TRAFFIC DEATHS ON THE INCREASE

Chicago - "Despite the new federal safety regulations, the traffic death toll may get worse before it gets better" warns Harry Porter, Jr. manager of the National Safety Council's Traffic Department.

Pointing out that it will take a number of years for the new vehicle standards and expanded highway safety programs to take effect, Porter listed the following "negative" factors that will tend to push death totals up in the years immediately ahead: More young drivers; Higher speeds; Motorcycles; Increased travel; Failure to use seat belts; Alcohol consumption.

"In the face of these almost overwhelming pressures, it seems almost certain that the total number of fatalities will creep slowly upward for several years at least, barring any major economic or military reversals," said Porter. "By then we hope and believe that the positive pressures resulting from new legislation will begin to take effect, turning the accident curve downwards."

In the meantime, the safety authority cautioned drivers not to expect any overnight lessening of traffic hazards. "On the contrary," he warned, "the next few years will be an especially crucial time for drivers when it will be up to the individual to accept the responsibility for his own well-being as never before."

As a timely example, Porter cited the added hazards facing drivers during the critical winter months and pointed out that safer winter driving is largely a matter of individual responsibility.

"Reduced visibility and inadequate traction are the principal additional hazards of winter driving over and above those normally encountered all year," he stated.

He reported that the following tips for safe winter driving have been advocated by the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards:

1. Get the 'feel' of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.
 2. Increase your following distance. It takes three to ten times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement.
 3. "Pump" your brakes to slow or stop - don't jam them on. An intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control.
 4. Have good tires with good treads. Better yet, use snow tires which provide half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires. Studded snow tires offer still more help on icy surfaces.
 5. Always carry reinforced tire chains in the trunk of your car for use during severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to five times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.
 6. Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wiper blades gone dead from exposure to sun, wind and oily road film. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.
- "Each of these admonitions," Porter concluded, "calls for a distinct personal response. By accepting these down-to-earth recommendations, a driver demonstrates the kind of personal responsibility that is going to be required to reverse current accident trends."

PEOPLE HAVE RIGHT TO KNOW

A great deal of controversy has been swirling about the past few weeks as the legislative session at Boise draws near — on the question of publication of legal records, calls for bids, etc., as they affect cities, villages and school districts.

The following editorial from The Kimberly Advertiser, under date of Dec. 8, and the title "Legal Reports Are Full of Information" seems to pertain well cover the subject. The editorial says:

This week in this publication are two financial reports that have a lot of information for every voter and taxpayer in the East End. We refer to the Murtaugh school district annual report and the quarterly report of the Village of Kimberly. Last week in these columns was an article concerning a bill forthcoming in the next state legislature that would cancel the publishing of these reports about which the public has a right to know. It is your money and mine that pays these bills, shouldn't we have the right to know just where the money is being spent? Do you pay out your weekly, monthly or annual income without a record of where it goes? Or telling the little woman where your pay check disappeared? Chances are you don't if you have any sort of planning ahead mapped out.

What do these people in the "driver's seat" have to hide that they are pushing for just such legislation? Sounds fishy to us and that is why we are trying to get the public to awaken to the fact that the time is fast approaching when we will be under a governing body that tells us every movement that we are allowed to make. How would you like that rule? Speak your piece before it is too late. Become informed. When there is a choice to make by popular vote, take part, while there's still time.

TAXES RISING ON REAL ESTATE IN SPITE OF SALES TAX

There is more than usual interest in property taxes this year. Those whose tax bill is higher this year than it was last year are getting the two-by-four treatment. The tax bill got their attention.

It isn't enough to just say that the tax bill is bigger or is too high. The taxpayer wants to know why it is bigger, and he is entitled to know why. There are many reasons; and because there is intense interest and discussion, there are many reasons being given, some right and some wrong.

One misunderstanding is that the sales tax was supposed to keep property taxes from increasing forever. The property tax adjustment called for in the Sales Tax Act did happen in 1965, and that reduction is still a part of the 1966 property tax. The increases in the property tax in 1966 are not a part of the sales tax. Had there been no sales tax, the 1966 property tax would have been much higher.

