours after its halves arrive by Inter-national truck at building site. Even cabinets and wiring already are in place. All that remains to be done is bolt halves to each other and to foundation.

JACKED-UP HALF is lowered onto foundation footings laid earlier. Homes have 680 square feet of living space, sell for $6,990 each within a 500-mile radius of Leesburg plant. Price includes hauling of six-ton halves and cost of foundation.

CARPORT AND COVERED PA-TIO extend exterior lines, placing 1,502 square feet under roof. To paraphrase an old saying, "Home is where trucks park it."

GAME SURVEY

Pilot E. W. Nelson goes over flight plans with Game Biologist Les Trout before making helicopter survey of Cassia deer herd south of Twin Falls.

This is part of winter game management work and not to be confused with counting census of game animals.

The Cassia deer herd has been under intensive management by the Idaho Fish and Game department since 1941 because it is among the important ones of the state. The first big game census in the area, however, was taken in 1917, when 19 antelope, 745 mule deer and 18 elk were counted. More recently, the unit has been producing at least ten percent of the state's annual total deer harvest.

CATTLEMEN AND COWBELLES MEET

Latah county cattlemen and Cowbelles enjoyed a full program and beef stew at their annual meeting at Deary, Wednesday, March 16th. The Cattlemen took full advantage of their ladies' Cowbelle organization when they did justice to a delicious beef stew deluxe lunch served by the ladies.

This was the first joint meeting of the two groups, as the Cowbelles were organized this past year. Dr. Leon Orme, University of Idaho Meats specialist, brought an interesting message to the group on "Meat Quality." The cattlemen must keep their research program going full force, as other industries develop new products that can compete with beef. There has even been work on using meat-flavored plastics as a meat substitute, which should keep stockmen on their toes producing meat that the housewife will buy and enjoy serving. Fat on meats was desired in the Fat on meats was desired in the past, but now the trend is for less fat, but still tender, well-flavored meat cuts. Quality of meat is determined by the desirable, bright cherry-red color, firm, fine texture and a network of fat, interlaced throughout the meat.

G. B. "Slats" - Wilson, Lapwal, Past-President of the Idaho State Cattlemen's Association, reminded the group that their association represents the largest dollar agricultural income in Idaho. "We must keep up with our research to survive," Wilson warned the group. We have the tools to prevents many diseases and we must use them, reported Dr. James Bailey, University of Idaho veternarian.

It does cost money for vaccines, sprays and health examinations, but they will save you money in the long run. Bailey pointed to the new systematic grub control spray as a way cattlemen can make money and improve the product they offer the housewife.

The new spray material 'Corral" has been tested and not only controls cattle grubs, but will prevent lice infestation for the winter months. Cattle grubs can cause meat and leather losses amounting to as much as $8.00 per head. Spraying at a cost of 80c per head will leave the cattlemen a nice profit.

New directors elected were: Dan McKinzie, Troy, and Robert Clyde, Moscow. Dan McKinzie was chosen as the new president, succeeding Ed. Ramsdale, Troy.

shop, but the few I have seen are quite expensive. Can you recommend an inexpensive speed grinder?

ANSWER: There is one on the market today that can be purchased for less than $20. The price is not the only attractive feature of this bench grinder, either.

A small bench grinder is an asset to any home or farm workshop.

It is so small—only 10 inches long—that it can be attached to your workbench or stored below and never be in the way. Furthermore, it has many of the same features of larger, more expensive models used by maintenance and repair men.

This particular speed grinder is powered by a ¼-inch motor and has two 4½ by ¾-inch wheels, fine and coarse grit. Among its features are eye shields, watercooling tray, and adjustable tool rests.

An electric bench grinder is an asset to any home or farm shop because it can sharpen such tools as chisels, knives, drawknives, plane blades, axes, drill bits, garden and field tools.

For additional information on this speed grinder write to Thor Research Center.

QUESTION: I have noticed that many of the new portable electric drills have spade-grip handles as well as the common pistol-grip. Which one is best for the workshop?

ANSWER: Manufacturers have introduced the spade-grip handle to their home-shop tool line to give the home and farm craftsman a wider range of selection. Usually it is a case of personal preference, because there is little to choose between the spadegrip (also known as the end grip or saw grip) and pistol-grip handles. Both are designed with ease of handling in mind. (Address your do-it-yourself questions to Thor Research Center, Marengo, Ill. They will be answered by letter or in this column.)
