WEED SPRAYING IS PROBLEM

Moscow — Latah county farmers are having trouble outwitting weather to get weed spraying done. Cool, wet weather makes selective spraying very difficult, reports John Gaiser, Latah county weed supervisor. To get a good kill of weeds with 2,4-D and not hurt the wheat we need some warm weather.

Gaiser reminds farmers that it is very important to use the right amount of 2,4-D in selective spraying of weeds out of wheat. If you have Canada thistle, gromwell, dog fennel, tarweeds, bachelor buttons or other resistant weeds, use 2 pounds of actual acid 2,4-D in about 20 gallons of water, per acre.

Low rates of 2,4-D will only tip the weeds over and the weeds will recover and make seeds. Gaiser says it is important to use a solution that

COMPANY MAKES HUGE TAX PAYMENT

The Washington Water Power Co. will deliver checks totaling more than $796,000 to the treasurers of nine north Idaho counties this week in payment of the last half of its 1960 Idaho property taxes. This second-half payment will bring the total for the year to $1,596,523.00.

R. T. Paine, WWP district manager at Moscow will deliver a check for $58,855.75 to Latah county treasurer Edna M. Theriault, bringing the "Division and district managers dollars to the treasurer's office, and the total for all nine Idaho counties would be 94,000 pounds, or more than 47 tons. Bonner county, where our Cabinet Gorge plant is located, would get more than 33,000 pounds of silver dollars."

WWP's Idaho property taxes are up a little more than $58,000 over last year and $1,136,409 since 1953. Approximately 49 pcerent of the increase is due to the Cabinet Gorge plant; 48 per cent is for added transmission and distribution facilities, and three percent for gas properties added in 1958 and 1959.

"If our properties were 'public-owned'," Paine said, "it would simply mean that the remaining tax payers would have to dig up the $1,600,000 now being paid by the WWP."

U. of I., Moscow — An arithmetic instrument with colored rods will play a very important role in the education of first and second grade students this summer at the University of Idaho elementary summer

It will also take on new significance for elementary principals and teachers as well as superintendents attending the university's workshop in methods and materials in arithmetic and school administrator's con-

Explanation and demonstration of the Cuisenaire method of concrete presentation of arithmetic fundamentals will be emphasized in the workshop for teachers June 19-July 7, and the school administrator's conference June 29, 30, said Dr. Ray M. Berry, professor, and head of the department of education. "This method has been introduced into this country within the last few years," said Dr. Berry. "The unique feature of the method is the use of colored rods, each with number values from one to ten, which the pupils manipulate to solve problems.

"By using the Caisenaire method, pupils progress to easy multiplication and division of whole numbers as early as the first grade, and are able to deal with fractions in the second grade," added the department head. Discussing the special instruction at the methods workshop and the administrator's conference in late June,

Dr. Berry, "It is imparative that superintendent, principals and teachers become acquainted with this arithmetic method to adequately evaluate the possibilities of introdusing it into Idaho schools.'

PIGS DEMAND SHADE AND AIR

Moscow - Shade and cool breezes are likely to be in bigger demand than usual for Idaho pigs this summer, with a water shortage indicated and hot days coming.

Air movement is required to keep hogs healthy in scorching weather, says Wade Wells, livestock specialist of the University of Idaho extension service. Most hogs are raised in confinement rather than in fields. They gain better in paved areas with feeders and waterers operating under sanitary conditions, But modern hog housing increases the problem of keeping cool. Shade of trees and the comfort of a creek are will meet on Wednesday, June 21, at | not available now. Farmers have to provide artificial cooling.

Insulation helps. Two inches of blanket-type insulation in farrowing houses, plus ventilation systems that change the air 30 to 40 times an hour in hot weather help turn the trick. It is also a good idea to provide shade over feeders, watering tanks and resting areas. Snow fence painted white on the upper side reflects heat and provides protection from direct sun.

Hogs often pant on hot days. They do not sweat. The only method they have of getting rid of heat is by radiation to their surroundings or breating out moisture from their lungs. They become uncomfortable when temperatures reach 80, and they are in distress at 90. Tests by The Federation is composed of 85 the department of agriculture show garden clubs with a total membership that a 100-pound hog needs nearly pound of gain at 90 degrees as it Each of the clubs participating does at 70 degrees.