There can be many reasons for an increase in property tax bills this year. In many cases there is a combination of causes.

In many cases, the cause is the equalization effort imposed by Senate Bill 246 (not a part of the sales tax; as a matter of fact, this equalization bill originated in the Senate while the Sales Tax Act originated in the House, and the sales tax bill was held at bay until the equalization bill passed both houses).

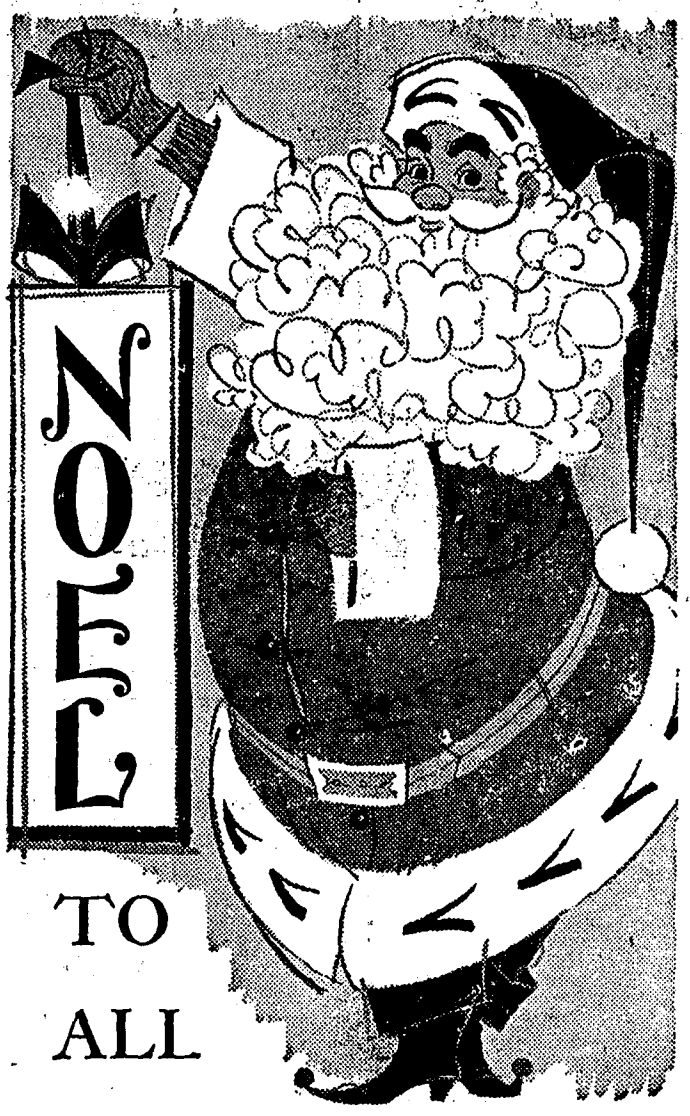

In other cases, the increase is the result of increases in the budgets of the governmental units - the county, city, school districts, fire districts or a cemetery district - or a new bond or plant facility election, or a combination.

In some cases, it has been found that the increase in tax resulted from an increase in property - the amount of property, not the assessed valuation of property resulted from the equalization bill.

A change in taxes can result from one of many causes or a combination. To analyze why, one must compare all the factors in one year with those of another year - not just that final amount on the tax bill due the tax collector.

One aroused Ada County property taxpayer called to discuss his increase. Comparison showed that his assessed valuation did not change in 1966 from 1965. His increase was due to an increase in assessed valuation because of the equalization bill plus increases in the basic tax levy for Canyon County, the City of Nampa and the Nampa school district, even though the levies certified by these units of government were "rolled back" to compensate for the total increase in assessed valuation caused by the equalization effort. And while the increase in assessed valuation because of the equalization did result in increased taxes to this taxpayer and to others, there was no increase in tax revenues to the units of government resulting from equalization.

