Kendrick Grange Holds Meeting Dec. 16

Kendrick Grange No. 413 met in regular session at the Grange Hall, Tuesday, Dec. 16th, with 22 members present.

Plans were completed for the annual Christmas party.

A report on "Safety in Purchasing Christmas Toys" was given by Mrs. Manning Onstott, and Mrs. Wm. Johnson told how and where many of our Christmas traditions originated. Both talks were very interesting and informative.

A brief report on the grasshopper situation and meeting was given, encouraging more people to turn out for the meetings, to learn more about the grasshopper problem and plans to control them.

Thanks to Mrs. Roy Glenn, Grange Chairman of Women's Activities, the hall has a lovely "new look." She had put beautiful new drapes and curtains all through the hall, banquet room, kitchen, etc., with the aid of a group of Grange members and financial help from the Masons, O. E. S. and Grange. It is a wonderful improvement in appearance, in beauty, and in the acoustics of the entire building.

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the committee of the month, Mr. and Mrs. Lealie Heimgartner, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Benscoter, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Blewett and Mr. and Mrs. Norla Callison.

KHS Tigers Lose To Kamiah and Timberline

Kendrick's Improving Tiger Basketball team took two losses this week but both were to highly-regarded teams and neither loss discouraged the Tiger fans. Friday night on the home court, the Tigers came within two points of knocking off the once-beaten Kamiah Kubs before they bowed out 62-60. Saturday night Coach Dust and his team travelled to Pierce and were defeated 61-51 by Timberline High, a consolidation of Pierce and Welpe high schools.

Nels Snaeve pumped in 21 points for the Tigers Friday night against Kamiah as the Tigers led the visitors for much of the hard fought contest. Snaeve was forced out of the game via the five foul rule and his sharp shooting was missed by the team. Kamiah came on strong in the final quarter to tie the game and win.

Don Parks scored 15 points for the Tigers with Alan Kimbley getting thirteen.

Kamiah took the B game 44-39. Don Parks and Doug Pratt each scored 12 points against the Timberline Spartans Saturday night but Kendrick couldn't control the backboards as the Timberline quintet won 61-51.

Timberline also took the B game 58-33.

Troy January 6

The Tigers take a holiday break and won't be back into action until January 6 when they meet the Troy Trojans at Troy.

E. A. 'Ed' Deobald Observes Fiftieth Year With Kendrick Garage

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Deobald

'Ed', Charles and John Deobald

Last Saturday morning there was a beautiful cake brought in by Betty and Gwan, his two daughters-in-law; Anne, his wife of forty-eight years, was waiting in the office and Charles and John, his two sons were nearby. All were going to help E. A. "Ed" Deobald begin his fifty-first year at the Kendrick Garage. The man who began it all wasn't there — he was outside pumping gas for a customer. But they finally got him inside and he posed with his family and his special cake . . . smiling, friendly, a little bit proud . . . E. A. Deobald and his Kendrick Garage. A Kendrick institution for fifty years.

It began back on December 19, 1919 when Ed and Herman Schupfer rented a garage in the building that now houses the Oldersness Department Store, later the two also took a lease on the Kendrick Theatre building because they needed the space for their cars in storage. "That people put their cars in storage back then in the winter time," Deobald recalls. "There just weren't any roads to drive on in bad weather." During those early days Ed and Herman had up to 300 batteries to keep charged up during the winter months besides storing many cars.

Herman left the business after 2 1/2 years to work with his brother, Otto, with the Potlatch Telephone Company.

In 1922 the opportunity to rent the building presently occupied by the garage came and Ed took it. It had a reputation as a rough garage to run. Built in 1915, it had five owners in seven years. It was to have just one more.

In 1921, after trying several different oil products, "It was tough just hauling gas and oil into Kendrick back then," he remembers, Ed and the Standard Oil Company began a relationship that still endures. In 1926 he became a wholesale dealer and put in bulk tanks across the street. His son Charles now handles that department. He also has been a Good Year Tire dealer for many years. "I've got some 45-year service plaques getting old over there," he added smilingly.

Born on a ranch up on American Ridge, Ed picked up a skill and love of things mechanical "just working around the ranch". But his lack of formal training didn't stop him from becoming a first rate mechanic and acquiring a justified reputation as a master machinist. "Take it up to Eddie—that guy can fix anything", is a byword in the valley.

