and forest owners alike acclaim as the most fair, most equitable, and most modern forest tax law in the nation.

The new law provides for annual taxes only on the land, and this valuation is based on the productivity of the land. Timber is assessed only once, at the time of harvest, and this tax will be at the same rate as for other personal property.

State Forester Roger Guernsey reports that Idaho's new law should make tree farming especially attractive in Idaho. He said the twin important features of Idaho's new law are: 1. The tax is based on productivity of the land, and, 2. The Timber crop is taxed only once, as are other crops.

The forester stated: "It is significant that Idaho's new law includes provisions similar to the recommendations just made to Georgia's governor by his special Study Commission. Georgia is one of the top, outstanding private tree farming states in the country."

WATER RESOURCES REPORT DEVELOPED

Wash., D. C. A study report on water resources which Senator Len Jordan prepared for former President Dwight Eisenhower today came nearer the action stage as the Idaho Senator joined in sponsoring a measure to create a Water Resources Council.

Senator Jordan noted that he participated in making the report when he was serving as an advisor to President Eisenhower on water resources in 1956. One of the principle suggestions of the report was the creation of a Water Resources Council, the Idaho Senator recalled.

With the provisions of the bill, the council would study and report on the adequacy of supplies of water necessary to meet the water requirements in each water resource region in the United States, Jordan explained. The proposed council would also establish principles, standards and procedures for Federal participants in the preparation of comprehensive regional or river basin plans, he continued.

Jordan said the bill is now under study by the Senate Interior Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation of which he is a member. The measure establishes procedures for the formation of river basin commissions which shall serve as coordinators of Federal, state and interstate, and local plans for the development of water and related land resources in its area, he told the Subcommittee.

To assist the states in developing and participating in the development of comprehensive water and related land and resources plans, the bill authorizes the appropriation of 5 million in each of the next ten succeeding fiscal years, the Senator re-

PRUNE THOSE TREES AND SHRUBS NOW

Moscow — Early spring is a good time to prune ornamental trees and shrubs, says Tony Horn, horticulturist of the University of Idaho extension service. At that time the framework of the plant is easy to see because leaves are not out. Dead wood can be detected readily and the plant can be trimmed to a desirable shape. Avoid "dehorning" trees, the specialist advises. Such pruning will ruin the appearance. If it is necessary to reduce the height of a tree because of wires or other obstructions, it can be done with a minimum of unsightly damage by cutting back to outside laterals and preserving all possible natural beauty. Spring-blooming shrubs, such as forsythia, spirea, flowering quince and lilacs are generally pruned just after blooming. This permits full value of the bloom this year and encourages production of wood for next year's flowers. Summer-blooming shrubs such as hydranges, kerria, honeysuckle and butterfly bush can be pruned in the early spring while they are dormant. Clematis and other vines that produce flowers on the current season's growth are pruned in the spring by thinning out dead and weak canes.

Annual pruning of hybrid tea roses is desirable to prevent development of a briar patch. The time is just as the buds are bursting. Take out all dead canes. Horn recommends, by cutting at least an inch into live wood. Crossed branches can be corrected by removing the weaker branch. Pruning canes to about eight inches produces bigger blooms. Cut about one-quarter inch above a strong bud that faces outward. Slope the cut to the inside. Healing is assisted by dabbing an asphalt compound on the wound. A free bulletin about pruning is available at the county agent's office.

ASK MEMORIAL BE CONSIDERED

Washington D. C. -- Representative Compton I. White, Jr., D-Idaho, has asked Congress to give serious consideration to a memorial from the Idaho Legislature asking that factors other than population be considered in its reapportionment. White asked that the full text of Senate Joint Memorial No. 1 be entered into the Congressional Record and said he supports the aims of the measure. He made the request last week.

The Memorial calls for a Constitutional convention on reapportionment. It was overwhelmingly approved recently by the Idaho Legislature.

Following the Supreme Court decision of last June which requires the Idaho Legislature to reapportion itself, White introduced a resolution that would amend the Constitution to reserve exclusive reapportionment power to state legislatures.

"When hearings were called on the proposal," White said in his statement to the Speaker of the House, "I stated the basis of my sponsorship runs deeper than the inconvenience and impracticality of forcing state legislatures to meet court deadlines at inopportune times."