C. A. NATIONS TO BE AT JAMBOREE

New Brunswick, N. J. — Seven Central American Boy Scout Associations have confirmed their intentions to send contingents to the XII World Jamboree in the United States in 1967. It was announced by the host associations, the Boy Scouts of America.

Approximately 15,000 Scouts from about 100 nations are expected at the August 1-9 event next summer at Farragut State Park, Idaho (near Coeur d'Alene) which marks World Scouting's 60th Anniversary and will be the first World Jamboree held in the United States.

The nations and the anticipated size of their delegations are: Dominican Republic 72; El Salvador 45; Haiti 38; Jamaica 82; Panama 24; Trinidad and Tobago 19; Guatemala 39.

In announcing the figures Robert L. Billington, world jamboree coordinator, and Assistant Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America said: "We hope these are minimal figures, and that even more brother Scouts will join the contingents. We are prepared to host all visiting Scouts in our homes and at Scout camps on their way to and from the Idaho Jamboree site, and the more Scouts that experience the spirit and friendship of the jamboree, the greater Scouting's contribution to world friendship and understanding."

The Jamboree's theme will be "For Friendship."

TAXES AND FORESTS

Conservation groups, forestry officials and an army of wardens armed with the latest equipment are ever on the alert to protect the forests. The work of all these people plus the vigilance of private landowners has in the main brought what was long the greatest danger to forests under control. That danger was fire. But, as a large timber company has pointed out, fire is not the only way to destroy a forest. Unwise taxes can do the same thing. Excessive taxation can push up total cost to a point where tree farmers can no longer afford reforestation programs. It may require up to 120 years to grow marketable sawlogs of some of the various species of trees.

The timber companies are planning ahead for a century or more to insure that there will be timber both for the recreation of future generations and for utilization in the hundreds of wood products that most of us take for granted. During all this period of ten decades or more, tree farmers must spend money year in and year out to reforest and protect their growing crops from fire, insects and disease - all risks that are recognized can generally be controlled. However, the tree farmer is helpless when it comes to taxes. He must place his faith in the elected lawmakers of the land who enact the tax measures. These taxes, while heavy, are generally realistic. So long as they are so treated, timberlands will continue to provide wildlife, recreational facilities and an ever growing range of useful wood products.

Our lawmakers have as great or a greater responsibility for the preervation of the forests than have the forest rangers, the lonely look-outs on the rim of the timberland, or the landowners. — I. N. A., Portland.

NATIONAL FOREST MAP JUST ISSUED

Missoula — Pictures of Kootenai Falls and the giant cedars in the Ross Creek Scenic Area are featured on the cover of the new Kootenai National Forest recreation map folders.

"This new publication is part of the Forest Service's continuing effort to better serve those seeking outdoor recreation in the National Forests," James L. Wenban, Deputy Regional Forester, explained. "Last year there were more than 200,000 recreational visits to this 1,818,469-acre National Forest in northwestern Montana (1,769,818 acres) and northern Idaho (48,651 acres)."

In this National Forest, Wenban said, "Visitors can swim, hunt, ski, hike, fish, picnic, camp climb rocky peaks, pick huckleberries, or enjoy nature's beauty along quiet roads and trails."

In addition to a detailed, four-color map of the National Forest, the map folder contains pictures of Turner Mountain, Therriault Lakes, Paradise Lake in the Ten Lakes Scenic Area, reforestation in the Pinkham Creek Drainage, and Cedar Lake in the Cabinet Mountains Wilderness.

Copies of the new recreational map folder are available from: Forest Supervisor, Kootenai National Forest, 416 Mineral Avenue, Libby, Montana 59923.

POWER FOR FUTURE IS FORSEEN NEED

The United States leads the world in the production of electric power. Last year power plants in the country produced nearly 1,100 billion kilowatts. This was 36 percent of the world's production and almost three times that of the Soviet Union (the No. 2 producer of electric power.).

