ABOUT NEXT WEEK'S KENDRICK GAZETTE

Again the Gazette is faced with a double holiday — the 4th of July falling on Sunday, and the Monday following being a legal holiday — with no mail moving, and most places of business being closed.

Again we will be forced to put out a "bob-tailed issue" putting into type such news, pictures, etc., as time and space will allow. Our correspondents will do their best — we'll do our best. Please bear with us in these circumstances beyond our control.

PROPAGATE SALMON AT HATCHERY

Boise — Garrett Craig, fish culturist operating the Oxbow Salmon hatchery for the Idaho Fish and Game department, uses a screen to crowd out the last of some 650,000 fingerling fall chinook salmon from the raceway into the Snake river to begin their seaward migration. These fingerlings are progeny of adult fall chinook spawners that were trapped at Oxbow last October and November.

Fall chinook salmon are larger than the two other races of spring and summer chinooks that migrate to Idaho every year to spawn and die. Big ones are in excess of 40 pounds.

Idaho's famous captive geyser near Soda Springs is the largest carbon dioxide gas geyser in the world and shoots 175 feet into the air.

PRIEST LAKE GETS YEARLING TROUT

IS DISTRICT DEPUTY

Moscow — Frank J. Harstein, manager of the Moscow office of the Idaho Department of Employment, and Past Grand Knight of the Moscow Knights of Columbus, has been appointed District Deputy for District No. 6 of the Idaho Knights of Columbus. District No. 6 includes K. C. Councils at Lewiston, Orofino, Genesee and Moscow. In addition Mr. Harstein will serve as chairman of the Fraternal Activities committee for the Idaho State K. C. Council.

ASTRONOMY HOLDS VALUABLE PLACE

U. of I., Moscow — An Idaho farmer's interest and investment in astronomy has brought the celestial bodies within sight of University of Idaho physics students. The late Richard Paluthe, a farmer near Moscow, was an avid astronomy hobbyist. He hoped some day to set up an observatory on his farm to study the heavens about which he had read. However, Paluthe did not live to fulfill his dream. His widow, Mrs. Lena Paluthe, decided he late husband's hopes could become reality at the University of Idaho. Gifts from her to the university of telescopes and accompanying equipment have stocked the observatory atop the new Physical Sciences building, providing a laboratory for advanced physics students. This spring, as the weather warmed, the astronomy class, Physics 104, taught by Dr. Edson Peck, professor of physics, met voluntarily evenings to observe the movements of the stars and planets they had studied in the classroom. "The general astronomy course has not been set up as yet as a laboratory course," explained Dr. Peck. "Students, most of them graduate assistants, met Tuesday and Thursday evenings to gain a feeling for astronomy and to experience the sense of beauty an observatory provides. Observation is extremely important to an astronomy class, not only for information, but to inspire students. "Students practiced finding the time by the stars. "Early this year we had Jupiter in view, then Saturn and Mars, and, of course, the moon comes and goes."

Dr. Emmet Spiker, assistant professor of physics, who met Paluthe soon after moving to Moscow 20 years ago, said the gift to the university includes several telescopes, lenses, mirrors and special equipment used to grind lenses. "Mirrors up to a foot in diameter may be ground on the equipment Paluthe built," said Spiker. "This equipment may give students valuable experience in building and repairing observatory telescopes."

THE WHYS OF THE BOXCAR SHORTAGE

Wash., D. C. — Railroad freight car shortages have become a problem of national importance. Once faced primarily in the agricultural midwest, this shortage has — in the past decade — considerably reduced our ability to ship freight by rail.

The total number of freight cars in the nation since 1956 has fallen by 200,000 — a loss of 11 percent, and a decrease of 4 million tons in freight car capacity. During this time, moreover, the nation's output increased by more than 30 percent.

