

CAN SAVE SOME TOMATOES STILL

U. of I., Moscow — Don't let those late maturing tomatoes go to waste in your garden this fall. Pick them before they freeze and store them fresh, advises George W. Woodbury, horticulturist with the Agricultural Experiment station.

Even though tomato vines freeze back, the fruit may not be hurt, Woodbury says. If the green tomatoes are sound, solid and sizeable, they are worth picking.

To store, wrap the tomatoes in paper and put them in a box in your basement or other cool, dry place. They will ripen gradually, so check them occasionally. You may be able to enjoy fresh tomatoes from your garden until Thanksgiving or later.

RECORD FISH

A new Idaho record bluegill weighing 2 pounds, 13 ounces, was caught several weeks ago by M/S Elmer White, Mountain Home AFB, at the Sand Dunes Lake. This tops the previous record of 2 pounds, 1 ounce, caught last year by Jack Earl, Jr., of Boise, in the C. J. Strike Reservoir.

Sgt. White this year had already broken the state record with bluegills weighing 2 pounds, 10 ounces; 2 pounds, 6 ounces, and 2 pounds 4 ounces. The new record is over a foot long.

NEW WINTER WHEAT IS RELEASED

U. of I., Moscow — Two new hard red winter wheat varieties have been approved for release by the Idaho and Washington agricultural experiment stations, reports Dr. R. D. Ensign, associate director of the University of Idaho station.

The new bread wheats, named McCall and Wanser, are adaptable to the dryland wheat areas of southeastern Idaho, and are not recommended for northern Idaho or for irrigated areas, according to Dr.

Ensign. Both varieties were developed from Burt and Itana crosses by Walter F. Nelson, superintendent of Washington State University's dryland research unit near Lind, Wn. Tests in southeastern Idaho conducted by Dr. Donald Sunderman, cereal breeder at the University of Idaho Aberdeen station, indicate that the new varieties will average 4 to 5 bushels per acre more on dryland than winter wheats presently grown. Milling and baking qualities of both varieties are excellent. Both have a medium-height, strong straw, and good resistance to shattering.

While McCall and Wanser have shown acceptable tolerance to stripe rust, neither has the stripe rust resistance of Itana-65, a hard, red winter variety just released in Idaho. In Washington tests, McCall has shown some tolerance to snow mold, recovering better from infection than other commercial varieties.

FACTS ABOUT IDAHO HIGHWAYS - 1965

Boise — The 40,000 farms in Idaho are served by 32,000 miles of rural highways maintained by the state, counties and highway districts. City and village streets also serve farmers. Including state highways there are 2,580 miles of city and village streets. Although these streets comprise less than 5 percent of all the motor transport facilities in the state, they carry approximately 13 percent of all the travel.

The 4,881 miles of the state highway system including 272 miles of city streets, comprise 11.6 of all highways and roads in the state and carry 66 percent of all the travel.

In 1964, refunds for non-highway use were paid on 35,160,718 gallons of gasoline. This quantity of fuel would enable 45,000 passenger cars, with an average consumption rate, to travel approximately 10,530 miles each. Motor vehicle registrations in Idaho have increased from 50,000 in 1920 to 445,058 in 1964. In 1980 it is estimated there will be a total of 640,000 motor vehicles registered in Idaho. Truck registrations increased from 4,359 in 1920 to 72,521 in 1964. In 1920 there were 8.6 persons in Idaho per registered motor vehicle. In 1964 this figure has been reduced to 1.6 persons per registered motor vehicle.

Total travel in Idaho in 1920 was less than 0.25 billion vehicle miles. In 1964 travel in Idaho amounted to 3.4 billion vehicle miles, and in 1980 it is estimated to be 5.3 billion vehicle miles. This represents an increase of 56 percent over 1964.

The intersection of U. S. 20 and 30 at the west edge of Boise carries the heaviest volume of traffic in the state, an average of 30,600 vehicles per day.