Impressive as these figures might be, they actually do no more than set the stage for what this fantastic industry is planning for the future. As of mid-1966 a record of over 89 million kilowatts of new generating capacity was on order and scheduled for service by U. S. electric power systems during 1966 and later years. Significantly, nuclear power stations account for 12.1 million kilowatts of the total.

The electric industry is adding customers at the rate of more than 1,500,000 a year. Even more important, all of the industry's customers are using more and more electric power. In just the past ten years, the home consumer, using an ever-widening variety of electrical appliances, has increased his annual use of electricity by more than 75 percent.

Regionally, the Pacific Northwest leads the nation in home consumption of electric power. The Washinton Water Power Company reports that as of January 1, 1966, its average customer used 9,735 kilowatt hours of electricity — almost double the national average.

The rapid escalation in electric power use and the necessity of keeping ahead of that need might seem almost insurmountable to John Q. Citizen, but at the same time, as a power user, he expects and demands that the electric power he needs be available at the moment he flips the switch.

Fortunately, the problem is not considered insurmountable by the leaders of the electric industry. Already the largest industry in the nation, already the biggest taxpayer in the nation, the investor-owned utility industry is confident that it can not only meet but will even exceed the requirements of the future.

The Edison Electric Institute has predicted that by the year 2000, less than 35 years in the future, it will be necessary for the industry to finance and build the equivalent of almost seven additional power systems the energy size of our present total electric utility system. It will require an investment in plant and equipment of more than $350 billion.

Here in the Pacific Northwest a tremendous program is underway. In spite of the many dams under construction and the kilowatts they will add to the region's capability, they are no more than keeping up with the estimated year-by-year need. A spokesman for the industry has predicted that, beginning early in the 1970's, it will be necessary to add one new one-million-kilowatt generating station each year in the Pacific Northwest.

Because most of the economical hydro sites have already been used or are licensed for the construction of a generating plant, the Pacific Northwest will, like the rest of the nation, place more and more emphasis on the thermal generation in the future. A major portion of this future generation is expected to be nuclear. However, two Pacific Northwest utilities, Washinton Water and Pacific Power and Light, own a huge coal field near Centralia where they plan to construct a large steam plant that will supply power for both firms.

versity of Idaho Forest, Wildlife and Range Experiment Station states that the Cassia mule deer herd has successfully been reduced since the high populations of the early 1950's, and now appears to be within the carrying capacity of the winter range.

The report indicates that the effect of the lower population has resulted in a sizable increase in reproduction. Although the rate of reproduction may improve slightly in 1970's, it will be necessary to add the desirable huntable population, and its aesthetic value, must be considered.

Herd composition counts throughout 1965 indicated a sex ratio of 72 bucks per 100 does. The early spring counting period provided a ratio of 58.8 fawns per 100 does. Grouped age distributions indicated there are presently more young animals in the herd than in 1953.

The stability of the herd has reduced disease, parasites, and winter mortality. All of the collected animals were examined for evidence of disease and parasites. No evidence of disease, such as discoloration of tissue, swelling, tumors, or other unusual growth of tissue, was noted. Parasitic infestations were not considered heavy.

Herd loss to illegal hunting and predators was termed slight, but legal hunting losses due to crippling was estimated to be 15 percent. The stability of herd size in relation to range capacity has improved the condition of the herd.

DEER HERD DECLINES IN SOUTH IDAHO

U. of I. Moscow, - Mule deer populations in the Cassia mountains of south-central Idaho has declined from an estimated 12,000 animals in 1953 to 6,000 in 1965.

GOLDEN TOUCH OF HOSPITALITY
BY JANE ASHLEY

Like A Scotsman, Have Scones

'Tis a wee thin cake baked on a griddle is a definition any Scotsman will give you for Scones, their tea-time favorite. These little cakes are very similar to our biscuits. They are served hot with jelly or jam and whipped cream. Scones will make an excellent change in your dessert menu too. Make scones for strawberry or other fruit shortcakes or serve scones for breakfast, like many a good Scotsman does. The recipe here is prepared in the Devonshire manner with corn starch which gives them a unique texture.

