The area must be smoothed and leveled and top soil added so that grass may grow. This project needs trucks, tractors and labor, as previously stated. Anyone interested in helping please contact Roy Glenn, or any member of the Grange — or call the High School.

FIRE ALARM CALLS TUESDAY MORNING

Tuesday morning, just before 3:00 o'clock, the Kendrick fire alarm sounded, and the Volunteer Fire Department went into action at Burt's Confectionery, where the warehouse portion, at the rear of the building, was on fire.

Due to the solid construction of the warehouse the Fire Laddies had considerable difficulty in getting a hole into the interior so that water might be sprayed on the blaze thick smoke preventing entrance for the Alvin Hall children while their from the front portion of the struc-

Very recently, there has been another unusual development. The Montana Power Company distributed a leaflet in which it argued against the construction of a federal dam which would destroy its plans to build two dams near the site. Now, it seems, the Federal Power Commission is undertaking an investigation to determine the leaflet's cost. TEST SOIL BEFORE FERTILIZING

U. of I. — "Applying costly fertilizers to farm fields before testing the soil is like pouring water in a hole; something may come out of it, and maybe it won't."

So declares G. O. Baker, agronoversity of Idaho.

"Farming is big business today and wise use of fertilizers is a big part of the business," Baker emphasizes. "The cost of a soil test is a dollar and a half. Compared to the difference that the right fertilizer can make on a field's production, the cost is slight.

Fertilizing without first testing the soil can easily lead to applications of fertilizers that the soil already has in plentiful supply. The same fertilizer money could go for needed nutrients in which the soil is deficient, Baker points out. The farmer loses either way, may lose

Q. My portable power saw has been acting sluggish lately and occasionally burns the work. Could you tell me what is responsible for this condition?

A. There's a strong possibility the blade you are using is dull. An unsharpened blade can reduce power by as much as 50 per cent and burn the work by friction heat. If the condition persists after sharpening the blade, have an authorized tool serviceman investigate the trouble.

Q. Is it all right to use a combination blade when cutting soft material with a portable electric saw?

A. The combination blade is satisfactory-and the most popular-for all general wood cutting, but a fine-tooth blade, if available, Select the saw do the job best.

is recommended for ripping such soft materials as fiberboard, plywood, and wallboard up to 14-inch

Here is a list of saw blades and the jobs they do best:

Rip blade-Use for rough-cutting with grain of wood. Its large teeth minimize binding and stick-

Miter blade-This blade is hollow ground to provide extremely smooth cuts without tearing, so should be used where accuracy (interior trim, cabinet work), not speed, is desired.

Cross-cut blade-It produces a smoother cut on cross-cut (cutting across the grain) than combination blade. Suitable for extremely hard woods and some metals. Friction biade-A defivation of the combination blade. It holds edge longer when sawing material which contains nails, grit, and other obstacles.

Metal-cutting blade-Designed for accurate work with non-ferrous metals.

Grooving blade-Ideal for dadoing (grooving against grain) and ploughing (grooving with grain).
