NEW WHEATS ARE BEING DEVELOPED BY UNIVERSITY

U. of I., Moscow - Three new stripe rust-resistant wheat potentially important to Idaho growers are being thoroughly tested by the University of Idaho Agricultural Ex-

Lemhi and Federation, according to neth Dennier at their home in Lew-iston. The self-invited guests were iston. The third is a hard red winter wheat in the Itana class. All are being increased this year with the goal of releasing them for production in the 1966 crop year.

Tom Dennier and Rev. and Mrs. Otto G. Ehlen were Sunday, June 13 dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denlier, Mrs. Don Lombardi and children, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denlier, Mrs. John Mrs. Walter Denli

The new varieties were reported by experiment station administrators meeting at Moscow with members of the Idaho Wheat Commission. The commission provides financial support for University wheat research programs.

The new winter wheat variety, Itana 65, was developed in the wheat breeding research program directed by W. K. Pope, agronomist at the university's Moscow station. The stripe resistance is "better than any commercial hard red winter wheat in the west," Pope says. It has a high protein level and good tillering capacity. In other characteristics, it is similar to Itana.

The Lemhi-type spring wheat is a selection made by D. W. Sunderman, USDA agronomist at the University's Aberdeen experiment station. In addition to carrying resistance to stripe rust, it has yield and quality equal to Lemhi. These same factors high yield, high quality and stripe rust resistance — are also characteristics of the Federation type spring wheat selection.

Wheat commission members also heard reports on the university's soil borne disease research program, the operation of the wheat quality laboratory at Aberdeen, and a southern Idaho wheat marketing study.

Research on soil borne diseases, principally snowmoulds and foot rots is being carried out by D. M. Huber, plant pathologist at Moscow. He is investigating affects of cultural and fertilization practices on soil organsims, evaluating chemical control methods and working coperatively with plant breeders in an attempt to develop resistant lines of wheat. The Aberdeen Wheat Quality laboratory, headed by Martin Wise, has been an important aid to the state's wheat breeding research programs since it was opened in 1960. All potential new Idaho varieties are tested there for milling and baking quality. The wheat marketing study by G. Marousek, associate agricultural economist, is designed to provide the first comprehensive analysis of south Idaho wheat marketing programs and patterns, and the price cost factors which affect production and distribution of wheat in the area. Each of these projects is supported in part by the Idaho Wheat Commis- John Chapman. sion. For fiscal 1965-66, the comnow underway in the University Agricultural Experiment station.

HINTS ON SUMMER

Pinch out the terminal tips of zinnias to grow more flowers. The plants will put out more branches be-

A soil mulch is important in the summer care of your annuals. Any loose material, such as wood shavings or peanut hulls, spread two inches deep on the ground around plants works well. Weeds won't come through, soil dryness is reduced and the ground stays cooler.

Your garden soil in mid-summer sun may go over 100 degrees. That's much too hot for shallow rooted plants like zinnas, marigolds and a host of others. Growth of flower buds comes to a halt with roots in hot, dry soil.

So, to produce more flowers,, pinch out growing tips on your tall-grow-ing annuals. And keep your plants in better condition by covering the soil with mulch.
