Lions Meeting Held Wednesday

The Kendrick Community Lions Club met Wednesday evening of last week in the Kendrick Fire Hall, with a fairly good turn-out despite the basketball tournaments.

There was a small delegation present from the Lewiston Lions Club. Following a delicious dinner served by the School Foods Service Ass'n, the business of the evening was taken up, with W. C. Turner, president, presiding.

Correspondence was read inviting members to attend conventions being held in the District during the month of April.

Committee reports were heard and a discussion held on the coming Annual Locust Blossom Festival, including the Queen Pageant. The matter of a theme for the Festival was discussed but no decision reached—it being suggested that members talk with the V. F. W. and others before reaching a decision.

The meeting was then turned over to Jerry Brown of the Entertainment committee, who introduced Don Spooner of the Lewis-Clark Council Boy Scouts of America. He spoke on the "Benefits of Scouting" and showed a film strip on the aims of the organization. He also highly complimented Scoutmaster Darrel Brocke, Assistant Scoutmaster Jerry Brown, and the Lions Club for their work with the Scouts.

McCreary Appointed To Position At U. of Idaho

Frank P. McCreary, who has been serving with the national fund raising organization of American City Bureau/Beaver Associates at Lansing, Michigan, has been appointed Coordinator of University Public Relations at the University of Idaho. It was announced Friday by President Ernest W. Hartung, following Regents' approval.

For McCreary, it will be a return to a familiar scene. A graduate of the university from Kendrick, he served as staff editor in the Publications Department from 1964 to 1966, and as alumni editor and assistant alumni secretary from 1966 to 1968. He left the university in 1968 to join the fund raising organization which pioneered the establishment of the Fund for The Performing Arts Center in Idaho. While at Lansing, McCreary was active in raising funds for Interlochen, the noted music center.

Prior to joining the University of Idaho staff in 1964, McCreary had wide experience in the newspaper field. He served as editor, "East Side Journal, Kirkland, Washington, 1948-50; editor-manager Kendrick Gazette, 1959-62; publisher-owner, Latah County Press, Troy, 1961-62; branch manager, Daily Idahoian, Pullman, Washington, 1962-63; and advertising executive, Daily Idahoian, Moscow 1963-64.

From 1954-56, McCreary served in the Army, with most of his service in Germany.

Boy Scouts Will Help With Kendrick Red Cross Drive

Members of the Kendrick Boy Scout Troop No. 149 will help in the campaign to raise funds for the Latah County Chapter of the Red Cross. It was announced this week by Scoutmaster Darrel Brocke. Brocke said the Scouts plan a door-to-door canvass on Monday evening, April 6th.

Among the major programs of the county Red Cross is their operation of the Blood Bank Program. During the year 1969 Latah County residents received 497 pints of blood from the Blood Bank. Blood provided county residents through the Red Cross is considerably less expensive than if it were purchased from a commercial bank; but the most important thing is that it is available when needed. Three patients from Genesee used 7 pints of blood from this program; 12 patients from Kendrick used 31 pints, and 1 patient from Juliaetta used 1 pint.

Other programs sponsored or supported by the Red Cross were the swimming program; first aid classes; nursing classes and service to military families.

Bulldogs Ousted From State Tourney After Defeats By Wendell and Grace

Genesee's Bulldog basketball team, who fought their way to the District 2 A-3 championship by winning close games in the final seconds of play, was bounced out of the state tournament last week via the same route as they were beaten by Wendell Thursday night 62-58, and then were eliminated Friday night by Grace 48-45. Both of these games were close and hotly contested and in doubt until the final seconds of play.

Genesee fell behind Wendell in the first quarter of the Thursday night game; caught up with the south Idaho team in the second quarter, went ahead in the third and then blew it in a wild final frame.

Wendell's Craig Thompson dropped in a long two-pointer to send the Trojans out in front Thursday night and the Wendell team built a 6-0 lead before Fred Morscheck finally got Genesee on the board with a field goal in under the basket. Mike Eglund made it 6-4 a few seconds later. Genesee slumped again and Wendell was ahead 19-11 at the end of the first quarter, stalling the Bulldogs with their tight man-to-man defense, and some outstanding ball handling.

Genesee came out strong in the second quarter and began to close the scoring gap. Fred Morscheck's field goal brought the Bulldogs to within one point 24-23 and Mike Eglund finally brought Genesee ahead for the first time 25-24, with 4:28 left in the quarter. The Trojans tied the score at 25-25 and then went ahead 26-25 before Nick Eglund's two-pointer put the Bulldogs back in the lead. The score was tied at 28-28 and 32-32 before a free throw gave Wendell the 33-32 half-time lead.