On July 12, 1921, Ed took the American Ridge's school teacher away from them when he married Miss Anne Becker. They settled in Kendrick and raised five children: Arlene (Mrs. Joe Watts of Moscow) Annabel (Mrs. Tom Keene, of Kahlotus, Wn.), Charles, Kendrick; John, Kendrick, and Ted of Richland, Washington.

All of the boys helped out at the garage during their high school days, but Charles and John, after serving with the army, came back to stay. Later the business was incorporated and the three became partners. Most of the business is now handled by the younger Deobalds, but it is still Ed who opens the garage each morning, turns on the pumps and greets the first customers.

W. L. McCreary, former publisher of the Kendrick Gazette was bookkeeper for the garage for many years, but in 1941 the press of his own business forced him to resign and since that time much of the paper work has been done by Mrs. Deobald.

In addition to mechanical repairs and selling tires, gas and oil, the Kendrick Garage has also sold four different automobiles since being in business. Fords, Overlands, Willys Knights and Chevrolet dealerships were all held at one time during the past fifty years. Chevrolets were sold until 1940.

"We were broken into lots of times," Ed said, "couldn't even remember how many; but we only got it good just once. That was back in 1941 when some guy took about $750 worth of tools and also stole Bill McCreary's car." The tools and the car were recovered later down in the Orofino area.

When you have been in business for fifty years there has to be some "firsts". This time of year reminded Ed that he and Herman were the first ones to have an electrically lighted Christmas tree in Kendrick. To do this they took small auto lamp bulbs, wired them in sequence, painted them various colors and hooked the string to the light socket. "Why they put that tree in the window and everyone in town came to see it", his wife recalls.

But E. A. Deobald has given the community much more than his first lighted Christmas tree. He has given it many years of hard work and faithful service; honesty and integrity in business and a fine family. In return the community has given back to this good man the love and respect that very few are ever privileged to receive.

Well, You Can Always Dream of White Christmas

Unless the weather takes a sudden change, residents of the Kendrick-Juliaetta area will have to dream of a White Christmas as they slog their way through water and mud. The rain and warm temperatures have taken the last remnants of snow from the valley this week. In Genesee and the higher elevations things were just about the same way until Monday night when the mercury dropped down several degrees and changed a steady rain to a heavy snow which fell until about eleven that same night. The heavy, wet snow coated everything it touched and gave a very Christmas holiday effect to the landscape. But at 11 p. m. the temperature rose enough that the snow changed back to rain and the white covering on the ground was changed to slush. Early Tuesday morning the sky cleared and the temperature dropped again, freezing the slush solid and making travel difficult.

Heavy winds rocked the area over the weekend and helped dry out the soft, wet roads to a considerable degree. The winds were even felt down in the protected Juliaetta-Kendrick area Saturday and Sunday and were almost gale force on the hills.

Despite the less than agreeable day, throngs of children crowded the streets in Juliaetta, Kendrick and Genesee to receive treats of candy and visit with Santa Claus, who found time to drop into each of the communities.

GOV. SAMUELSON STRESSES HOLIDAY SAFE DRIVING

Boise — Once again I have the pleasure of extending Christmas greetings to all the fine people of Idaho as we approach the natal day of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is a season of joy and happiness, when mankind throughout the Christian world pauses again to exchange sentiments of true love and friendship.

In this short message I want to reaffirm my love for the great State of Idaho and the wonderful people who comprise its population. All of us working together have accomplished much toward making Idaho "what the rest of the world would like to be."

We can be proud of many great and important accomplishments, but there is one area in which Idaho has a poor — a heartbreaking — record. Despite increased emphasis on traffic safety programs, Idaho's traffic death toll has reached an all time high.

As your governor and your friend, I urge you to observe and obey all the rules of safety while traveling during the holiday season. Make this a joyous time of year for everyone. Stay alert — and stay alive.

From my house to your house, I extend best wishes for a most happy Christmas season, and a successful and rewarding new year.

DON'T UNDERRATE THAT VACUUM CLEANER

U. of I., Moscow — A vacuum cleaner is your best weapon against carpet beetles, says Roland Portman, University of Idaho extension entomologist. It sucks up the beetles as well as the dust and lint that they eat.

If you discover the beetles in your house a thorough cleaning is the first step. They may appear unexpectedly in areas they have never been before. They could be living on lint behind the TV set or some other piece of furniture. They can live in dry, dusty places because they don't need water. They eat anything that comes from plants or animals, including dust puffs and lint balls. They also chew wool or cotton rugs, books, clothing, house plants or food.

