FARMERS HAVE DEFINITE TITHING IDEAS FOR SCHOOL

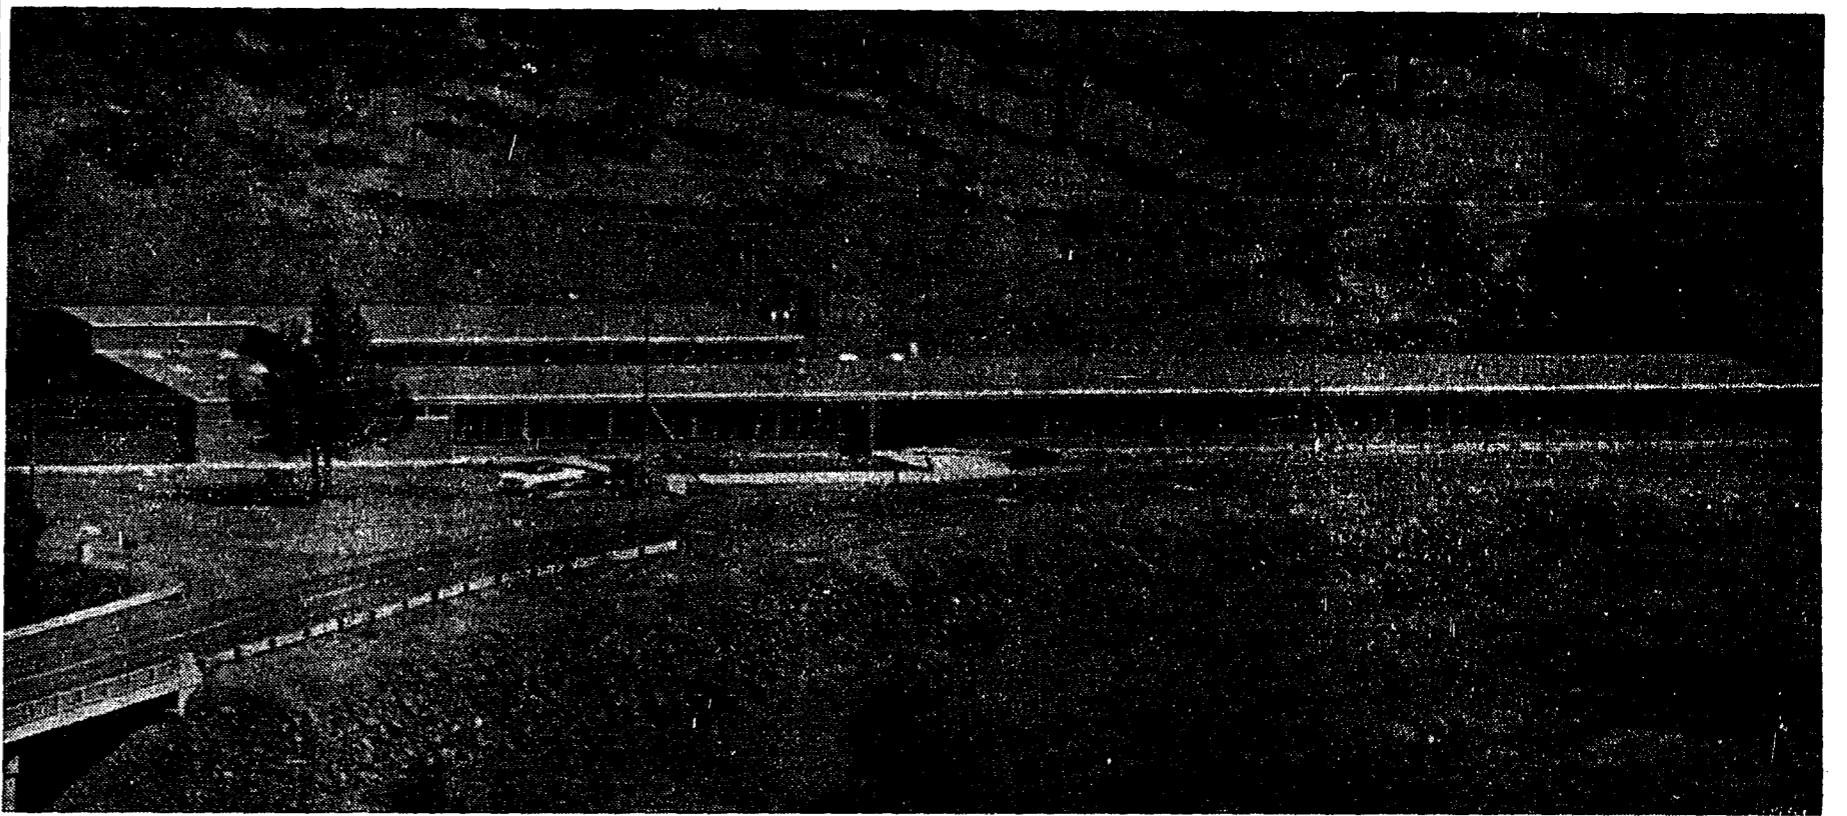

Once upon a time the tithing was an accepted way of paying your personal debt to your religious faith. Some few religions still adhere to the tithing principle; most have, tactically, abandoned it in recognition of other obligations toward government, toward charity and civic and social enterprises.

A group of 30 farmers this week decided upon the tithing principle as a means of accumulating funds to build an addition to the Juliaetta grade school. Their decision to contribute one per cent of their net income to such a fund is to be commended. They thus demonstrate their concern for the education of young children and their dissatisfaction, at the same time, with the principle of levying taxes upon real property as the sole means of erecting school buildings.

They erred, however, in deploring the add valorem (real property) tax as the sole support of the public schools. It is only one source for the support of education. The other support comes from the state through various "hidden" excise levies and the state income tax. Currently the state provides roughly 35 per cent of public school education cost; the goal is 50 per cent state support.

But this does not detract from the spirit of the 30 Kendrick area farmers. Their decision to assess themselves one per cent of their net income recognizes the fairness of an income levy. Their expressed belief that too many people with too many children who do not own property, and thus escape at the local level supporting public education, is recognition of the principle that no one single tax program can fairly reach all people. It is also support for the principle that everyone, no matter how meager his earnings, should contribute something to government. And government includes education.

Income taxes and property taxes do not reach everyone, and thus some people escape paying anything toward support of their governments except through excise levies. This is the logic for using various forms of taxation, or combination of tax levies. To an extent we follow this in Idaho, combining taxes upon property, income and certain excise levies (generally upon "luxury" items).