Coach Ozzie Kanikkeberg sent Ron Hopkins into the game in the third quarter and the little guard provided the spark that shoved Genesee out to a ten-point lead. Hopkins stole the ball from the Trojan ace Kirk Dennis numerous times and forced the sharpshooter from the south to commit three quick fouls as he attempted to regain the ball. Late in the third quarter the Wendell team put on a full-court press that rattled the Bulldogs and Genesee's lead slowly began to dwindle and was 52-46 as the fourth quarter started.

In the final period Wendell caught up with Genesee and tied the score at 52-52 and the lead traded hands several times before the Trojans went ahead to stay at 60-58 with slightly over a minute to play. In the final seconds of play Wendell slipped in another lay-in shot to give them the 62-58 win.

Fred Morscheck, who did fine work throughout the tournament accounted for 20 of Genesee's points, and Mike Eglund added 17 more.

Genesee Ousted
The Grace Red Devils came out of the Caribou Valley of southeast Idaho and sent the Bulldogs home for good Friday night as they put a full court press on the Genesee team in the final minutes of play and won 48-45.

Again it was a full court press and a poor final period that spelled defeat for the Bulldogs.

Grace and Genesee battled to a 9-9 first quarter tie and then the Red Devils outscored the Bulldogs 15-11 in the second quarter to lead 23-20 at the half.

Mike Eglund's shot in under the basket with 2:11 remaining in the third quarter gave the Bulldogs back the lead at 33-32. Baskets by Nick Eglund and Dale Hickman and Ron Hopkins gave Genesee its biggest lead 39-32. From there on out it was downhill for the Bulldogs. Grace went ahead 40-39 with 4:10 left in the game. Nick Eglund had already fouled out early in the fourth quarter and Mike fouled out with slightly over two minutes remaining. Genesee slipped back into the lead with 40 seconds left on Fred Morscheck's lay-in, and then Grace scored a field goal and two free throws to win 48-45.

Mike Eglund's 14 points paced the Bulldogs with Dale Hickman getting 11 more.

Wendell Wins
Wendell went on to defeat Home-dale Saturday evening 67-60 for the State A-3 Championship.

Big Money Tournament
Tournament Manager James V. Muscat said that the District 2 tournament completed in Lewiston two weeks ago netted $7,796.31. Out of this amount there remained $4,378.99 to divide among the seven competing schools. There was a total of 6,603 paid admissions during the course of the tournament.

Genesee's share of the tournament dividends with their travel allowance totaled $660.07. Kendrick's share came to $655.57. Each of the schools received an equal portion—$625.57, the difference coming from travel expense.

Study of Problems of Controversal Dam Released By Comission

By Stu Murrell, Reg. Conservationist

Lewiston — The Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Oregon Game Commission recently completed a study of recreational use in the High Mountain Sheep and China Gardens reservoir sites on the Snake River. This study, conducted throughout 1969, showed an estimated 50,107 man-days of recreation spent in the area by fishermen, hunters, and general recreationists, such as picnickers, boaters and sightseers. It constitutes a minimum estimate, since many people viewed the canyon or gained access from points which were not sampled in the study. An estimated 2,107 up-river boat trips were made to gain access to this outstanding recreational area. These boaters were made up of about 69 percent anglers; 25 percent general recreationists, and 6 percent hunters.

The study was a result of the statements by the Pacific Northwest Power combine that indicated they knew of only 2,000 man-days of use in this portion of the Snake River, and many people assumed this was all the recreation taking place. They also stated the use would be much higher with more easily accessible reservoir such as High Mountain Sheep.

There were several methods used to conduct the study. These included a boat checking station at Cache Creek; sample checks below Hells Canyon Dam; interviews taken from people entering the lower Innaha Dug Bar area by road and a U. S. Forest Service car counter placed on the Pittsburg Landing road, which was supplemented by interviews on a sample basis. It was obvious there was need for an accurate survey of recreation in this area.

The High Mountain Sheep project with its accompanying China Gardens re-regulatory dam on the Snake River below the mouth of the Salmon River has had a stormy history. In 1964, a syndicate of four private utilities, called "Pacific Northwest Power Company (PNP) was awarded a license by the Federal Power Commission to construct a 670-foot High Mountain Sheep Dam on the Snake River just above the mouth of the Salmon River. However, it was opposed in a legal dispute by a combine of 18 public power utilities which wanted to build a dam located at the Nez Perce site just below the mouth of the Salmon River.

