Idaho Big Game Animals On Winter Range Earlier Than Usual

This year's early, heavy snows at higher elevations have concentrated big game animals on their winter ranges earlier than usual this winter. This has made it possible for people to see these animals along the roads and highways as never before.
 However, it has caused some problems with big game animals in some areas. Road kills on deer have increased in many areas. These animals are forced down into lower areas along the highways by the heavy snow. They cross the road more frequently and because of winter driving conditions, they are more often hit by vehicles.
 Motorists should always be on the alert for deer and elk on the roads and use precaution. Try to avoid sudden swerves that cause loss of control of your vehicle. If an accident does occur by hitting a big game animal the local Fish and Game Department Conservation Officer should be notified as soon as possible, so the injured or dead animal can be disposed of.
 Another problem brought on by these early concentrations of big game is the damage by elk to stacked hay in some areas. One such complaint was received whereby several elk were eating on hay stacks in the Harvard area. The elk usually come into the stacks of baled hay at night and eat waste hay from the stacks. These complaints have been checked and the local conservation officer is working on helping to decrease the damage caused by these marauding elk.

Whenever game animals concentrate on winter ranges and are seen by the public sooner or later the subject of feeding these animals comes up. On first impression, this would seem to be a simple solution to starving game animals. However, artificial feeding of game animals is far more complicated than just taking out feed and giving it to the animals. The policy of the Idaho Fish and Game Department has long been that of controlling the number of animals by hunter harvest so that there will be enough natural feed on winter ranges to properly feed the winter herds of deer and elk. Only when there has not been an adequate harvest, or in cases of severe and unusual winter conditions, does the need of supplemental feeding come up.

Some of the deterrents to winter feeding of game animals that come up when feeding has been done are:
 1. Only a small portion of the total animals can be fed. Others are inaccessible to feeding.
 2. In areas where animals are fed, concentrations of animals do extensive and permanent damage to all available browse and food plants in the area which will cause future shortage of feed in years to come.
 3. Animals concentrated together contact and spread disease which, in some cases, can cause more damage to the herds than the danger of non-feeding.
 4. In most areas where winter feeding has been used as a means of maintaining big game herds, the productivity of the herd is much lower than wild herds, which are kept in balance with available natural food supply. And, 5. winter feeding of animals is very expensive and is not economically feasible on the present fees charged for game tags and licenses.

It may be well to relate the latest policy of the Idaho Fish and Game Commission on "Emergency Big Game Feeding in Idaho". The Idaho Fish and Game Commission recognizes that big game populations should be maintained under natural conditions and by natural available forage. Winter food is the major limiting factor which determines the basic size of the big game population and it must be maintained if these animals are to prosper and propagate. In order to maintain these winter ranges, big game numbers must be controlled through adequate harvest. We, therefore, do not sanction any widespread supplemental winter feeding programs.

We are aware that big game harvest and weather will vary from year to year throughout the State. In most years, snow depths and temperatures do not create adverse conditions for wintering animals. However, there are times when unusual weather patterns may create critical periods of stress when winter forage becomes limited, unavailable, or animals are forced into areas involving public safety. We recognize that we cannot manage game populations for these extreme weather situations — nor should we. When the Idaho Fish and Game Department, through investigation by field personnel, determines that a critical situation exists, the following policy will apply:

1. When feasible, animals will be directed, by baiting or other means, into adjacent areas where more natural food is available.
2. In areas where adjacent natural food are not available and suitable conditions exist elsewhere, animals will be trapped and moved to more favorable locations.
3. In the event that the aforementioned operations cannot be conducted due to site locations and/or other methods have proven unfeasible, the department will provide artificial feed to wintering game animals only during those periods of critical stress. The intention of this policy is to provide emergency feed for big game animals only during those periods of critical stress and not as a sustaining program which would carry larger game populations than the range can normally support.