Adult carpet beetles are attracted to light, so your first knowledge that they are around may be when you find them on windowsills. The brown, black or checkered beetles are about one-eighth of an inch long.

TRUMPETER SWAN COMEBACK IS CONSERVATION SUCCESS

Idaho Fish and Game Department Gabriel's horn may have some competition from the deep resonant voices of trumpeter swans unless the current upward trend in production of these birds is reversed and the remnant starts once more its slide into the stillness of forgotten things.

Thanks to conservation measures which include complete protection, and transplants from the Red Rock Lakes National Wildlife Refuge near Monida, Montana, trumpeter swans are hatching out all over. During the 1968 fall survey, for example, biologists counted 801 trumpeters in the contiguous United States, sometimes called the "South 48." Total population including Alaska and western Canada, probably exceeds 4,000 trumpeters. This species was removed from the federal government's list of rare and endangered wildlife species following the 1968 aerial waterfowl census.

Wildlife conservationists are elated with the comeback of the majestic bird. In 1932, the 69 trumpeters left in the 48 contiguous states were all found in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming.

The appeal of swans to man throughout history has been handed down in legend, custom and many forms of art. That the largest living species should have become almost extinct in its native North America was a near tragedy. The continuing recovery in numbers of this graceful symbol of American wilderness is a major accomplishment in wildlife conservation.

The establishment of the Red Rock Lakes Migratory Waterfowl Refuge was the climax of this effort in the United States. This magnificent mountain setting provided the remotes and wilderness environment favored by trumpeters. Its boundaries encompass a 60-mile radius in southwestern Montana, eastern Idaho and northwestern Wyoming, including Yellowstone Park.

ALIENS MUST REGISTER

R.G. Hoffeller of the Immigration and Naturalization Service advised today that the annual alien address report program is again under way. According to Mr. Hoffeller, 8,170 aliens reported their addresses last year in Montana and Idaho. The number this year is expected to be slightly larger.

The immigration official pointed out that the address reports are required by law and willful failure to comply with these requirements may lead to serious consequences.

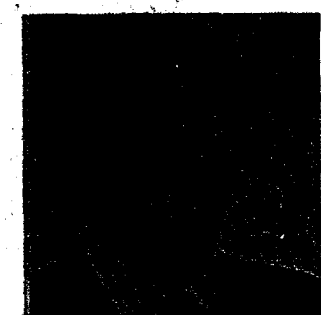

Forms with which to make the reports are available at all post offices and Immigration and Naturalization Service offices. It is an easy matter to fill out one of the cards and return it to the same office.

Mr. Hoffeller added that trained personnel will be on hand in all offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to answer any questions the reporting aliens may have regarding immigration and naturalization matters.

Selective Service Questions Answered

BOISE: State Director of Selective Service, Major General George B. Bennett, said today, "Many questions are being asked about the Random Selection Method recently authorized by Congress." The following are some of the questions with appropriate answers being asked:

QUESTION: Does everybody get a number out of the first lottery?

ANSWER: No. The first drawing will determine the random sequence number only for those men who prior to January 1, 1970, had attained age 19, and not 28.

Besides that, the number in which his birthday is drawn will not mean anything until he is classified 1-A or 1-A-O. Some men in the group who eventually will get a number out of the first drawing may not become 1-A until next year or later. In that case, his number will determine his order in the national sequence in use that year. For example, if his birthday is drawn No. 80, and he is now deferred for college, but loses his college deferment in June 1971, he will be No. 80 in the national random sequence in use that year.

QUESTION: How do new 19-year-olds get a number?

ANSWER: Before the end of 1970, a drawing of the 366 days of the year will be held. This drawing will determine the national random sequence to be used in 1971. The only registrants who would look to that drawing to determine where they stand in the national random sequence are those who turned 19 during 1970.

QUESTION: How do you use more than one drawing?

ANSWER: The date of November 9 was drawn No. 80 in the first lottery. This may be the number of a man who was in college during 1970, but graduated and lost his deferment in June 1971.

The date of September 11 may be drawn No. 80 in the next lottery. A man born on September 11 who was available in 1971 would be No. 80 in the random order. So would the first man whose birthday of November 9 was drawn No. 80 a year earlier. If both men were in the same local board, they would be called on the same call or if one, but not both were required, the random alphabet would determine which one went first.