The issue went to the U. S. Supreme Court and they passed down a landmark conservation decision which said in effect, the Federal Power Commission should take into consideration whether the project will be in the public interest and that determination can be made only after an exploration of all the issues relevant to the public interest. These include future power demand and supply in the area, alternate sources of power, and the public interest in preserving reaches of wild river in wilderness areas, and the preservation of anadromous fish for commercial and recreational purposes and the protection of wildlife. On previous projects the Federal Power Commission was primarily concerned with the power benefits when it issued a license to construct a dam.

This Supreme Court decision gave the conservationists a new chance to save the remaining portion of Hells Canyon. A Hells Canyon Preservation Council was formed at Idaho Falls and they actively sought to save the deepest gorge in North America. The Idaho Fish and Game Department voiced their objection to the project as did the U. S. Forest Service. The Federal Power Commission recently resumed hearings in Washington, D. C. on this project and testimony is being sought by any interested party at the present time.

Why were conservationists concerned? There are many reasons. The loss of the unique scenery in this deepest gorge in North America plunging from 6,500 feet elevation at one point down to about 1,400 feet elevation at the bottom. The loss of the outstanding white sturgeon, steelhead, and smallmouth bass fisheries which require running water to maintain an adequate population. The potential loss of steelhead and salmon in the Snake River downstream from the project because of changes in water quality. The loss of approximately 7,500 acres of critical big game range utilized by a herd of 20,000 to 30,000 deer located in Idaho and Oregon. The loss of critical shoreline vegetation needed by Hungarian partridge, quail and chukars to survive the hot summers. And, the loss of a wild, scenic river which is sure to attract many more thousands of people in the future.

What are some of the additional findings of the recreation study? A check of the river just below Hells Canyon Dam indicated there were 322 angler hours spent per lineal mile of water on the river as compared to 30 angler hours per lineal mile on Hells Canyon Reservoir and 53.6 on Oxbow Reservoir. A survey conducted in 1968 by the Cooperative Fishery Unit of the University of Idaho revealed that the majority of Idaho anglers preferred stream fishing to lake or reservoir fishing. The figures would appear to bear this out.

Approximately 65 percent of the anglers interviewed below the Hells Canyon Dam expressed a preference for steelhead, salmon or sturgeon; those fishes that would be eliminated by hydroelectric development in the study area. Another 23 percent of the anglers interviewed expressed a preference for smallmouth bass, rainbow trout or channel catfish, and the quality of the fishery for these three species would be adversely affected by hydroelectric development in the study area.

The fishery was excellent for the

Switch To Fight Smog

The Idaho Department of Highways has learned of a California plan to combat smog.

The Pacific Lighting Systems Company of California has developed an automobile that can switch from gasoline fuel to natural gas. Company officials report that pollutants from the engine when using natural gas have a lower concentration than with gasoline. They suggest that the vehicle can be powered by natural gas when conventional fuel might increase smog, such as when driving at uneven speeds in heavy traffic. Conversion from one fuel source to another is accomplished by the flick of a switch on the dashboard. No significant engine modifications are needed for the two-fuel system. Cost of converting the test automobiles was approximately $300 each but company officials indicate that the cost would drop to about $200 per vehicle if conversions were done in quantity. Engines operating on natural gas show some power loss, engineers indicate, but they hasten to add that this is more than made up by savings on operating costs. Test results indicate that a vehicle operating on natural gas would have hydrocarbon emissions of 88 parts per million of air, as compared to 221 parts per million of air for gasoline.

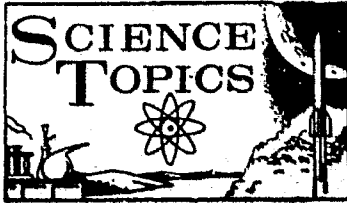

Construction projects providing improvements for more than 230,000 miles of primary and secondary highways and their urban extensions have been completed since 1956, in addition to construction on the nation's Interstate system.

Motor vehicle registration in the United States topped the 100 million mark in 1968. The total of 101,048,450 up more than 4 percent over the previous year, included 83,698,100 automobiles, 351,804 buses and 16,998,546 trucks.

