Beer Came Over On The Mayflower. Too!

Although Columbus discovered the natives of Central America brewing a beverage "resembling English beer" in 1502, the Pilgrim fathers also brought it with them.

A diary of the Mayflower's voyage tells why the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock instead of proceeding farther south, as planned. An entry dated December 19, 1620. reads: "For we could not now take time for further search or consideration; our victuals being much spent, especially our beere . . ." A copy of the diary may be seen in the Library of Congress.

So had it not been for beer, some other rock on the Atlantic Coast might now be a tourist shrine. And, for that matter, someone other than John Alden might have wooed Priscilla Mullins on behalf of Myles Standish. For John, a cooper by trade, was aboard the Mayflower in order to take care of the beer barrels.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING

When the fall of 1621 brought the Pilgrims a bountiful harvest, Governor Bradford proclaimed a day of Thanksgiving. The Pilgrims invited Massassoit, a friendly Indian, and his family. But Massassoit took a broad view of relationships and showed up with ninety Indians, so the first great Thanksgiving feast was attended by 140 persons in all - and there were only five mature women to cook for this sizable group. They enjoyed turkey, as we do today, and it is almost certain that beer was on the table, too, for as one account of the time relates, "beer was all but the universal beverage."

The early Americans of New England and New Amsterdam brought with them a oulture which regarded been and ale as both beverage and food - a view shared by nutritionists today.

The bookmobile has been sent to Roise for a new coat of paint inside and out and should be back in Latah County by November 20, in time for this months run. If it should be late in being delivered we will start our run on the day it arrives according to schedule and any day at the beginning that is missed will be added to the end of the run.

The schedule will continue as is for December, with the exception of the Adult Troy Run.On the appointed date we will be at the Big Meadow School in Troy from 1:00 to 2:00 p. m. and downtown for adults from 2:15 to 2:45 p. m. This will be for December only, as we do not expect the bookmobile until November 20. We will cancel the Troy run this month, so that we may have time to load the bookmobile for the Nov-

WEATHER STAYS DRY AND CHILLY

Weather this past week has been almost a complete repetition of the week preceeding — chilly and dry. The air, however, holds quite a percentage of humidity, as clearly shown by the thick, while frost every morn-

Daytime temperatures have been in the mid-fortys to low fifty's though there have been brief hazy or cloudy periods,

At night the mercury column has been dropping to around the 20degree mark.

Local residents have been kept quite busy during off-moments, raking and burning leaves, the trees shedding their greenery slowly but steadily—and some shrubs still are holding theirs, despite the continued low temperatures.

This type of weather has crusted the snow in the back-country hunting areas, and those taking to the woods Sunday say it was "tough hunting," as every step broke through the crust on the snow and as a result the hunter "sounded like a herd of elephants.'
