

DON'T THINK SPRING IS HERE, BECAUSE IT CERTAINLY ISN'T

Following a couple of really beautiful and balmy days last Wednesday and Thursday, some local residents apparently were beginning to feel that "spring had sprung" but this was certainly not the case.

Friday was rather a chill, disagreeable day, with cloud cover, but no precipitation.

Saturday saw a heavy white frost in the morning, and by mid-afternoon a gusty gale was upon us, whirling dead leaves and trash through the air, to be followed by a real rain storm that evening.

Late Saturday night just enough snow fell here in the valley to whiten the ground, but on top of the hills the depth ranged up to four inches, and during this time the thermometer fell from 42 to 30 degrees — all in about an hour.

Sunday morning dawned chill and raw, but the sun broke through a few times for brief periods until late afternoon, when it came and stayed.

Monday morning we awakened to a thermometer reading of 20 degrees, and those on top of the hills reported readings as low as 6 above, that reading coming from the Cecil Choate home at Teakean. The day remained sunny, but chilly.

WORK TRAIN HERE SINCE FEBRUARY 8

The first N. P. work train arrived here on Thursday, Feb. 4, following the damaging floods of the preceding days. It left for three days to do emergency work elsewhere, then returned February 8th, and has been headquartered here since that time.

During this time the train and its crew have been placing huge boulders or rip-rap along the tracks between Mile Post 109, just east of Kendrick, and Arrow Junction. Somewhere between 85 and 90 cars of rock have been placed to prevent track wash-outs, and the total is expected to go up to between 120 and 130 cars.

The granite boulders used weigh up to five and six tons, and some even more, says Wallace Oakley, depot agent.

WILD TURKEYS DO WELL IN IDAHO

Boise — Idaho wild turkey, an offspring of 39 birds transplanted to the lower Salmon river country from Colorado, was one of nine recently live-trapped and moved to Craig Mountain, south of Lewiston, where it is hoped that the birds also will take hold. An estimated 500 to 1,000 wild turkeys now strut along the lower Salmon river as the result of the Colorado releases.

TALAPOIN MONKEY INTEREST SCIENCE

A Talapoin monkey, the first successful bred in a laboratory, is the darling of Emory University scientists. The Talapoin monkey is the smallest old world species of primate and inhabits the mangrove swamps of west Africa. The species of primate, is green with yellowish markings and a black smudge on each cheek, is remarkable because it apparently is immune to tuberculosis while most of its near relatives are very susceptible.

Secondhand atom smashers have no market, the University of Chicago discovered. When the school advertised a no-longer-used 200-ton 100-million-volt "Betatron" for sale at a price of only $100,000 — a tenth of the estimated replacement cost — there were no takers. University spokesmen discovered that no institution, acting without government-supported research, could afford the equipment and finally the University of Chicago had to dismantle the Betatron and sell the components.

Oil well technicians utilize natural atomic radiation to pinpoint the level at which a deep shaft should be perforated for oil. Oil-promising formations in shale, sandstone and limestone contain a certain amount of radioactivity, according to experts, and by taking radiation counts at various points in the shaft they can detect the formation most likely to yield oil. No Refrigeration Needed Milk can be kept fresh for periods up to six months without refrigeration, reports a British dairy company. The milk is sterilized by an ultra-high temperature process. Better Peanut Butter has purer "peanutty" taste because it doesn't contain the hard fats added to packaged spreads to prevent oil separation.

Education should include training in the art of living with one's fellow man.

There is no substitute for good food, and you will find every kind to tickle your palate at Blewett's Grocery in Kendrick. 1-adv

MUST PAY S.S. TAX

All self-employed persons including those over 65 years of age, if they made a net profit of $400 or more from business operations, are required to file federal income tax returns, Internal Revenue director Calvin E. Wright said Wednesday. He explained they are liable for self-employment social security taxes even if they are receiving social security benefits. This is the one exception to the general rule that persons having under $600 gross income ($1200 if over 65) don't have to file income tax returns, Wright said.