QUESTION: Doesn't the registrant who is in college most of the year have an advantage over the one who can't go to college and is in 1-A throughout the year?

ANSWER: No. The key in both cases is whether his random sequence number is reached in his local board. If the random sequence number has been reached in the case of a registrant who becomes 1-A late in the year, he will be inducted as soon as appeals, examinations, and so forth, are concluded, even though the year has ended. There is no way he can gain an advantage by delaying his actual induction through time required for personal appearance, appeals, examination and other processing if his random sequence number has been reached.

QUESTION: What about the registrant who loses a deferment or exemption just before age 26?

ANSWER: This is like the case in the previous question.

"Any registrant classified in Class 1-A or Class 1-A-O who is subject to random selection, whose random sequence number has been reached, and who would have been ordered to report for induction except for delays due to a pending personal appearance, appeal, preinduction examination, reclassification, or otherwise, shall if and when found acceptable and when such delay is concluded be ordered to report for induction next after delinquents and volunteers even if the year in which he otherwise would have been ordered to report has ended and even if (in cases of extended liability) he has attained his twenty-sixth birthday."

QUESTION: What is the situation of a registrant who is in 1-A for the first part of the year, but enters college in September and requests and gets a student deferment?

ANSWER: If his random sequence number has not been reached, he goes out of the group to return when no longer deferred to the current group. If his random sequence number has been reached, but he has not been issued an order to report for induction, the local board may defer him for college and he would then reenter the selection group in the year he again lost his deferment.

QUESTION: Presently I am in Class 11-A but this deferment will expire on February 28, 1970. I have number 306 from the lottery. I will become 26 on May 1, 1970. If the local board does not reach my number before my 26th birthday, what will my status be?

ANSWER: If the local board has not reached your number before your 26th birthday, you will, upon reaching age 26, leave the pool of those available for induction as part of the 1970 first priority group.

QUESTION: I am 19 years old, have no basis for deferment, and have sequence number 300. If I am not inducted in 1970, can I be inducted in 1971 or in subsequent years?

ANSWER: You are liable for induction to age 26 or to age 35 if you are or have been deferred. In 1971 you will have a decreased vulnerability. However, if the calls for manpower in 1971 are so high that they cannot be met by the 1971 selection group, the local boards will then select from the supply of manpower that might be left over from 1970. As each year goes by without your induction taking place, you will have a decreasing vulnerability.

QUESTION: Next February I will turn 19. Do I enter the lottery pool on that date?

ANSWER: No. You won't be included in the random selection sequence until 1971. The 1970 pool is limited to those born on or after January 1, 1944 and on or before December 31,

QUESTION: My birthday in the lottery gave me sequence number 325, and I will be in Class 1-A next year. Can I count on not being inducted in 1970?

ANSWER: No, because the total manpower requirements are not known and cannot be reasonably estimated at this time.

QUESTION: I have random sequence number 75. When my local board inducts me, will other local boards be inducting registrants with this same sequence number?

ANSWER: Not necessarily. It is expected that all local boards will be proceeding at about the same pace, but because local boards have varying percentages of their registrants in deferred status, and do not have the same number of registrants with the same birthdays, they may not be inducting at any one time all available registrants with a particular random sequence number.

QUESTION: I am 19 years old and now deferred as a student. My random sequence number is 300. If sequence number 300 is not reached in 1970 in my local board, will I be home free when my deferment ends in 1973?

ANSWER: No. If at the time you are classified 1-A in 1973 your local board has not reached sequence number 300 in their induction processing, you will simply be placed in that sequence and you may or may not be reached for induction in 1973. You will still have sequence number 300. If at the time you are classified 1-A your local board has reached random sequence number 300 in 1973, you will be subject to induction at the head of the 1973 selection group.

BEAUTIFUL CITY

By Mike Adams, Idaho Farm Bureau

As I write this editorial, I am sitting in the Washington Hilton Hotel overlooking beautiful Washington, D. C., and beautiful it is. One cannot help but be delighted by the beauty of this city. The Lincoln Monument, the White House, Mount Vernon — choice sights in an area where these proofs of history help to remind one of the greatness of this nation.