While continuing to support his resolution to Congress, White said the Memorial should receive the fullest consideration.

QUALITY WOOL WILL PAY OFF

Moscow — Quality wool bring the best returns. The better the package at shearing time, the more the clip will bring, Homer Futter, Latah county agent, reminded sheepmen this week. Payments under the national wool act are made according to a percentage method that adjusts for such factors as grade, quality and preparation. The percentage is determined after the end of the marketing year and represents the figure necessary to bring the national wool average market price up to the previously announced incentive level.

The percentage rate of wool payments for the year ended last December will be announced late in March. Payments will begin shortly after April 1st.

Improving individual clips, authorities say, provides users of wool with material that does not require extra handling in the textile mill, and is therefore worth more to the producer as well as to the industry as a whole.

Never get mad at an individual who doesn't know as much as you do.

A Service of The Thor Research Center For Better Farm Living...

QUESTION: I have had good success with trim and shutter paint in regard to long-lasting finishes. Is it feasible to use such paint in painting the side of a house or garage?

ANSWER: Trim and shutter paint is attractive, doubly so because of its longevity. If applied to expansive areas, such as house or garage siding, the result would be large areas of cracked and checkered paint.

Limit trim and shutter type paint to small areas.

This is because the trim paint is too hard and is unable to contract and expand fast enough on large areas to be of lasting value. At the same time, you shouldn't use house body paint for trim purposes because it chalks in limited areas and eventually is washed down by rain.

QUESTION: I'm going to panel a wall of our living room with 1/2-inch hardwood random planks. Can these panels be applied to a plaster wall so they will not project beyond the wood trim?

ANSWER: Although it usually is possible to attach wood panels of this thickness to the plaster with contact adhesive, it may be wise to write the manufacturer of the panels and get his specifications.

If an adhesive is used to hold the panels in place, nail a base molding at the floor and crown mold at the ceiling line to anchor the planks at top and bottom.

QUESTION: What can I do to remove dark water stains from natural wood trim?

ANSWER: Use sandpaper to remove the dark stains. Avoid the use of bleaches, if possible, to prevent a patchy effect.

PARK PATER

BY MRS. JERRY SMITH

AND THE SEASON IS??? - What started out as a lovely "April Shower" Thursday, turned into about five inches of not-so-lovely "Winter Wonderland" by Friday afternoon. People who had been out raking yards and cleaning flower beds began to wonder if they shouldn't be waxing skis and restringing snowshoes instead! The snow had melted in most places by Monday morning, and the crocuses and daffodils could again show that spring is, indeed, on the way.

ANOTHER LANDMARK GONE - The Park school house has gone the way of other traces of the larger population of the Park area. The building, built just after the turn of the century to replace the log school house the community had outgrown, was built on land that was deeded by its owner to the school district for the length of time it would be needed for school purposes. The deed stated the land was to revert to the owner of the rest of the tract if the time should come that the school was no longer in use. Since the property is now owned by Charley Enger, the title actually reverted to him in 1951, when the school house was closed and the Park District consolidated with the Deary District. As with most transactions of this kind, the transfer of title took some time, with the Enger family finally receiving the papers last fall. Since he had other uses for some of the materials in the building, he hired Charles Stratton to tear it down. This project was completed last week and the refuse, including the out-buildings, were burned afterward. The rock and cistern is all that remains, and it will soon be filled so that the "School House Acre" will again be ready for the plow.

CLUB NOTES - About 15 members of the Boulder Creek Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. Mickey Baumgartner, March 25, for an all-day work session. She gave a lesson in "Beginning Knitting," with the assistance of Mrs. Sharon Churchill and Mrs. Margie Halseth. A potluck "never tasted before" luncheon was enjoyed at noon. In the afternoon Mrs. Hattie Hamilton gave a demonstration and talk on "Choosing Color for the Home."

On Wednesday Mrs. Ted McKinney joined four other members of the Club at the home of Mrs. Violet Freytag at Helmer to review lessons from the Intermediate Sewing Lessons being taught at Deary. The final lesson was given Monday, with a style show and demonstration of sewing techniques scheduled for May 6 at the Mountain Home Grange Hall. The show will coincide with County Home Demonstration Day observances.