Scones

- | | |
|-----------------------------|------------------------------|
| 1 1/2 cups sifted flour | 6 tablespoons' margarine |
| 1/2 cup corn starch | 1 egg, beaten |
| 1/4 cup confectioners sugar | 1/2 cup milk |
| 2 teaspoons baking powder | 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped |
| 3/4 teaspoon salt | 1/2 cup jelly |

Sift flour, corn starch, confectioners sugar, baking powder and salt together into mixing bowl. Cut in margarine with pastry blender or 2 knives until fine crumbs form. Reserve 1 teaspoon beaten egg; add remaining egg and milk to flour mixture, mixing with fork until dough forms. Knead lightly on floured board about 30 seconds. Roll out to 1/2-inch thickness. Cut with 1 1/2 to 2-inch biscuit cutter. Place rounds on ungreased cookie sheet. Brush with reserved egg. Bake in 450 degrees F. (very hot) oven until lightly browned, about 10 minutes. Serve hot with whipped cream and jelly. Makes 16.

The snow courses are located on the headwaters of the South Fork of the Palouse river. Snow measurements have been obtained for the past 10 years by the SCS on these courses. The Moscow Mountain course at 4,100 feet is the highest one measured. There was no snow recorded on the course which has an average snow depth of 10.16 inches over the last 10 years and a range of 0 to 24.9 inches. No snow was also recorded on Dec. 1, 1959, and the deepest for this date was recorded in 1961.

The snow survey will continue on the 1st of each month through May 1, 1967, and is conducted through the cooperative efforts of the University of Idaho Engineering Experiment Station, the Soil Conservation Service and the Latah Soil and Water Conservation District supervisors.

EARLY WALLACE DAYS ON DISPLAY

U. of I., Moscow — "Yesterday In Wallace," a photographic display of that northern Idaho community from 1890 to 1920, is now on display at the University of Idaho museum, G. Ellis Burcaw, director, announced last week.

The exhibit, which shows buildings, people and scenes of the area, has been taken from prints of photographic negatives given to the university by the heirs of Nellie Stockbridge, photographer in Wallace for more than 70 years. The camera with which she took many of the pictures is also on display. The museum is open every day from 1:00 to 5:00 p. m.

LAND FADING

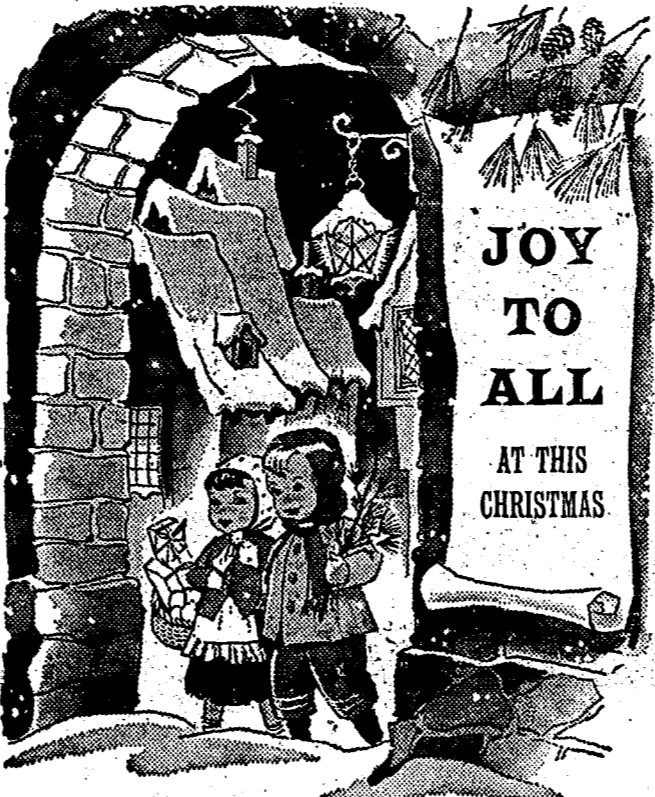

Cape Cod, New England's famous sandbar peninsula, a relatively young offspring of the last ice age, has lost a two-mile wide strip of land because of erosion by ocean waves. The U. S. Geological Survey estimates that at the present rate of erosion the outer Cape will disappear in 4,000 to 5,000 years.