If this principle were more fully developed through a modest levy upon sales and services the picture would be more fairly balanced, if such a tax were imposed at the same time the levies upon income and property were reduced and some of the excise levies lowered or eliminated.

Two-thirds of the states follow this principle by combining sales, income and property taxes for the support of their public functions and institutions— including the schools. In most of these states the property tax is lower than current rates in most Idaho counties. Only one state—Oregon— has a higher income tax than Idaho and, like Idaho, it has no sales tax or use tax. A measure is now before its Legislature to amend this defect. Bills are ready for introduction at Boise to do the same for Idaho, but the prospects for their passage are, as of today, dim.

It is heartening, however to find a group of individuals like those in the Kendrick area who recognize that Idaho's tax structure is not doing the job fully for public school education, and who decided that they, individually, will do something about it.

And what better way of doing it than by the tithing principle? — Daily Idahoian.

Comment: "When they stated we erred; it was only that the Idahoian misunderstood our statement. We meant that the state did not contribute to school building construction. Farmers Tax Reform Group, Werner Brammer, Chm."

SCHOOL HAS CIVIL DEFENSE TEST

Thursday, Feb. 21st, the schools in Joint District No. 283 held a civil defense test, and Supt. James V. Muscat describes the results as "quite satisfactory."

During the test emergency bus drivers began the runs in a number of instances, were met somewhere along the route by the regular drivers, who then took over and completed taking the children to their homes. The children furthest from Kendrick were not always the last to reach their homes — the run on Cedar ridge, due to poor road conditions, taking the longest. However, all children had been checked in in 1 hour and 15 minutes. The fastest time was in the case of the Southwick grade school children, who were at their homes in just a "matter of minutes."

All Juliaetta Elementary school children (living in the Juliaetta area) were home in 20 minutes — and all Kendrick students living in Kendrick, in less than that.

Said Mr. Muscat: "A few bugs were discovered in this test — and when we run the next one in April, with better road conditions, we know we can cut considerable off that time."

