last survey of roads and bridges in this district showed many more spots damaged than at first was believed - including approaches to the Bear Creek bridge, the Pine Creek bridge, unexpected "slips" in the road beds, and more small slides.

He added that conferences had been held with members of the Army Corps of Engineers who were here surveying flood damage, and it was hoped that some aid would be available to re-channel Bear Creek from its junction with Little Bear Creek; for road and bridge repairs. However, no official word has been re-

Weather Settles Down a Bit

This past week has seen some settling down of the weather - al though we have had some sharp rain storms, of brief duration; a brief hail storm — unusually high winds, which struck Friday night, and, believe it or not — some sunshine.

Saturday and Sunday were days of cloudiness, with interludes of sunshine, Sunday afternoon residents saw the sun for several hours! Sunday night was clear and cold,

Mrs. Alan Medalen, Orofino, spent with ice forming on the puddles at Wednesday with her parents, Mr. and the edges of the highway and in the fields.

Monday saw rain, snow, hail here "watery" sunshine.

Monday night a Northern Pacific work train arrived in Kendrick, and with it came several carloads of huge boulders, to be used as rip-rap along the flood damaged tracks, and a pile-driver crane, which was used in placing the boulders.

It takes materials of this size to stay in place when flood waters begin to surge - particularly as they have this year.

SEED PEAS THRIVE IN NORTH IDAHO

U. of I., Moscow - Northern Idaho's seed pea industry thrives be-cause there are fewer disease dannation. But this does not mean the area is disease free, said Harry S. Fenwick, University of Idaho extension plant pathologist.

Fenwick listed four soil-borne diseases which can be seen in the area every year. Losses vary, ranging up to severe losses in a few fields each year.

The four diseases are "Ascochyta," two types of water mold fungi and species of Ascachyta can be carried through seed, Fenwick noted. Cool, wet, growing season conditions in 1964 seemed to help the diseases.

Although these diseases are present in the soil, they do not pose

Development of the new beans called Red Mexican UI-36 and Red Mexican UI-37, is described in a recent bulletin of the university's the bulletin are Leslie L. Dean, associate plant pathologist at the university's Twin Falls Experiment station, and Marshall J. LeBaron, superintendent of the station.

In addition to maturing at times appropriate to Idaho growers, the two varieties are resistant to two strains of common bean-mosiac virus and to curly top virus.

Red Mexican UI-36 and UI-37 developed by crossing Great Northern UI-56 and Red Mexican UI-34. The cross was made in 1953, and progeny were carried through eight generations of selection before being increased.

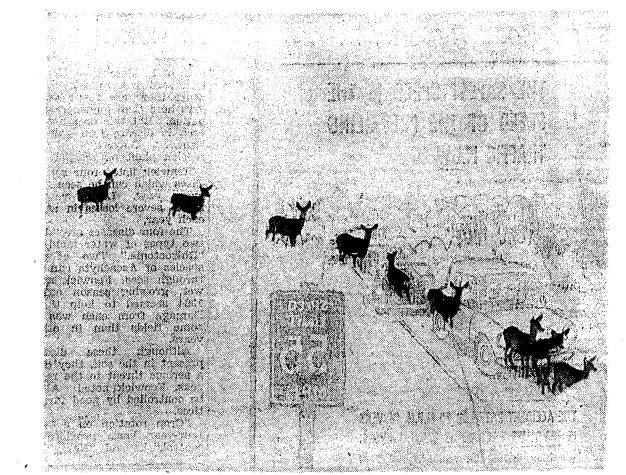

Dean and LeBaron found several advantages to Red Mexican UI-36 over older varieties. The seed-coat color of UI-36 is more uniform from seed to seed and is a more attractive shade of red than that of presently grown commercial Red Mexicans. The earlier maturity age of UI-36 will minimize loss of yield due to both late spring and early fall frosts.

The Red Mexican UI-37 was found to be an early-maturing strain, which will permit production in certain areas of Idaho where the length of the growing season restrict planting to only the earliest of bean varictics. A five-year study showed that the yield of UI-37 was generally less than that of some older Red Mexican * varieties according to Dean and Le-

The Ice Age is older than previously believed, say Columbia University scholars. A study of deep - sea sediment cores indicates that the Pleistocene ice age began about 1.5 billion years ago, half a milion years earlier than shown in present geological charts. During the epoch, ice covered Canada, Northern United States, Northwestern Europe, Northern Asia and most of the high mountain regions of the Northern Hemisphere.

Idaho's big game animals got their "second wind" during the late December thaw, and game managers believe most of them will come through the remainder of the winter in good shape.

A Service of The Thor Research Center For Better Farm Living

An easily constructed linen closet with space-saving, pull-out drawers is the answer to many home storage problems. Provisions of this practical closet include space at the bottom for a rollaway clothes hamper and tank-type vacuum cleaner.

This project will provide an organized linen area in a compact, six-shelf closet with a foot of utility space at the top and two feet at the bottom.

This type of linen closet can be a great space saver in the average home.

Plans are designed for an average-size area 24 inches deep with a standard door of 34 inches by 80 inches high. Specifications, however, can easily be adapted to fit other closet areas.

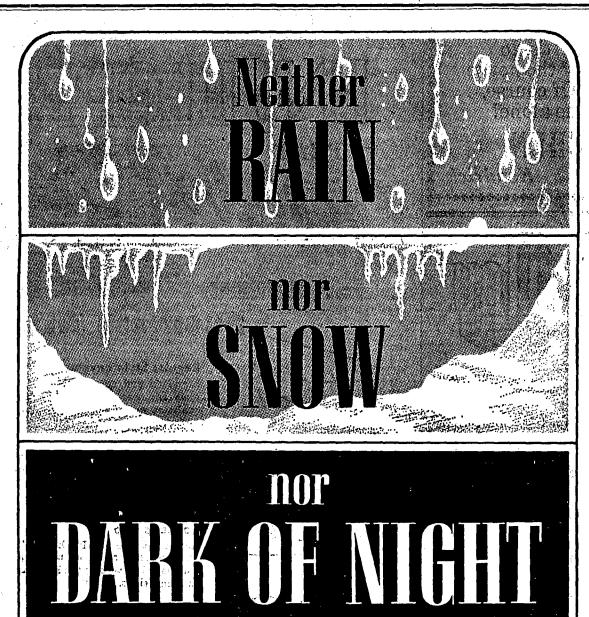

The sides of this closet are lined with 3 inch hardboard. The proper alignment can be assured by inserting a filler block of the same wood along the door stop, so when the liner is in place it will be flush with the stop. Liners are supported with 34-inch boards in the corners and midway along the closet wall.

Maple drawer slides are placed at the proper intervals and screwed through the hardboard into wooden supports. Drawers are of simple construction and utilize snag-proof bottoms of inch hardboard. It is wise to allow ample space on each side of the drawers so they run smoothly without binding.

Design and handles are added by notching the center of each drawer with a portable electric jig saw, which can do all the cutting required by this project.

Plans, for the closet include specifications for a rollaway hamper, which makes another fine spare-time project.

(To receive free plans for the space-saving linen closet and rollaway hamper, write to Thor Research Center, Marengo, III.)