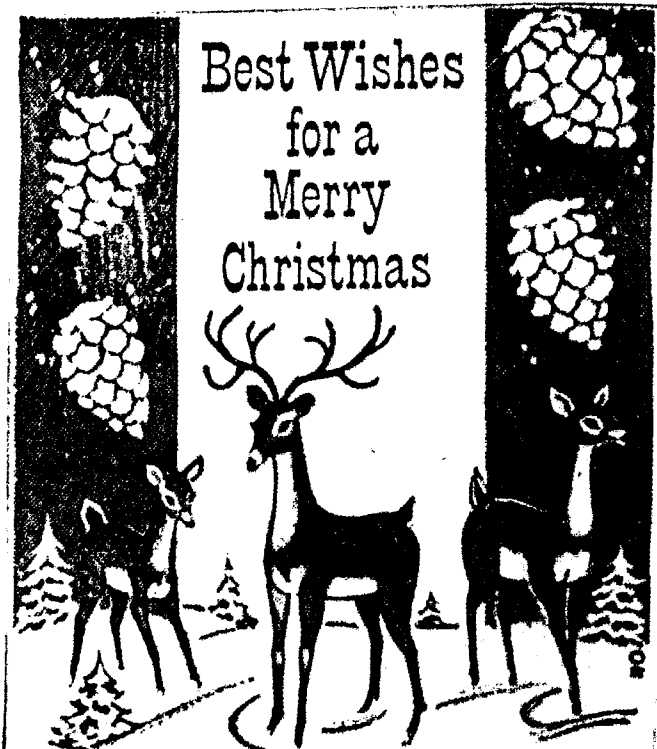

As you stand under the Washington Monument or on the steps of Mt. Vernon you are almost taken back to the years of the father of our nation, George Washington. You can almost see Mr. Washington on his perfect horse riding around his beautiful estate, the feeling of patriotism soon starts to build inside of you.

A trip to the White House and a visit to some of the historic rooms continue to build this pride. Soon you are almost filled with a pounding sensation that this is your country, this is where history is being made every day of the year. A trip to the capital building and a glimpse of the Congressmen and Senators at work helps to build that overwhelming great pride. You think to yourself, "How thankful I am to live in a country where we can elect men and women to represent us in the nation's capital city."

This visit to Washington, D. C., has done a world of good for me and I know to others. This is our country and together we are members of the land of the free. This is a great country to live in. It is not as some would have you believe, a land filled with hate, a land filled with a sick society. In Washington, D. C., and the nearby area, there stands the tributes I have mentioned and other tributes to the founding fathers of this great nation.

NEW REGISTRATION LAW

Idaho sportsmen may not use snowmobiles to pursue, drive or herd any game bird, game mammal or fur-bearing mammal, the Fish and Game Department said today. The harassment of wildlife creatures is a misdemeanor, and persons convicted of such offenses are subject to fines and jail sentences.

It is pointed out that good intentions sometimes may get people into trouble. Wildlife photography, for example, often is a kind of harassment that is harmful to wildlife when the snow is deep and the animals are in poor physical condition.

BOOK GIVEN TO BEGIN PLANS FOR U. OF IDAHO STADIUM

MOSCOW—The University of Idaho was authorized today by the Regents, meeting in Boise, to start designing a coliseum for basketball games, other indoor sports, Commencement exercises and similar events attracting large crowds, and a new football stadium. Total cost of the projects is not to exceed $8,000,000.

The projects will complete a comprehensive modernization and development program for athletics being financed by student fees. Now rising on the campus is a building with swimming pools for meats and instruction. Also authorized is a track with all-weather surface. A perimeter road for the complex has been completed.

In presenting the coliseum and stadium projects to the Regents, University President Ernest W. Hartung pointed out that a feasibility study conducted by architects had determined that a domed structure would be beyond budget limitations for building and operating.

The proposed coliseum is to seat at least 8,000 to 10,000. The stadium is to provide initially for a minimum of 16,000 seats with extension possibilities for up to 23,000. The present stadium, built in the Thirties, has been condemned. Recently part of it including press box facilities, was destroyed by fire.

During the last year, football games were played at Washington State University's Rogers field. This arrangement is expected to be continued until a new stadium is constructed.

Regarding the possibility of a joint WSU-Idaho facility, a report to the Regents stated:

"This may or may not prove to be possible. WSU needs a larger stadium than does the University of Idaho, and may not be ready to begin work on its stadium at this time. It may be less expensive for the University of Idaho to build a stadium on campus, where offices and dressing rooms and other such facilities will be located with the adjacent athletic pavilion than it would be for Idaho to pay its portion of the cost of a larger, more complete and elaborate stadium at some other location, at a later date.