Tree Thinning Contract Awarded

According to the Bureau of Land Management, James E. Cook, of Coeur d'Alene was the successful bidder for a tree thinning contract on BIM-administered land. In making the announcement, Richard Tindall, BIM District Manager, Coeur d'Alene, reported that Cook's bid of $2,372.50 is for the thinning, by chemical, of a fifty acre tract in the Peterson Creek area twenty miles south of St. Maries.
 Tindall said that the contractor will use Silvistar 510 to remove surplus trees and will select approximately 194 trees per acre to remain untreated on a 15-foot spacing.

"What Happened Here Twenty Years Ago — December, of 1921— Schupfer and Deobald have a window exhibit in their window that has attracted considerable attention. They built a circular tract about 8 feet in diameter, with heavy copper wire, then constructed a little motor car, carrying its own lighting equipment. The track is connected with a storage battery and when the "juice" is turned on the car is lighted up and runs in a very leisurely fashion around the track. It took the united efforts and a weeks spare time on the part of Otto and Herman Schupfer, Eddie Deobald and Elmer Bechtel to perfect this little motor system. At the regular monthly meeting of the Kendrick band last Monday evening, the following officers were elected: A. K. Carlson, president; N. E. Walker, vice-president; Leo C. Ranberg, library; Lester Crocker, secretary; Walter Thomas is the instructor.

Leland—Mr. and Mrs. Claude Craig and Mr. and Mrs. Vester Whittinger went to Lewiston on Sunday. A nine pound boy has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Vincent. Juliaetta—The Baker second hand store of Juliaetta was destroyed by fire about midnight Tuesday. The stock and building were practically a total loss. Only strenuous work by a volunteer fire company prevented the fire from spreading to other business houses.

A good woman inspires a man; a brilliant woman interests him; a beautiful woman fascinates him; and a sympathetic woman gets him.

Hopefully, Idaho can improve upon its 1970 record, but there will have to be a change in people's driving attitudes and our responsibilities as drivers.

1/2 cup molasses
1/2 cup water
1/4 cup butter
1/2 teaspoon salt

Cook 1 1/2 forms a brittle ball in cold water.
Pour over 3 qts. of popped corn and 1/2 cup salted peanuts.

PUDDING CUPCAKES

1 pk. chocolate chips (semi-sweet)
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup cocoa
1/2 cup nuts

CRANBERRY NUT LOAF

1. Grease and flour a 9x5-inch loaf pan. Bake oven to 350.
2. 2 cups sugar
3. 3 cups flour
3 1/2 cups baking powder
3 1/2 cups salt
1 cup eggs
1 cup milk

With a pastry blender, cut in 1/2 cup shortening, until mixture resembles cornmeal.
In another bowl, combine 2 eggs and 1/2 cup milk. Add tablespoon melted cranberry.
Add milk mixture to dry ingredients, stirring until just damp.
Fold in 1/2 cup chopped nuts, pecans and 1 cup whole fresh cranberries.
Pour into loaf pan.
Bake one hour or until toothpick comes out clean. Wrap and store loaf.

GIVE WILDLIFE A BRAKE

November, December and May are the months in which deer most often seem to come out second best to speeding automobiles. In recent years, many thousands of deer met their ends in that way in Idaho and the United States.

Although exact numbers are unobtainable, authorities say that many more are hit and die off the highway or are so repared by people involved in such mishaps. Part of the solution is found in the slogan, "Give Wildlife a Brake!", especially at night in mountainous areas posted with deer crossing signs.

