MANY MAKE USE OF SOIL CONSERVATION

Boise — The U. S. D. A.'s Soil Conservation Service assisted 12,108 cooperators of Idaho's 54 Soil and Water Conservation districts in planning and carrying out conservation measures on the land in fiscal 1964. Lee T. Morgan, state conservationist in Boise said 1,045 new conservation plans were prepared in Idaho during the period. These covered 483,419 acres. Another 308 plans covering 175,491 acres were revised during the year.

The state's farmers and ranchers built 143 farm ponds and improved irrigation water management on 389,135 acres. More than 12,906 acres of range were seeded, 49 acres of trees planted, and measures to preserve wildlife established on 36,957 acres. A total of 11,926 acres of cropland was converted to other uses as part of farm and ranch conservation plans.

Planning for community-wide benefits from resources conservation and development received increased attention also during fiscal 1964. Morgan said. Soil mapping was completed on 715,9129 acres of land in cooperation with the University of Idaho and other agencies, part of 65.8 million acres mapped nationally. With proper interpretation the maps can guide urban planning, as soil maps enable engineering interpretations for rural urban use of the areas mapped. They also make possible information for urban development, sewage disposal, recreational development, wildlife habitat and special crops.

The Gem County Soil Survey Report will be published and available for distribution about July or August of this year. Also, it is anticipated that the Teton County Soil Survey Report and the Soil Survey Report of the Kooskia area of Idaho County will be published in 1966.

Some 30 land owners or operators made plans for recreation enterprises, part of nearly 13,000 who did so nationally. Five of these plan to convert to recreation as a primary source of income.

The trend is toward multiple purpose development in small watershed projects, thereby increasing their effectiveness in the rural development program. There were seven new projects in the investigative, planning, design or construction stage.

The projects combine flood prevention with such purposes as recreation, fish and wildlife development, agricultural water management and municipal or industrial water supply.

GENESSEE TOPS TIGERS

The Bulldogs of Genessee took a commanding lead of 23-12 at the half-time mark, and went on to drop the Kendrick Tigers 49-43 in a conference high school basketball game here at Tuesday evening. The Bulldogs held a 12-4 edge at the end of the first quarter, the Tigers being unable to find the range.
Skip Ivie and Mark Hampton were high for the winners with 20 and 13 points, respectively. Gary Craig hit for 16 and Dale Silflow for 12 for Kendrick. The win gives the Bulldogs a 5-2 record.

In the Jr. Varsity game Genessee won the decision 62 to 44.

BANK SAYS IDAHO
 BUSINESS DOING FINE
 OUTLOOK EXCELLENT

Kendrick — Personal income in Idaho during 1964 totaled five percent above that for 1963, and the general outlook for this year is excellent. This is the report of First Security Bank's quarterly news letter which will be distributed soon, it was announced by A. O. Kanikkeberg, manager. The News Letter is edited by Dr. Elroy Nelson, First Security Corporation vice president and economist.

According to preliminary estimates total personal income in Idaho during 1964 was approximately $1.435 billion, or $69 million above that reported for 1963. Throughout the year employment was well above 1963 levels, average wages were higher and a longer work week applied.

Looking to the future the forecast for the business outlook is generally excellent, although certain areas have been adversely affected by flood conditions. Total outlook for agriculture is good, mineral and lumber industries excellent, and trade volume is expected to increase.

Cash receipts from farm marketing in the state during the past year totaled slightly above the $466 million reported for 1963, including the sale of livestock products and crops. Better prices prevailed for major crops and meat animals in the last quarter of the year. Due to increased prices of potatoes, cash receipts from farm marketing in the first quarter of 1965 are expected to be slightly higher than 1964.

Cattle prices moved up significantly from a low point in June, and by year-end were above those prevailing since March of 1963. Prices for cattle should continue at present levels during the early months of the year.

Weather was largely responsible for a wide variation in crop production during 1964, and total tonnage was down 4 percent from the 1963 record because of a short growing season. Wheat, hay and fruit production was above 1963 totals.

Records were established during 1964 in both lumber production and value of mineral production. Preliminary data indicates lumber production totaled almost 1,820 million board feet, 18 percent above the total for 1963. The mineral production total was considerably higher than the previous year, with the highest prices in 10 years prevailing for lead and zinc, and the highest prices since 1920 for silver. These prices reflect a completely new outlook for non-ferrous metals industries in the state.

Electricity utilized in 1964 totaled eight billion kwh, a 10 percent increase over 1963, and construction contracts awarded in the state approached $180 million, another all-time record.

Non-agricultural employment during the year maintained levels well above 1963's corresponding months. By November total non-agricultural employment had reached a figure 3,100 above that of the previous year, with the major increases in mining and processing of metals, lumber and paper, construction, and in all the service and trade industries.

Department store sales in leading Idaho cities for 1964 were reported up 9 percent. Bank loans by November had increased 12.6 percent from the previous year, and bank demand deposits at $410 million were up 8.8 percent. Time and savings deposits at $286 million were up 7.9 percent.

WATER, SANITATION

Chicago — Water pollution and improper sanitation rank as the number one rural health problem, according to the American Medical Association. An AMA survey indicates that the shortage of uncontaminated water for family and farm use is an increasingly serious matter and unless adequate sewage disposal facilities are provided for, will inevitably lead to serious outbreaks of contagious diseases.

LITTERBUGS PESTS

Litterbugs continue to be a disgrace to our streets and highways, according to an organization called "Keep America Beautiful." The higher standard of living and increased amount of leisure time, says KAB, results in Americans producing more trash annually.