The average automobile owner pays about $30 a year (60 cents a week) in federal taxes to the Highway Trust Fund which provides the federal share of the nation's road-building costs.

The U. S. Department of Transportation estimates that benefits to the automobile owner should amount to about $100 a year when the Interstate highway system is completed, through lower operating costs, reduced accidents, and time and other savings.

upriver boat anglers sampled at the Cache Creek checking station. The anglers fished a total of 20,680 hours and caught 1,322 steelhead; 23 chinook salmon; 10 trout; 7,495 smallmouth bass; 297 catfish and 427 black crappie.

A JUMPING MACHINE built by Stanford University engineering students has been leaping about the campus to determine if a "pogo-stick" type vehicle would be practical for transportation on the moon. With its three-legged landing gear and air-powered "jumping foot," the contraption doesn't even remotely resemble the planned moon vehicle. But its 12-foot leaps, stabilized in flight by a high-speed gyroscope, show that the pogo-stick mode of transport probably would work just fine on the moon.

THE WAY to a man's heart is still through his stomach, but a woman doesn't have to be an expert cook to win her man, says a food technologist at Votator, Jeffersonville, Ky. He says today's convenience foods are labor-savers in a package. "Any woman can prepare a delicious and nutritious meal if she just follows the directions on the container. Industry has rescued the poor cook by taking the guesswork out of preparing a meal, but this doesn't mean a woman can't enhance the palatability of a family's fare by using condiments," he said.

Evidence indicates that the moon and the earth were formed in the same part of the solar system, according to a lunar investigator at the University of Chicago. Some scientists believe the moon was once a part of the earth and spun off. Others hold that the moon was formed in a distant part of the solar system and was later captured into its present orbit. The theory that the moon and earth were formed separately but near one another is the least popular of three prevailing theories regarding the moon's origin.

AN ESTIMATED million cubic yards of sand—enough to fill Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum approximately two-thirds full—is eroded and permanently lost from Southern California beaches every year, reports a University of Southern California geologist. He said that apparently the only way of saving the dwindling beaches will be to replenish them with sand dredged up from the sea bottom. Natural and man-made causes—waves, low rainfall, flood-control structures on land and shoreline structures and barriers—have combined to bring the beach erosion problem to the critical stage at several places.

A HEART OF STEEL, stomach like cast iron, indestructible liver and kidneys are a part of everyday research on artificial human organs. Latest device is an implantable heart-assist unit that eases the load on hearts, reports Industry Week magazine. Farm Use Only Tires Pose Danger

So-called "Farm Use Only" tires may be dangerous for regular highway use, the Department of Transportation's National Highway Safety Bureau notified the Idaho Department of Highways today.

"Motorists should know that those who buy such tires for normal highway use may be endangering their lives and the lives of their families and other members of the general motoring public," said Douglas Toms, National Highway Safety Bureau Director.

"Motorists also should be aware that some unscrupulous tire outlets have been known to buff off the restrictive language and sell the tires for regular passenger car use to unsuspecting buyers."

Toms warned that tires marked with the words "Farm Use Only," "Not for Highway Use," "For Non-Highway Use," or other such restrictive terms do not meet Federal Safety standards for passenger car tires. Many such tires were actually manufactured for passenger car use, but have been reclassified and marked in this manner because of a manufacturing defect which adversely affects their performance. They should not be given normal highway use.

On December 31, 1969, the Bureau announced its increasing concern with the improper use of such tires, and disclosed that it was asking tire manufacturers to provide information about the sales volume of

"Farm Use Only" tires. The investigation shows that some 185,000 tires were manufactured for normal highway use and were reclassified and labeled with restrictive language in 1969.

If manufactured after August 1, 1968, all passenger car tires must contain certain labeling information molded in the sidewall. This includes the symbol DOT, by which the manufacturer certifies that the tire complies with Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 109. Passenger car tires without this symbol should not be purchased for regular highway use.

additional steps to halt the practice of selling "Farm Use Only" tires for normal highway use. It is considering regulations under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act which would require such tires to be marked in a more permanent, prominent, and explicit manner, deep enough to leave a pronounced scar if buffed off; and which would require labeling warning that their sale for normal highway use is a violation of Federal law subject to civil penalties up to $1,000 per violation.