Do Americans Want The U. S. Subsidizing Russian Farmers

Officials of the U. S. Department of Agriculture confirmed earlier this month they have approved sale of government-owned grain to the Soviet Union at below U. S. market prices. The U. S. government is even selling some of the grain at a financial loss. Critics charged that such a sale means U. S. taxpayers are subsidizing the Russian livestock industry. The American grain will be used by the Soviets as livestock feed. USDA officials said that the cut-rate prices were necessary in order to obtain the $14 million sale of corn, barley and oats to the Soviets. They said that if the U. S. government had not sold the grain at the cheap rates, their countries, possibly Canada would have. The sale, announced recently by the Nixon administration, includes 80 million bushels of corn, 30 million bushels of barley and 24 million bushels of oats. The grain actually is being sold to the Soviets by two large U. S. grain companies, Continental Grain Company of New York City and Cargill, Inc. of Minneapolis, Minnesota. USDA officials said that corn to be shipped to the Soviet Union has been or is being purchased by the open market in the U. S. at going prices. But according to the USDA, the barley and oats are being sold to Cargill and Continental by the federal government from stocks of the Commodities Department, a USDA agency. The barley and oats, they said, will be resold by Continental and Cargill to the Soviets. The USDA said it is selling 24 million bushels of oats at prices ranging from 40 cents a bushel to 43 cents a bushel. The USDA said recent market prices for oats in the U. S. have ranged from 65 cents a bushel in Kansas City. The official acknowledged that grain bought by the U. S. market at those points would cost even more delivered to coastal ports. The oats to be supplied by the USDA to Cargill and Continental will be delivered to several ports including Duluth, Minn., Baltimore Md. and Norfolk, Va. The federal government also is selling 30 million bushels of barley at prices ranging from 36 cents to 91 cents a bushel. Barley is currently selling in Minneapolis for $1.20 a bushel according to the USDA.

SPECIAL BIRD SEASON
Although the Idaho hunting season for chukar partridge, Huns and quail ends most places in Idaho December 31, as special season for these species runs through January 23, 1972, along the lower Salmon and Snake rivers (see upland bird regulations for details). Hunters should remember to get their new 1972 hunting licenses beginning January 1. The same thing goes for duck and goose hunters although the Federal duck stamp is good for the entire season. New fishing licenses will also be required beginning January 1. Goose hunting, already closed in eastern Idaho, runs through January 22 in the southwestern region and January 9 in northern Idaho counties. The duck season ends January 9 in some eastern and central counties, but is open through January 23 in the Columbia Basin Mallard counties of southeastern, southwestern and western counties. The counties and seasons are all listed in the migratory waterfowl hunting regulations.

Priest Lake Produces Record Mackinaw Trout

By Jim Harshard
 Idaho Fish & Game Dept.
 The largest trout ever caught in Idaho was a mackinaw, hauled in mid-November on Priest Lake by Lyle McKee of Spokane. It was a 57 1/2-pound monster, measuring 40 inches in length and 20 1/2 inches in girth. It smacked the old record, also a mackinaw trout from Priest Lake, which was taken by Russ Bierman of Spokane. This fish weighed 54 1/2 pounds and was caught in 1955. A 54-pound mackinaw was caught the same weekend as the now record fish by Fritz Gleason at Priest River, Idaho. His wife, Irene, hooked a 30-pounder recently in the end of the season. Priest Lake is one of three large bodies of water in the Idaho Panhandle region. It is located about 22 miles north of town of Priest River and has a surface area of about 37 square miles, with a shoreline of 63 miles. Its greatest depth is about 350 feet. The big tracks were introduced into Priest Lake in 1925, but did not really boom until kokanee was introduced in 1942. More recently, mackinaw have been introduced into the Payette Lakes and Deer Lake. These lake trout grow slowly their first few years. When they are large enough to fully utilize the excellent forage fish available however, they grow quite rapidly. For example, Mrs. A. C. Torrey DeAtley, 3227 Federal Way, Boise, caught a 20-pound mackinaw in Payette Lake the last week of July this year. It was 37 1/2 inches in length and 19 1/2 inches in girth after closing. During 1971 she took a 17-pound mack from Payette Lake.

 DICK AN EMARIE

The following paragraphs are taken from an article, "The Mighty Mack," written by Jerry Madet, an ardent fishing enthusiast, for the Idaho Wild Life Review several years ago.