LEMHI COUNTY

Boise — The history of Lemhi county contains a symbolic reversal of the Civil War. When Montana men discovered gold on Napias Creek in 1866, 5,000 miners rushed to the district, establishing twin camps and naming them Grantsville and Leesburg for the Civil War heroes. But Leesburg soon absorbed Grantsville, swelling to a population of over 7,000. Leesburg is said to have produced over $500,000 annually during the peak years of the gold rush. After 1873 the mining population drifted away as the accessible gold supply was exhausted and Leesburg became a ghost town. However, later, the ghosts had to move out.
 In 1949 Leesburg made a comeback as a mining town when a Pocatello firm and an Alaskan mining concern moved in to re-work the old Channel claims and others. However, the economy of the county still depends on agriculture.
 Lemhi is one of the coldest counties of southern Idaho. Winters are long and cold, the summers short and cool. Snowfall is heavy and beautiful.

HANDICAPPED FIRM IS DOING WELL

The birth of the first statewide non-profit organization designed to enlarge employment opportunities of disabled persons was christened, LIVE, Inc. in 1949. The corporation operates an evaluation and treatment center in the capital city with a sheltered workshop.
 The firm employs, on the average, 40 handicapped individuals each year. They manufacture woven rugs, household and custom rubber door mats, survey grade stakes, box cleats and brass wind chimes, also operating a radio and television repair shop. During the Christmas season they produce sets of tree stands and packaged bows which are sold to local grocery and department stores. With the aid of the Lions Clubs, they have expanded distribution to eastern Oregon.
 The 60,000 expansion project covering a total of 12,000 sq. ft. will be ready for occupancy mid-January. Harold Taylor, manager of the corporation, anticipates stepped-up production gains and plans to concentrate most efforts in the direction of the wood and related products industry. "Of paramount importance," Taylor explains, "is the increase we will see in placing our workers back into the competitive labor market."

SHIPPING COST KEY IN WHEAT OUTPUT

U. of I., Moscow - The Idaho wheat industry must market a high quality product at lowest possible shipping costs in order to stay competitive with other wheat-producing regions, reports Dr. Gerald E. Marousek, associate agricultural economist in the University of Idaho College of Agriculture.
 Marousek pointed out that Idaho produces 40 to 50 million bushels of wheat annually and most of it is marketed out of state.
 "Whether our wheat is consumed in neighboring states or in foreign markets, it must be shipped a considerable distance," Marousek said. "This emphasizes the importance of shipping costs and underlines the need for continuing effort in transportation rate studies and negotiations."
 Between 80 and 90 percent of north Idaho's wheat production moves into export through Pacific Northwest ports. Marousek told the wheat growers. Primary markets are Japan, the Philippines, India, Formosa, Korea and Pakistan.
 More than two-thirds of south Idaho wheat is ground into flour by Western millers. Most of this is sold ultimately in California markets.
 Marousek, who is just completing a three-year analysis of Idaho wheat production and marketing patterns, said northern Idaho produces about 30 percent of the state's wheat crop and southeastern Idaho has nearly half of the total. Statewide production is divided almost evenly between red and soft white wheat.