CONSERVATION CONVENTION ENDS

Portland — Soil and water conservationists ended their 19th annual convention here confident of major political support and girded for battle to preserve the 30-year federal-state-local partnership in conservation on the land.

The five-day convention was at the Portland Hilton Hotel February 7-11.

After five-days of speech making, some 1500 delegates to the National Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts convention went their separate ways by plane, train and automobile but vowing to remain unified in their cause.

Some delegates flew off to Hawaii for an NACD sponsored tour. Senator George McGovern, from South Dakota, added his assurance of support for continuing technical assistance in soil and water conservation to the nation's landowners and operators through locally governed districts.

Senator McGovern called proposals to "shrink public responsibility" by requiring districts or landowners to pay into a $20,000,000 revolving fund "penny-wise and pound-foolish."

Speaking at the association's annual banquet he said:

"Planning to make America more beautiful and at the same time proposing to cut back the soil and water conservation program on private lands — the program that has brought more beauty to America than any other in our history — is wholly inconsistent. A conservation farm is one of our loveliest sights."

On Tuesday (February 9), delegates heard Oregon Governor Mark Hatfield — who keynoted the Republican convention last year in San Francisco — offer to help in the battle to defeat the revolving fund proposal.

"Implementation of the Budget Bureau's proposals would constitute a complete reversal of a sound national policy, whereby technical services to landowners has been provided without charge in an effort to encourage scientifically developed conservation practices," Hatfield said.

On the same day, the NACD Council leveled a stinging rebuke, aimed at the proposal in the form of a resolution detailing a long list of reasons for their action. The resolution promised an all-out fight, national in scope, and called for an immediate study to determine the probable effects of the proposal.

The council, in related resolutions, asked for increased appropriations for the Soil Conservation Service and opposed a proposed $100,000,000 reduction in funds allocated annually to the Agricultural Conservation program for cost sharing certain conservation practices.

President Marion S. Monk Jr., of Batchelor, Louisiana, set the convention tone Monday when he said the revolving fund proposal would set conservation back 10 years.

With floods in the Northwest and violent windstorms creating new havoc in the drought-ridden Great Plains, the conservation of the nation's soil and water resources is clearly more urgent now than ever before, Monk said.

A. Lars Nelson, Seattle, overseer of The National Grange, said on Wednesday:

"There is absolutely no justification in the national interest for reducing appropriations, nor for diverting appropriations, nor for charging fees. Economy should be practiced wherever possible. However, when applied to an effective, on-going program, it is short-sighted."

"National interest does not lie in short-sighted new policies, nor in slowing, stopping, nor scrapping those gained since the inception of the Soil Conservation Service in 1935," Nelson said.

Donald A. Williams, administrator of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, said the technical guidance available through soil and water conservation districts is the "bread and butter" of resource conservation.

"No magic will change that fact," Williams said. "America's landowners and operators — especially the low-income and family farms — continue to need this kind of technical services if the soil and water conservation problems of the nation are to be solved."

Not all the talk was of the burning issue — the proposed revolving fund to shift conservation costs to districts, however.

Charles H. Stoddard, director of the U. S. Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Management discussed on Wednesday the cooperation of Soil and Water Conservation Districts and BLM in resource conservation. SCDs can help put public land to best use for long-range benefits, Stoddard said.

Bernard Orell, Tacoma, Washington, vice-president of Weyerhaeuser Company, speaking Wednesday also, urged cooperation of farm groups, stockmen's associations, the timber industry and others to insure continued success of the tree-farm program. A healthy tree-farm program is essential to the economic future of the United States.

"As the demand for timber in the United States increases rapidly, the small woodlot farmer will have a great competitive advantage. He has easy access to his lands and he is close to the market," Orell said.

Committee sessions held much of interest with talks on poverty, farm forestry, recreation and wildlife, water resources, district operations, shore erosion, public lands and many other facets of conservation in which NACD is involved.