"The mackinaw is known by many other names in other parts of the world but 'Lake Trout' is probably the most common. Others include grey trout, Great Lakes trout, Goggs, mackinac and lake trout. The mackinaw or mack is closely related to the Dolly Varden and brook trout. They form a group called 'salms' which separates them from the remainder of the trouts of a different generic group.

"The lake trout is principally a cold water fish frequenting relatively deep lakes or northern North America. The original range of this fish extended to the north from Alaska to Labrador and in the south from the Fraser and Columbia rivers to the northern New England states, including the Great Lakes drainage. The primary source of introduction formerly was in the Upper Great Lakes, where for many years the annual commercial production averaged nearly 15 million pounds. The species has spread widely in the lakes of the West.

"The mackinaw can be distinguished by its greyish color which may also have shades of olive, but has an absence of bright colored spots on the body. It also has a deeply forked tail and does not have the conspicuous light edging on the lower fins that are found on the Dolly Varden and brook trout.

"Priest Lake, home of the large mackinaw is one of north Idaho's three big lakes. It is located approximately 22 miles north of the town of Priest River and has a surface area of approximately 37 square miles and a maximum depth of 63 miles. Deepest known depth is slightly in excess of 350 feet.

"Mackinaw were first introduced into Priest Lake in 1925 but failed to become the lake fishery until 1952 when large fish were taken incidentally to Dolly Varden fishing. Since that time interest in the species has continued to climb each year.

"Successful angling takes place during two periods of the year—early spring and late fall. Great catches date back to the best mack fishing is during the first two weeks in December, just after spawning takes place. Normally, fall fishing produces better than does spring fishing. However, anglers must plan on cold and occasionally windy weather this time of year and dress and prepare accordingly.

"Anglers wishing to enjoy this sport should plan on fishing from April 15 (season opens) through June or from October through December 15 (season closes). During hot summer months, the mackinaw are scattered in deeper water seeking the cool temperatures that they prefer and are quite difficult to catch.

"Angling methods have become quite refined since the first 'whoppers' were caught in 1952. Today most of the mack angling occurs in the southern portion of the lake near the large islands. Most success usually comes from fishing the lake between Barize and Four Miles Islands—silly named 'Mackinaw Gardens' by one of north Idaho's enthusiastic sportswriters.

"Considerable fishing also occurs between Barize and Kasepelle Islands as well as around the various islands. Very little mack fishing is tried in other portions of the lake. However, much of this is no doubt due to the fact that anglers would rather fish in areas that are more scenic and still explore other areas.

"The majority of successful anglers usually troll slowly, using steel line and steel spinning plugs to fish on or near the bottom.

"Average size of 'macks' taken during the year is normally 20 pounds or larger. Each year several specimens reach 30 pound class and take.

"The large and rapid growth of mackinaw in Priest Lake is tied closely to introduction of kokanee into Priest Lake in 1942. Prior to introduction of the kokanee, mackinaw did not attain the great size that they have since.

"Mackinaw feed on plants, insects, second stage and immature caddisfly larvae and other aquatic insects. By the time they are several inches long they start feeding on small invertebrate fish found in the shoal areas of the lake and the carrier to produce a kokanee diet.

"Kokanee prefer the cooler water that the mack also utilize and due to their size, kokanee and kokanee tend to be the ideal forage fish for the mack.

"Macks are basically cold-water fish, frequenting relatively deep lakes. They require water temperature from 45 to 55 degrees F and seek the layer of water at a depth that contains this specific temperature range. Thus, water temperature more than anything, with the possible exception of food deeply dictating where mackinaw may be found at a given time of year.

"Lake trout are not known to 'school' but young and young appear to be solitary in habit.

"Until the 1960 season, mackinaw coincided with the general trout season in Priest Lake, May 1 to November 30. However, it was found that the mackinaw population was being under-harvested. The season was changed to add two weeks of water temperature from 45 to 55 degrees F and seek the layer of water at a depth that contains this specific temperature range. Thus, water temperature more than anything, with the possible exception of food deeply dictating where mackinaw may be found at a given time of year.