The problem of a freight car shortage is further complicated by the fact that those in existence are not used with maximum efficiency. Boxcars owned by the western railroads ship goods, of course, from the west and midwest to the eastern markets. Once unloaded, however, these boxcars are commonly rented by the eastern railroads at $2.79 per day. This low per diem rate, in turn, is a great impetus for eastern railroads to rent rather than to build and own an adequate quantity of boxcars. The result is a scarcity of boxcars for shippers in the west and midwest. And the increased use of specialized freight cars has meant a further decrease in cars equipped to haul agricultural products. At present the ICC does not have the power to set rental rates. It does have the authority to issue Car Service orders which require a certain railroad to return a specific number of cars to another railroad at a certain time. However, this cannot be done until an emergency arises. Each harvest season these emergencies do occur. But while shippers wait for the cars to return from the east, the grain elevators are filled to overflowing and produce is stacked on the ground with risk of spoilage. Consequently there is a very great need to correct this problem in the interest of both Idaho agriculture and the domestic economy.

TUITION TO GO UP AT UNIVERSITY

U. of I., Moscow — Tuition for both undergraduate and graduate out-of-state students at the University of Idaho, Idaho State University and Lewis-Clark Normal School will rise $35 a semester starting this fall, it was announced last week following action taken by the State Board of Education and the University of Idaho Board of Regents.

Out-of-state tuition for all three schools was $155 per semester the past year. For the next academic year it will be $190 per semester. Board action will further affect some out-of-state students, starting in the fall of 1966. For a number of years, out-of-state students attaining a 3.50 average out of a possible 4.00 have been refunded their out-of-state tuition as a scholarship award. Starting with the fall of 1966 this practice will be discontinued.

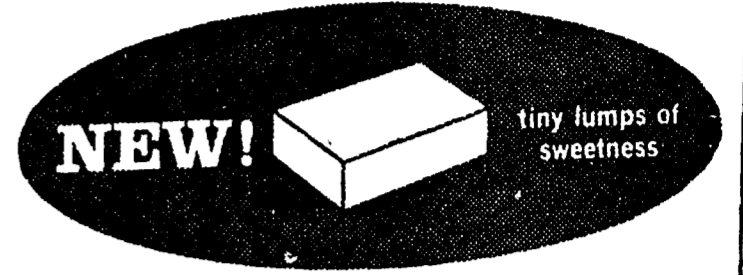

In-state students at the three institutions of higher learning pay no tuition, but pay registration fees. At the University of Idaho these fees for the coming year will be $100.80 per semester. Out-of-state students also pay these fees in addition to the out-of-state tuition.

Equipment used in preparing or applying pesticides should be thoroughly cleaned after use, say agricultural scientists of the University of Idaho.

PROPER CHICKEN FEED IMPORTANT

U. of I., Moscow — Poultrymen who feed their laying hens a "complete diet" mash may be wasting money if they feed supplemental oyster shell or other calcium supplements.

U. of I. poultry research shows that even the best laying hens need only 3 to 4 percent calcium in their diet. Most feed companies now add this much calcium to formulated rations, according to C. F. Peterson, head of the university's department of poultry science.

Oyster shell, a calcium supplement, is often fed free-choice to assure good egg shell quality. The Idaho studies indicate it costs more than it is worth when used with a complete diet mash containing 3 to 4 percent calcium.

"Yes hens will eat more calcium if oyster shell is available," Peterson agrees. "Actually, they'll eat more than they need and more than they can use efficiently. Shell quality will be no better than if the hens were fed the mash alone."

Peterson's studies compared laying hens fed a complete-diet, 3.75 percent calcium mash with hens fed low calcium mash plus free-choice oyster shell. The latter group consumed nearly 4.5 percent calcium. The egg shell quality was no different.

Check your present ration, Peterson suggests. If it contains 3 to 4 percent calcium, no supplement is needed. The mash should not contain over 4 percent calcium, however.

A calcium supplement is necessary if you feed your hens farm grains, or a laying mash plus whole grain, Peterson adds. In both cases the hens will need additional calcium.

4-H CLUBS LIKE LBJ BEAUTY CAMPAIGN

Chicago — National leaders of the vast 4-H Club movement have pledged active support for President LBJ's program for natural beauty. Named as honorary chairman of the campaign was the president's youngest daughter, Luci Baines Johnson.

America's 2,250,000 4-H Club members and 500,000 volunteer leaders are expected to spearhead the program, not only in rural areas, but in their suburban and urban home areas as well. They will seek the aid of their families and other adult and youth groups interested in conserving and improving the nation's natural beauty resources.