"Therefore, it seems prudent to go ahead with architectural plans for the stadium on campus. If a joint stadium with WSU does prove to be feasible, there will be no need to continue work to develop the stadium at the University of Idaho. In this case there would be a loss of architect's fee; however, the alternative, not to continue to develop plans for a stadium here, would be more costly (with rising prices), if it does develop that a joint facility is not feasible."

Engaged was the architectural firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, associated with Chino, Smull, Hamill, Shaw and Associates.

TIPS ON FOOD CARE

MOSCOW—Food clues that you've forgotten or that are "news to you" can help you with menu planning, shopping and cooking during the holidays. Tips that may aid you in the grocery store and in the kitchen should lead to good eating for your family and friends, says Esther Wilson, extension nutrition specialist, University of Idaho.

TURKEY: Clean cutting boards, pans and knives after they've been in contact with raw bird; use hot, soapy water to be sure bacteria are killed. Always thoroughly clean all utensils between use on raw and cooked poultry.

Thaw frozen turkey in refrigerator or in a container of cold water (while still in water-tight package). Never partly cook turkey ahead of time to save time—cook during one session in the oven. Never put stuffing in ahead of time. Stuff bird before putting into oven. Turkey will be tender and juicy if you buy one with USDA Grade A quality shield.

Put leftovers into several family-size containers rather than one large one; each tightly covered. Store turkey, gravy and dressing separately; freeze some for future use.

CRANBERRY SAUCE: If you make it yourself, buy plump, firm berries with good, bright color. Duller varieties should have at least some red color. Sort out soft, spongy or leaky berries before cooking. They can cause off-flavor.

ROAST BEEF: Cook in open pan at no higher than 325 degrees; do not cover pan and do not sear meat. When done, let "set" on heated platter for 15 to 20 minutes, then carve. Internal temperature will rise from five to ten degrees during this time, so remove from oven a little before desired temperature registers on meat thermometer.

Rib roast is good choice for festive dinner. It's elegant, easy-to-prepare. Figure on serving 1/2 to 1 pound per person. Buy rib roast that's at least two ribs thick for best flavor.

POTATO PANCAKES: Baking is new, simple way to cook them. Prepare standard recipe from cook book, then put into well-greased custard cups or shallow casserole dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Vary by adding diced, cooked meat to mixture or by substituting bread crumbs or matzo meal for flour.

MUSHROOMS: Best quality when small or medium size with caps that are tightly closed or slightly open. Don't buy those that are pitted, discolored or that have wide-open caps.

CHEESE: Choose from more than 400 varieties. Spread Blue cheese on fruit, crackers. Brick cheese, discovered in America, slices without crumbling. Crumble Gorgonzola cheese in salad to accent flavors.

Good buys during holidays: Fresh pears, apples, potatoes, and sweet potatoes; canned peaches, pears, tomatoes and tomato products; dry beans, split peas and lentils; broiler fryers.

Notes of an Ex-soldier ...

When I think about the thousands of young American soldiers who are sent to Germany each year, I am always struck by the fact that the army does virtually nothing to prepare them for the experience of being sent to a foreign land. This lack of preparation has a great effect on the behavior of the young Americans ordered overseas, and has a great deal to do with the attitude of the German people toward the American military man and his dependants.

The non-career soldier going overseas to Germany usually finds himself being subjected to the following experience. One day in training camp or during his duty in the states, he hears that he "has orders" for Germany. If he is lucky he will soon be officially informed of the orders by being given a copy of them. In the middle of a lot of mimeographed shorthand, he may, if he reads carefully, see that he is assigned to a certain APO number, with a unit listed to which he will be assigned. There may or may not be a town or city name given. So the soldier is left wondering where the number is that he is assigned to, and usually he finds it very difficult to find anyone who can give him the name of the city or even the part of Germany he will be in. The man then reports on a certain day to Ft. Dix, New Jersey, and from there he flies from McGuire Air Base to Rhine-Main Air Base in Germany. He is sent to a replacement center, Frankfurt, where he may find himself assigned to a different number and unit. Many men still don't know where in Germany they will spend the next two or more years. The man is then taken to the Frankfurt train station, and here, for the first time many men find out where they are going, for they are issued a ticket on the German railway. By this time the man is exhausted and groggy from 24 hours of processing and travel, and is really sure of only one thing: he is a long, long way from home, and faces a long time in this strange country about which he has been told nothing. At this point many young men become convinced that neither Germany nor the Germans are worth the effort to understand, and this feeling stays with them all the time they are in Germany.