Study of Problems of Controversal Dam Released By Comission

By Stu Murrell, Reg. Conservationist

Lewiston — The Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Oregon Game Commission recently completed a study of recreational use in the High Mountain Sheep and China Gardens reservoir sites on the Snake River. This study, conducted throughout 1969, showed an estimated 50,107 man-days of recreation spent in the area by fishermen, hunters and general recreationists, such as picnickers, boaters and sightseers. It constitutes a minimum estimate, since many people viewed the canyon or gained access from points which were not sampled in the study. An estimated 2,107 up-river boat trips were made to gain access to this outstanding recreational area. These boaters were made up of about 69 percent anglers; 25 percent general recreationists; and 6 percent hunters.

The study was a result of the statements by the Pacific Northwest Power combine that indicated they knew of only 2,000 man-days of use in this portion of the Snake River, and many people assumed this was all the recreation taking place. They also stated the use would be much higher with more easily accessible reservoir such as High Mountain Sheep.

There were several methods used to conduct the study. These included a boat checking station at Cache Creek; sample checks below Hell's Canyon Dam; interviews taken from people entering the lower Innahadug Bar area by road, and a U. S. Forest Service car counter placed on the Pittsburg Landing road, which was supplemented by interviews on a sample basis. It was obvious there was need for an accurate survey of recreation in this area.

The High Mountain Sheep project with its accompanying China Gardens re-regulatory dam on the Snake River below the mouth of the Salmon River has had a stormy history. In 1964, a syndicate of four, private utilities, called "Pacific Northwest Power Company (PNP)" was awarded a license by the Federal Power Commission to construct a 670-foot High Mountain Sheep Dam on the Snake River just above the mouth of the Salmon River. However, it was opposed in a legal dispute by a combine of 18 public power utilities which wanted to build a dam located at the Nez Perce site just below the mouth of the Salmon River.

The issue went to the U. S. Supreme Court and they passed down a landmark conservation decision which said in effect, the Federal Power Commission should take into consideration whether the project will be in the public interest and that determination can be made only after an exploration of all the issues relevant to the public interest. These include future power demand and supply in the area, alternate sources of power, and the public interest in preserving reaches of wild river in wilderness areas, and the preservation of anadromous fish for commercial and recreational purposes and the protection of wildlife. On previous projects the Federal Power Commission was primarily concerned with the power benefits when it issued a license to construct a dam.

This Supreme Court decision gave the conservationists a new chance to save the remaining portion of Hells Canyon. A Hells Canyon Preservation Council was formed at Idaho Falls and they actively sought to save the deepest gorge in North America. The Idaho Fish and Game Department voiced their objection to the project as did the U. S. Forest Service. The Federal Power Commission recently resumed hearings in Washington, D. C. on this project and testimony is being sought by any interested party at the present time.

Why were conservationists concerned? There are many reasons. The loss of the unique scenery in this deepest gorge in North America plunging from 6,500 feet elevation at one point down to about 1,400 feet elevation at the bottom. The loss of the outstanding white sturgeon, steelhead, and smallmouth bass fisheries which require running water to maintain an adequate population. The potential loss of steelhead and salmon in the Snake River downstream from the project because of changes in water quality. The loss of approximately 7,500 acres of critical big game range utilized by a herd of 20,000 to 30,000 deer located in Idaho and Oregon. The loss of critical shoreline vegetation needed by Hungarian partridge, quail and chukars to survive the hot summers. And, the loss of a wild, scenic river which is sure to attract many more thousands of people in the future.

What are some of the additional findings of the recreation study? A check of the river just below Hells Canyon Dam indicated there were 322 angler hours spent per lineal mile of water on the river as compared to 30 angler hours per lineal mile on Hells Canyon Reservoir and 53.6 on Oxbow Reservoir. A survey conducted in 1968 by the Cooperative Fishery Unit of the University of Idaho revealed that the majority of Idaho anglers preferred stream fishing to lake or reservoir fishing. The figures would appear to bear this out.

Approximately 65 percent of the anglers interviewed below the Hells Canyon Dam expressed a preference for steelhead, salmon or sturgeon; those fishes that would be eliminated by hydroelectric development in the study area. Another 23 percent of the anglers interviewed expressed a preference for smallmouth bass, rainbow trout or channel catfish, and the quality of the fishery for these three species would be adversely affected by hydroelectric development in the study area.

The fishery was excellent for the

Switch To Fight Smog

The Idaho Department of Highways has learned of a California plan to combat smog.