THANK YOU, ALL

FOREST SERVICE SKI GUIDE OUT

Missoula - This week the Forest Service published a new ski guide for the National Forests of the Northern Region, James L. Wenban, Deputy Regional Forester, has announced.
 The 30-page, illustrated winter sports guide, contains detailed information about 16 ski areas in the National Forests of eastern Washington, northern Idaho, and Montana. "Long recognized as America's playgrounds," National Forests are now providing year-around outdoor recreation for more and more Americans," Wenban explained. "Recreation visits to Northern Region National Forests for winter sport increased from 45,000 in 1951 to 280,000 in 1965 - a 6-fold increase."
 "There is every indication that recreation visits to these 16 winter sports areas will exceed 300,000 this season," Wenban said.
 Information about the following Northern Forest ski areas is detailed in the new SKI GUIDE:
 Schweitzer Basin near Sandpoint Idaho in the Kaniku National Forest.
 Lookout Pass near Wallace, Idaho in the Coeur d'Alene National Forest.
 North-South near Clarkia, Idaho in the St. Joe National Forest.
 Chevelah Peak near Colville, Washington in the Colville National Forest.
 The new SKI GUIDE is available from National Forest Supervisors' Offices, District Forest Rangers, and the Northern Region headquarters.

SOME PILE

THAT SUMPTIOUS REPAST

Dr. Haven Emerson, onetime health commissioner of New York City, once defined a sumptuous repast as "sitting down three inches from the table and eating until you touch."
 So tonight you are going to have dinner at Harvey and Mabel's home. She's a wonderful cook, and she serves with a lavish hand.
 And afterward you sit on the couch with your hands folded over your abdomen, and you struggle to keep your eyes open. After you have noddled for the fourth time, you decide, "Never again! Too much and too good!"
Be Kind To Guests
 Well, let that be a lesson to you when you entertain. Be kind to your guests. Dine them well, but not too heavily. Limit the cocktails, if you serve them, to one or two.
 Plan a tasty meal that is not overloaded with fats and sweets. Many a hostess now omits one or the other of the usual starchy foods (potatoes and bread stuffs), and puts her emphasis on salads, green leafy vegetables and the lighter desserts, such as fruits, ice cream and gelatin creations. The greater the variety of foods in party meals, the smaller the portions of each.

 If wine is served with dinner, its calories as well as its soporific effect should be taken into consideration.
 Just as tactful hosts no longer urge alcohol upon their non-drinking friends, so the considerate hostess does not try to stuff her guests—remembering always that some of them may have dietetic limitations due to allergies, digestive problems or tendencies toward overweight.
But Don't Be Drab
 Of course, this does not mean the meal must be drab, unimaginative and tasteless. The genuinely clever hostess knows how to achieve that happy medium. She combines a truly sumptuous repast with good nutritional balance—and without the anesthetic effects from over-eating and over-drinking. These effects are not merely unnecessary, they make the evening a social flop, no matter how delicious the dinner.
 The hostess who has learned this technique will have guests who, as they depart, will sincerely and heartily call her blessed. And they will always be ready to come again.

KUID-TV TO LINK ON PROGRAMS

U. of I., Moscow - The University of Idaho's educational television station, KUID-TV, Channel 12, will link with educational television stations from Maine to California in the educational network's first "live" national programming.
 The first program to use the new cable microwave intertie will be a special two and one-half hour program in January on President Johnson's State of the Union address, according to Gordon Law, acting head of the university's department of radio and television.
 The inter-connection between 75 stations of the National Educational network will make available programs that are current and contemporary.

FIRST IDAHO SCHOOL

The setting of the first educational establishment, Idaho-style, was an outdoor school on the banks of Lapwai Creek in 1836. The teacher was Reverend Henry Harmon Spalding and his students were the Nez Perce Indians.
 Spalding illustrated his lectures with visual aids, charts prepared by his wife, Eliza. He explained these charts depicting Bible stories of Creation, Moses receiving the Ten Commandments, and David the Shepherd to his students through an interpreter.
 Later Spalding built a school house where his wife continued preparing lessons, mostly scriptural verses and short sentences, with pen. The Indians copied and learned these verses, passing them around until they were completely worn out.
 Reverend Spalding received a printing press enabling him to print a primer and a book of hymns. The press, the first to appear in the Northwest, was a gift from a native church in Hawaii.
 At one time there were over 200 Indians in the school. However, the first attempts to establish a stable school system were thwarted when the government ordered the Spaldings to evacuate the mission at Lapwai because of the massacre of Marcus Whitman, a fellow minister, and his family.
