ENGINEERING IN WOOD TODAY

New and improved methods of engineering in wood, ready availability ufacturers Association. at your retail lumber yard, the development of modern finishes and paints, and the development of modern adhesives - all these make wood increasingly attractive as the Number 1 home building material, according to the National Lumber Man-in lumber, but reduces construction ample, not only produces a saving ntilizing the Teco connector for exitself. Wood trussed construction, but actually save on the use of wood designs which not only save metals, Engineering in wood has produced costs and time. What is more, it re-

New glue-laminating techniques permit the production of "shop-grown" timbers of sizes and shapes which were unknown several decades ago.

The new homes of 1962 will feature the use of timber beams; rafters and joists; and attractive wood millwork and interior finish. Wood interior paneling has brought new interest, new character, and new beauty to the interior of today's homes. Some of the most distinctive and best looking "character marked" rooms in the small, but smart new homes going on the market today feature wood hardwood plywoods. Home owners and prospective buyers find woodpaneled walls take a home out of the "just-another-house" class. fully grained boards finished to the home-owner's taste are far richer than any wallpaper that can be obtained and eliminates the necessity for frequent repapering or painting. Properly finished, wood paneling is practically a permanent interior decoration.

Cost has always been an important factor to the home builder. While lamber can do as much work as any other building material, few home buvers realize that, properly engineered, lumber can also be superior on a cost-for-cost comparison.

In home building there is no substitute for space. Wood-frame construction means low initial cost and greater flexibility in space design. Trussed rafters and many plank-and-beam framing schemes provide post-free interiors. More compact frame walls provide post-free interiors. More compact frame walls provide more usable living space within the same exterior building dimensions.

For the amateur home builder, the man who likes to add utility and attractiveness through his own handiwork, wood is the easily worked, allpurpose building material. Lumber dcalers with experience in servicing the home owner can save him considerable expense and time if given a chance to advise the proper species and grades for a given job. Thi is a service that is available to all.

Harland L. Lyons, Residential Sales representative for the Washington Water Power Company in Moscow since 1948, has been transferred to Spokane and promoted to meter reader supervisor of the Spokane division. vision, according to an announce-ment made by John Murphy, Palouse division manager.

Murphy said that Kenneth O. Anderson will succeed Lyons in Moscow. Anderson joined WWP in 1936 as a bookkeeper in Lewiston. He was named a residential representative there in 1944. He attended school in Coeur d'Alene and Kinman business University.

Lyons, a graduate of Moscow high School, was first employed by WWP as a meter reader in Moscow. He was for your wild game.

HARLEY LYONS, WWP transferred and promoted to Pullman as a residential sales representative as a residential sales representative in 1947. He was re-assigned to Moscow in the same sales capacity in December, 1948 where he remained to the present time.

Commenting on the personnel change, Murphy said, "We are glad to see Lyons get the opportunity to move up into this challenging new job. We are also fortunate in getting a man like Anderson to replace him here. Anderson's comprehensive background of more than 25 years experience in the utility field will assure our maintaining the same high standards of customer service in Moscow that we have had in the past." Murphy said that the changes are effective immediately. Senior Class play, "The Lovely Duckling." Nov. 10 — 8:00 p. m., at K. H. S. gymnasium. 45-1