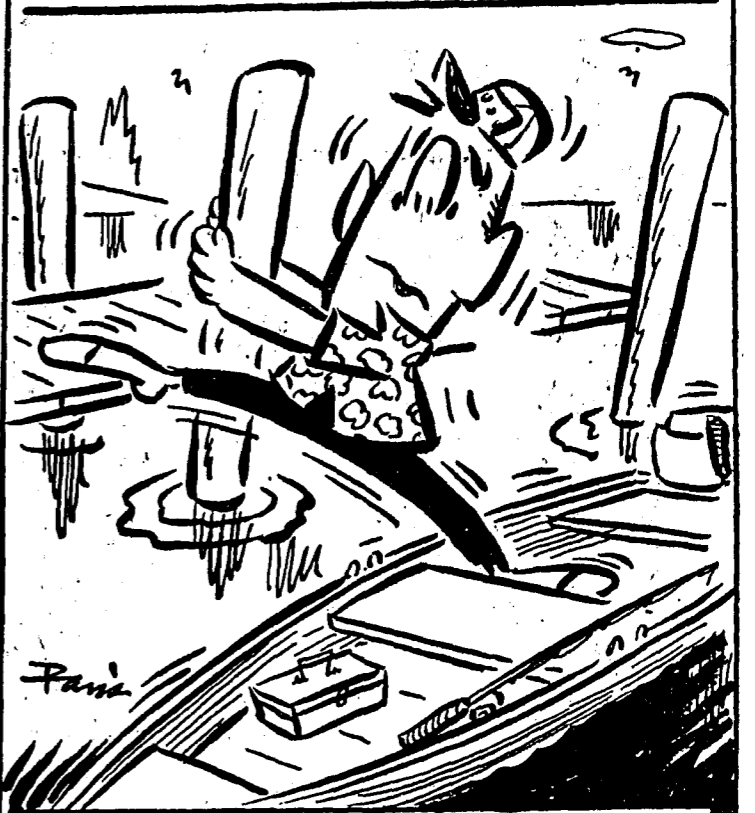

The 1964 "Sufficiency Rating" of 4,595 miles of the rural state highway system showed that 686 miles, or 15 percent of the total miles rated were below the acceptable minimum standard for the traffic volume being carried.

Rural highways and roads of Idaho are administered by 120 governmental units, including the federal government, the state, 40 counties and 78 highway districts.

Vehicle weighing studies indicate that the average loaded weight of trucks and truck combinations operating on state highways increased from 10,560 pounds in 1936 to 19,000 pounds in 1964.

In 1920 Idaho had a population of 430,000 people and there were 50,000 motor vehicles. The vehicle miles traveled were .25 million.

In 1964 Idaho had a population of 700,000 people; 445,058 motor vehicles and they traveled 3.4 billion miles.

Thus, while Idaho population increased 63 percent, motor vehicles increased 790 percent and miles travel 1260 percent.

Motor vehicles increased more than 12 times as fast as the population and vehicle miles 20 times!

NOT FOR GASOLINE

U. of I., Moscow — More and more household chemicals, foods, beverages and other goods are now packaged in light-weight, plastic bottles. Many of these are reusable and quite handy for around-the-home purposes. But don't attempt to store gasoline in them; advises Charles L. Peterson, extension Agricultural Engineer with the University of Idaho.

Most of these plastic bottles were designed to carry water solutions only, Peterson explains. They are not meant to hold anything as volatile as gasoline.

Under high temperature conditions, gasoline may leak through the plastic, especially where it is extra thin. In cold weather, the plastic bottles tend to crack. In either case, they are not safe as gasoline containers, Peterson says.

WATCH HEART

Boise — Hunting season is here again, but with a little forethought, it need not be open season on hunters. "Among the hazards of hunting is accidental death from gunshot. Not so dramatic, but at least three times as prevalent, is the tragedy of heart attack deaths," says Dr. Lynn Anderson of Pocatello, president of the American Heart Association.

Unlike the deer, who can only try to outrun their stalkers, hunters can take certain precautions to avoid falling prey to the risks of the hunt.

Deer hunting often demands a level of energy output which may be triple or quadruple the level at which most part-time hunters operate during the rest of the year. Extremes of weather, change of altitude, rough terrain and the stress of the chase can levy a heavy tax on the heart's capacity, points out Dr. Anderson.

These suggestions are offered by Dr. Anderson: Don't drag the bag. When you've downed your deer, let it lie until you can get help to move it. If you have a heart condition, take at least one member of your party into your confidence. Tell him what medicine you take, how it is given and the symptoms which indicate the need for medication. He should know which pocket you keep it in, and the container should carry clearly typed instructions. And — never hunt alone.