The Pacific Lighting Systems Company of California has developed an automobile that can switch from gasoline fuel to natural gas. Company officials report that pollutants from the engine when using natural gas have a lower concentration than with gasoline. They suggest that the vehicle can be powered by natural gas when conventional fuel might increase smog, such as when driving at uneven speeds in heavy traffic. Conversion from one fuel source to another is accomplished by the flick of a switch on the dashboard. No significant engine modifications are needed for the two-fuel system. Cost of converting the test automobiles was approximately $300 each but company officials indicate that the cost would drop to about $200 per vehicle if conversions were done in quantity. Engines operating on natural gas show some power loss, engineers indicate, but they hasten to add that this is more than made up by savings on operating costs. Test results indicate that a vehicle operating on natural gas would have hydrocarbon emissions of 88 parts per million of air, as compared to 221 parts per million of air for gasoline.

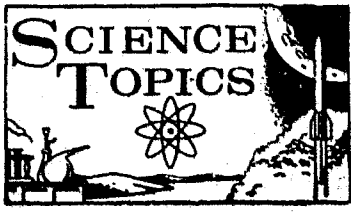

Construction projects providing improvements for more than 230,000 miles of primary and secondary highways and their urban extensions have been completed since 1956, in addition to construction on the nation's Interstate system.

Motor vehicle registration in the United States topped the 100 million mark in 1968. The total of 101,048,450 up more than 4 percent over the previous year, included 83,698,100 automobiles, 351,804 buses and 16,998,546 trucks.

The average automobile owner pays about $30 a year (60 cents a week) in federal taxes to the Highway Trust Fund which provides the federal share of the nation's road-building costs.

The U.S. Department of Transportation estimates that benefits to the automobile owner should amount to about $100 a year when the Interstate highway system is completed, through lower operating costs, reduced accidents, and time and other savings.

upriver boat anglers sampled at the Cache Creek checking station. The anglers fished a total of 20,680 hours and caught 1,322 steelhead; 23 chinook salmon; 10 trout; 7,495 smallmouth bass; 297 catfish and 427 black crappie.

A JUMPING MACHINE built by Stanford University engineering students has been leaping about the campus to determine if a "pogo-stick" type vehicle would be practical for transportation on the moon. With its three-legged landing gear and air-powered "jumping foot," the contraption doesn't even remotely resemble the planned moon vehicle. But its 12-foot leaps, stabilized in flight by a high-speed gyroscope, show that the pogo-stick mode of transport probably would work just fine on the moon.

THE WAY to a man's heart is still through his stomach, but a woman doesn't have to be an expert cook to win her man, says a food technologist at Votator, Jeffersonville, Ky. He says today's convenience foods are labor-savers in a package. "Any woman can prepare a delicious and nutritious meal if she just follows the directions on the container. Industry has rescued the poor cook by taking the guesswork out of preparing a meal, but this doesn't mean a woman can't enhance the palatability of a family's fare by using condiments," he said.

Evidence indicates that the moon and the earth were formed in the same part of the solar system, according to a lunar investigator at the University of Chicago. Some scientists believe the moon was once a part of the earth and spun off. Others hold that the moon was formed in a distant part of the solar system and was later captured into its present orbit. The theory that the moon and earth were formed separately but near one another is the least popular of three prevailing theories regarding the moon's origin.

AN ESTIMATED million cubic yards of sand—enough to fill Los Angeles' Memorial Coliseum approximately two-thirds full—is eroded and permanently lost from Southern California beaches every year, reports a University of Southern California geologist. He said that apparently the only way of saving the dwindling beaches will be to replenish them with sand dredged up from the sea bottom. Natural and man-made causes—waves, low rainfall, flood-control structures on land and shoreline structures and barriers—have combined to bring the beach erosion problem to the critical stage at several places.

A HEART OF STEEL, stomach like cast iron, indestructible liver and kidneys are a part of everyday research on artificial human organs. Latest device is an implantable heart-assist unit that eases the load on hearts, reports Industry Week magazine. Batteries provide standby power for a small pump that aids a normal heart's left ventricle.

Farm Use Only Tires Pose Danger

So-called "Farm Use Only" tires may be dangerous for regular highway use, the Department of Transportation's National Highway Safety Bureau notified the Idaho Department of Highways today.

"Motorists should know that those who buy such tires for normal highway use may be endangering their lives and the lives of their families and other members of the general motoring public," said Douglas Toms, National Highway Safety Bureau Director.

"Motorists also should be aware that some unscrupulous tire outlets have been known to buff off the restrictive language and sell the tires for regular passenger car use to unsuspecting buyers."