Joining in the action program are long-time supporters of 4-H and other community improvement programs. Through the National 4-H Service committee there will be incentives and recognition to individuals, clubs and counties in the National 4-H Community Beautification program.

Individually, 4-H members may earn recognition at county, state and national levels including medals of honor, savings bonds, trips to the National 4-H Club Congress and educational scholarships. These awards will recognize achievement of the individual in beautifying his home grounds and participation in community improvement activities.

Clubs will be encouraged to engage in projects of a neighborhood or community nature and will be recognized with attractive certificates. Although a club's activities may center around work it can do as a group, it is expected that many 4-H Clubs will volunteer their services and enlist others in programs for total community beauty.

Supervision of the program will be handled by the Cooperative Extension Services of the Land-Grant universities and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

TROOPS ENJOY LATE MOTION PICTURES

Farragut, Idaho — Movies are better than ever — even in the middle of a forest.

Ask members of the Sixth U. S. Army Support Group, currently setting up facilities for the Girl Scout Senior Roundup in Farragut State Park. Every night they enjoy some of Hollywood's latest products in a huge tent theater.

Of course there were some problems, but army ingenuity proved itself equal to the task.

"We were able to get a cinema-scope lens," said Lt. Earl K. Burton, the signal officer, "but we had to make our own screen. We built a form, put four bedsheets on it, and presto, we had it. Three films are sent each week from army headquarters in San Francisco.

How is attendance at this "forest theater?" Close to capacity. For one thing its about the only activity except for volleyball games and a community center — and admission is free.

NATION USES HUGE QUANTITY OF POWER

Spokane — The nation's electric power systems put 1.6 million kilowatts of electricity on the lines during the first three months of this year, George M. Brunzell, president of the Washington Water Power Co. reported this week.

He said that as for the future, the electric industry would install a record 62.9 million kilowatts of new generating capacity, through 1968, and later to meet the public's growing power needs. The figures were contained in the Edison Electric Institute's 37th annual power survey.

Mr. Brunzell said that 81 percent of the 62.9 million kilowatts would be in the form of thermal generating systems and 19 percent in the form of hydraulic units. Thirty-five of the thermal units will have a capacity of 500,000 kilowatts or more, showing the rising trend for units that turn out larger blocks of electric power.

Five years ago in the same size category there were only five units, representing 7.7 percent of all thermal unit capacity.

The WWP executive said the peak load of the total electric industry of the contiguous United States is expected to reach nearly 164 million kilowatts in December of this year. Capability in December, 1965, on the basis of median hydro systems is scheduled at 236 million kilowatts, a 5.9 percent increase over 1964.

He reported that electric energy output of the total electric industry is forecast to exceed one trillion kilowatt hours in 1965, which is 5.6 percent more than the actual 1964 output.

It is safe to can foods without salt, say home economists. Salt is for flavor only and is not necessary for safe processing.

If you've ever wasted precious time looking for the right-size nails, screws, nuts, or bolts (and who hasn't!), here's a quick, easy solution to the problem. It's a good way to make use of empty jars, too.

Simplest way, of course, is just to screw the jar lids to the ceiling of your workshop area, if you have a low ceiling.

Another way is to attach jar lids to the four sides of a 4 x 4, which in turn has been suspended at each end from the ceiling by means of two strips of 1-inch wide, 1/4 inch flat metal bent to shape.

Glass jars provide easy solution to problem of storage of nails, screws and bolts.

Holes drilled in the top ends of the metal strips permit their screw-attachment to the ceiling. The 4 x 4 is suspended by means of lag screws through holes at the bottom ends of the metal strips, with washers on each side of the strips, an arrangement which permits rotating the 4 x 4 for accessibility to any of the storage jars.

If a fear of cracking plaster walls has prevented you from hanging pictures, mirrors or plaques with nails, here's a tip that may be of help.

Chipping and cracking of plaster can be avoided if you drill the hole for each nail with a portable electric drill. Be sure to drill the hole a little smaller than the size of the nail, though. As an added precaution, you may want to put a small piece of drafting tape over the spot before drilling.

(Readers are invited to send questions about do-it-yourself problems to the Thor Research Center, 175 N. State Street, Aurora, Illinois. The questions will be answered by individual letters and some will be published in this column.)