The army sergeant assigned to meet the group I was in when we arived in Germany serves as an example of how careless the army is in preparing the American soldier for his stay in a new and strange country. This sergeant was on the bus with us as we drove to the air terminal, and on the way a German airport worker stopped the bus to convey some traffic information to the driver. As the bus pulled away from him, the sergeant, angered at the delay, turned to the bus of young men who had been in Germany for about one-half hour and said: "These Krauts think they know it all, but they are just stupid beer drinkers." This was the introduction to Germans for about 60 young American Soldiers.

Before he gets to Germany, the average soldier is told nothing about the language, culture, history and customs of Germany. When he goes away from his military post to shop or sightsee or have a few beers, he is almost certain to feel ill at ease. When this feeling is compounded by the loneliness of being away from home, then conflict or at best a feeling of tension arises between the German and the American. The most obvious point of conflict is language. The soldier who speaks no German meets only those Germans who are in business around the military post, people who are exactly the same as those around military posts in the states: they exist to take the soldier's money. Many soldiers thus feel that all Germans want to take advantage of the lonely American. Finding housing for wives and children is another point of conflict, one which the army does very little to ease. Those men who must live in the German community are not career soldiers, and their families are in Germany at the individual's expense, not the army's. They must therefore find their own housing. To me this was an advantage, for it was a wonderful opportunity to live among the German people. To many, it is a huge difficulty, and the soldier who has trouble of some kind with his German landlord is often told by the army that it is his problem, not the army's, because he brought his wife to Germany. Many of these problems could be avoided if the man were given the opportunity to learn something about German customs. American wives often have difficulty with German customs. For example, German women never appear in public with their hair in rollers, or wearing shorts, both of which are common in America. The American wife who goes shopping with her hair in rollers is greeted with stares and often with rude behavior, and she then feels that the Germans are unfriendly and hard to get along with. American wives arriving in Germany are required by the army to attend a training session which tells them how they will be evacuated from their homes in an emergency, but I never heard of an officially sponsored class for wives on German customs.

The army itself creates tension by seemingly acting in an indifferent manner toward the German people. While training, American units will often drive tanks and trucks across freshly planted fields, destroying long hours of labor by a German farmer. Now the U. S. Army will pay for the damages if the farmer files for them, but the German farmer, almost any farmer, hates to see his work torn up needlessly.

What does the army do to make it possible for the individual soldier to understand Germany and the German people? There are language and orientation programs offered during off duty hours, but the individual is given little encouragement to attend. In the education center where I worked, a program was designed to give each newly arrived soldier eight hours of instruction in German history and customs and thirty-two hours of German language training. Each week the units on post had to be called and literally begged to send men to the classes, and those who were sent often were given duty the following night, which, of course, made them very anxious to return to class the next day. The army in every "host" country in the world provides the opportunity to learn the language in

Don't Skip Breakfast, Says U. of I. Expert

U. of I., Moscow — Skinning breakfast is a poor way to lose weight, the county home economics agent says. Not only is it a bad practice to make do on a cup of coffee, but it usually does not take off pounds.

Many people who skip breakfast are so hungry by noon that they eat a big lunch. If they don't do that they snack during the morning. No weight is lost. Frequently there is a gain. That's what studies show.

Youngsters and adults do better work and feel better as a rule if they have an adequate breakfast. A balanced meal then starts the day right and helps the other meals do an adequate job of nutrition.

In some homes, the agent suggests, it may help if various members of the family take turns preparing the breakfast. Individuals can provide variety by serving their favorite things. Sometimes breakfasts are monotonous. Something different pep up the meal and creates appetite.

free, off-duty classes. However, even this opportunity disappeared last summer in Germany, when defense spending cuts were announced. The language classes were in the future to cost each man $12 on his own time and the orientation program was to be cut.

My two years experience in Germany lead me to think that the Germans are very puzzled and somewhat embittered by the American military presence in Germany. Most of the people are thankful for and respect the Americans for their efforts during and after World War II. But they cannot understand why the U. S. Army makes so little effort to teach the soldiers sent to Germany something about the language, culture and customs of Germany. The ordinary German usually likes the ordinary American—if the barrier created by the seeming indifference of the U. S. Army can be cut down. The American in return usually gets along fine with the German—but finds it difficult to overcome the lack of attention paid by the army to preparing him for his stay in a foreign land.