Toms warned that tires marked with the words "Farm Use Only," "Not for Highway Use," "For Non-Highway Use," or other such restrictive terms do not meet Federal Safety standards for passenger car tires. Many such tires were actually manufactured for passenger car use, but have been reclassified and marked in this manner because of a manufacturing defect which adversely affects their performance. They should not be given normal highway use.

On December 31, 1969, the Bureau announced its increasing concern with the improper use of such tires, and disclosed that it was asking tire manufacturers to provide information about the sales volume of

"Farm Use Only" tires. The investigation shows that some 185,000 tires were manufactured for normal highway use and were reclassified and labeled with restrictive language in 1969.

If manufactured after August 1, 1968, all passenger car tires must contain certain labeling information molded in the sidewall. This includes the symbol DOT, by which the manufacturer certifies that the tire complies with Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 109. Passenger car tires without this symbol should not be purchased for regular highway use.

additional steps to halt the practice of selling "Farm Use Only" tires for normal highway use. It is considering regulations under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act which would require such tires to be marked in a more permanent, prominent, and explicit manner, deep enough to leave a pronounced scar if buffed off; and which would require labeling warning that their sale for normal highway use is a violation of Federal law subject to civil penalties up to $1,000 per violation.

A reporter was interviewing a man who was believed to be the oldest resident in town.

"May I ask how old you are" the newsman inquired.

"I just turned 100 this week," the older man proudly replied.

"Great! Do you suppose you'll see another 100?" the reporter asked playfully.

"Well," said the man thoughtfully, "I'm stronger now than when I started the first 100!"

The pastor of a small country church wanted to make some much-needed improvements. His first suggestion was to purchase a chandelier but there was a great deal of opposition. Finally, he asked one of the most vocal opponents of the idea why he opposed purchasing the chandelier.

"Well," said the man, "first, no one can spell it, so how can we order it? Second, no one can play it if we get it. And, third, what we really need is more light."

When a man no longer complains about his bride's cooking, it means that either she has learned better—or, he has!

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

The Veterans Administration Center, Boise, Idaho reported today that some 30 wives and widows of veterans and servicemen are taking advantage of educational assistance.

Loryn E. Kopan, Center Director, said certain wives and widows became eligible for benefits under the law when it became effective Dec. 1, 1968.

The law makes educational assistance available to wives or widows of veterans with service-connected total and permanent disabilities, and widows of veterans or servicemen who die of service-connected causes.

Also eligible are widows of veterans who die of nonservice-connected causes while totally and permanently disabled due to service-connected causes. In addition, the law covers children of such veterans and servicemen.

Kopan also reported that one trainee in six was under 25 years of age when she entered training.

Kopan added that more than one half of the wives and widow trainees about 54 per cent, pursued their education in college, while about one in 12, just over 8 per cent, studied in graduate schools.

Almost half of the college trainees, 48 per cent were enrolled on a part-time basis while just over 85 per cent of those studying below college level did so on a full-time basis, Kopan said.

He urged persons interested in applying for such benefits to contact

RhonoX[®]

It's a simple matter of dollars and cents.

RhonoX is more expensive, but it costs you less.

Unlike most other herbicides, RhonoX kills the weeds and leaves your wheat alone.

So, when it comes time to sell your wheat, you have a lot more wheat to sell.

RhonoX or 2, 4-D?

RhonoX and 2, 4-D are both selective herbicides.

When it comes to killing weeds both of them kill off most broadleaf weeds that plague wheat farmers.

But, RhonoX, in addition, kills off some tough ones, that 2, 4-D can't touch.

Another thing in RhonoX's favor is that it can be sprayed on your wheat as early as the 3-Leaf stage. While with 2, 4-D you can't spray until the crop is fully tillered.

Now, price.

2, 4-D costs less than RhonoX.

But that's only the beginning.

Because 2, 4-D can be damaging to your wheat.

RhonoX lets it grow.

In fact, RhonoX gives you a much higher bushel yield per acre than 2, 4-D. So you're sure of making a higher profit with RhonoX. The extra bushels more than offset the extra cost.

As for 2, 4-D, we don't mean it doesn't have its uses.

We make it too. For use as a herbicide where crop tolerance is not as critical.

RhonoX is Proven.

It is actually being used effectively by hundreds of your neighboring farmers who are enjoying higher yields than ever before.

If there's one thing they've learned about RhonoX it's just this: Pay a little more money in the beginning and end up with a lot more at the end.