SHORT COURSE IN COMMUNICATIONS

U. of I., Moscow — A farm forestry short school in communications will be held at the University of Idaho, Feb. 25 to March 1. Aim of the school is the improvement of personal communication skills and understanding.

"University of Idaho personnel have arranged a program which will include practical refresher courses in oral and written communications as well as background lectures, tours and activities," said Dr. Raymond Kool, director of the Division of Adult Education, which is sponsoring the school in cooperation with the Idaho Interagency Forestry Committee and the College of Forestry.

Enrollment will be limited to 30 persons to provide individual instruction, said Dr. Kool.

A 10-hour course in practical ideas to improve writing will be offered by Mrs. Ruth H. Boas, instructor in English. Another 10-hour course will cover communications media with information and ideas of how they can be served. These sessions will be taught by Bert Cross, chairman of journalism.

Another practical course which meets two hours each day for five days emphasizes personal speaking. This will be taught by Ernest E. Etlich, instructor in speech.

Other members of the University of Idaho faculty and staff will cover special material of concern to the farm forester and communications.

LOGGERS TO MEET IN SPOKANE

Willis H. Edmund, an executive consultant for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., will be a keynote speaker at the Silver Anniversary Inter-mountain Logging Conference slated for the Spokane Coliseum, March 24 to 27th. Charles P. Keim, ILC secretary, said "all the stops" will be pulled to make the 25th conference the biggest meeting of loggers ever staged in the Pacific Northwest.

More than 1500 are expected to attend the sessions and to view the logging equipment show that will fill the Coliseum and a good share of its huge parking lots.

Edmunds will be the principal speaker opening the conference general sessions Monday morning, Mar. 25.

Keim said the ILC program theme "Economics of Logging" will be developed by a number of speaker and panel members in the three days of general meetings.

He also pointed out that housing accommodations in Spokane have increased and improved, but it is still a good idea for loggers planning to attend to get their reservations in early. They may be mailed to the Spokane Housing Bureau, Spokane Chamber of Commerce, W1020 Riverside Ave., Spokane.

ALL NOT ROSY WITH GAINES WHEAT, WEEDS PROBLEM

Moscow — New Gaines wheat may aggravate our weed problem, reports weed specialist Clarence Seely, University of Idaho.

Several factors make it more difficult to control weeds in Gaines than other wheat variations. The much sought after short straw of Gaines makes for less competition for weeds. Early seeding of Gaines in the fall gives weeds a better start which by spring enables many weeds to have so much growth they are difficult to kill.

Gaines wheat in the early growth stages is a low plant with many leaves, allowing more area to be contacted with 2,4-D. This has caused concern as 2,4-D damage to Gaines has been reported. Seely told the Latah County Weed Committee at a meeting Feb. 2nd at Moscow, "that we must be extra careful with our selective spraying to protect our wheat from spray damage and to kill the weeds."

Mr. Seely suggested that selective spray in the fall is possible, but cautioned the group that the wheat must be at least six weeks old, and better if eight weeks, before spraying. The best chemical is 2,4-D, and rates should be gaged by the kind of weeds and weeks and stage of growth.

Gromwell is one of the toughest of weeds to control in wheat, and it takes two lbs. of actual acid 2,4-D per acre, and this must be applied before the Gromwell is 8 inches tall. For fan weed, mustard and those easy to kill weeds, one lb. of actual acid 2,4-D per acre will do the job. Last year there were several fields of Gaines wheat ruined and not harvested due to weeds, and farmers must be prepared to start this spraying program early in the spring.

The Latah County Weed Committee set up dates for community meetings at which time additional information will be presented on the controlling of weeds in Gaines wheat.

There is no substitute for good food, and you will find every kind to tickle your palate at Blewett's Grocery in Kendrick.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

The fifth and sixth grade students will be selling magazine subscriptions up to March 8th. So far the fifth grade is ahead. The school will realize a certain percent of the sales, and on some of the magazine, the grade school will receive 50 percent.

It makes no difference if it is a new subscription or renewal, the school gets the same amount.

The Juliaetta 5th and 6th grades will play the Cavendish-Teakcan grade school in a basketball game at Cavendish, Friday afternoon, Mar. 1.