For more information on how RhonoX can help you, please see your supplier or your Rhodia/Chipman representative.

Helping The Stroke Patient Battle Back

Once a stroke has occurred, the important point to remember is that in most cases some degree of recovery is possible, and in some there is total recovery. How fast and how much progress is made depends largely on the stroke patient himself. There is also a good deal the family can do to help the stroke patient at home, Idaho Heart Association notes.

A stroke results when something interferes with the blood supply to the brain, blanking out one or more of the control centers of the brain.

An important consideration in stroke is hypertension, high blood pressure. Elevated levels raise the risk of stroke in two ways. First, an abnormally high pressure accelerates the progression of atherosclerosis, the condition in which arteries are narrowed by fatty deposits. When an artery is clogged, blocking blood flow to the brain, a stroke occurs. Secondly, increased pressure may put an added strain on an already damaged blood vessel in the brain, causing it to "blow" and produce so-called hemorrhagic stroke. Your doctor can help you lower your blood pressure, if it is too high.

After a stroke, the patient may not be able to move his left fingers, hand arm or his left foot. Sometimes the part of the brain that controls the ability to speak is affected; and sometimes the patient is unable to think clearly.

The doctor should be called immediately when a stroke occurs so that he can determine the proper individualized treatment for each patient. The family's cooperation with the doctor may be essential to the patient's recovery. Often the doctor will arrange for a nurse or physical therapist to come in and care for the patient and show the family what can be done and how to do it.

Soon after a stroke, the doctor may start a program of exercise to restore function of a paralyzed arm or leg in order to prevent stiffening of muscles and joints. If the patient is unable to perform these exercises for himself, the family may have to exercise the paralyzed limbs for the patient. The doctor may also instruct the family in methods of massage to help stimulate circulation, until exercises can be started. Exercises for the patient should not be started until the doctor has prescribed them and instructed the family or patient on what to do and how to do it.

Although most patients can hear and understand what you say to them, some may not be able to speak at all after a stroke, or their speech may be slurred. Speech defects almost always improve after a time but while the trouble exists, the patient is understandably worried and upset. Reassure him that the condition will probably improve and arrange signals so that he can tell you what he wants; for example, to close one eye if he wants water, to open his mouth if he wants food. The doctor may suggest other possible signals.

If the patient can write, keep pencil and paper nearby. With a little ingenuity a bell can be arranged in such a way that even a severely disabled person can ring for attention. It is very reassuring to the patient to know he can ring for help at any time, especially if he has trouble speaking. Such a means of communication will make him feel less anxious when left alone. The doctor will tell you about any special speech therapy he may want for the patient.

When the stroke patient is well enough to get around, there are a number of simple and practical self-help devices that will enable him to do more things for himself. A bit of resourcefulness and imagination can solve many minor but troublesome problems. Some of these are illustrated in a booklet "Strokes: A Guide to the Family," copies of which are available from Idaho Heart Association.

The recovery may be a difficult period for the family as well as for the patient. It will require much patience and understanding. But the results—the degree of independence and self-confidence the patient achieves—are well worth the persistent efforts and patience.

With work season at hand, you need a good breakfast. We stock all your needs. Blewett's, Kendrick. adv

Home Cookin'...

Here is a recipe that is "making the rounds" in Kendrick; and it's so delicious, it should be shared. We received it from Mrs. Fred Bliflow, and it was given to her by Mrs. George Lyons. Mrs. Lyons said it was one her mother used to make.

CHEERRY CRINGLE

2 packages of yeast
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 cup lukewarm water
Let stand until flour mixture is ready.

4 1/4 cups sifted flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt

Out in 1/4 cup butter or margarine with pastry blender until pieces are the size of peas.

1 cup milk
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
Mix yeast mixture, milk and eggs thoroughly with fork. Cover and put in refrigerator for 3 hours or overnight.

Filling:
5 tablespoons cornstarch
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt

Juice from 2-16-oz cans of cherries
Cook with the cornstarch and sugar, then add cherries and a little red food coloring.

Divide dough into 4 parts. Roll in an oblong piece and put filling down the center. Cut each side into inch pieces and fold over cherries. Let set about 3/4 hour and bake at 450 degrees till brown or about 10 minutes.

Frost with powdered sugar frosting when taken from the oven.
Ready-made pie mix filling may be used if desired.

Put your dough on the pans you're going to bake it on before putting filling mix on. (It's not too easy to move, if you don't.)
