High Waters Damage Woody Property Friday

Torrents of icy, melted snow from the higher elevations of Linville and Pine Grove bulged the tiny Little Potlatch Creek into a thundering giant Thursday night and Friday morning, sweeping down Cook's Canyon in its rush to join with the Potlatch River in Juliaetta.

The raging waters washed out a bridge up in the Pine Grove-Linville area, washed out portions of the road in Cook's Canyon and then washed out about 25 feet of embankment next to the Ervil Woody residence and carried off the lean-to of a chicken shed and one wall of a small feed shed. The Woody property is in the outskirts of Juliaetta.

About a dozen neighbors volunteered to help the Woodys at 5 a. m. Friday, moving sheep and chickens not washed away. About 65 to 70 laying hens were carried away by the creek's swift waters and the rest were crammed into sacks and moved from the danger area.

Damage to the Woody place was estimated at $1,500 in dead chickens, damage to the chicken house and a shed Friday night.

Garbage Not Collected

Due to the extremely high water in the Little Potlatch over the weekend the garbage could not be hauled out to the dump ground on Monday. Sections of the road were washed out and the bridge over the creek is in a very dangerous condition. The road crews have been working to repair the damage. They hope to have it passable so it can be used on Monday.

The Golden Globetrotters ran their win streak to 4-wins, 0-losses with a victory over the Red Devils. The score was 20-9 with Rex and Tony Snyder supplying the firepower by pumping in 8 and 6 points respectively as Jimmy Brocke and Daren Manfull controlled the boards and fed the fast break. Cold, More Snow Halts Flood Threat

Threat of more severe flooding diminished this week as temperatures tumbled again in the wake of an Arctic air mass which moved into the region Tuesday evening, dropping the mercury readings down to almost zero in Genesee, Southwick and the higher elevations. Kendrick and Juliaetta residents got out of bed Wednesday to find the temperatures hovering around the ten-above mark.

The colder weather, it really started to cool off Sunday, ended the threat of wide spread flooding in all area due to sudden run-off of the snow. Late last week a warming trend had developed and under warm sunny skies and temperatures in the fifties, the snow pak had virtually disappeared.

The melting snow turned the many small streams in the area into rampaging monsters, swollen beyond their banks.

Cow Creek, aided by ice blocks at several bridges near Genesee, flooded and inundated the lower portion of Genesee. The "flats" were covered with water for almost two days before the ice dams could be broken. There was no estimate of flood damage.

The Little Potlatch Creek rose and tore out a bridge in the Linville area. (See story in Juliaetta News).

The Potlatch River rose and flooded some sections but the dikes proved their value in Kendrick and other than seepage water in some basements, there was no damage.

Farm Program Sign-Up Dates Are Changed

The recently announced change in sign-up dates for 1972 set-aside farm programs allows time for consideration of the first available data on producers' plans for 1972, according to Latah Co. farm program officials.

"My understanding is that the U. S. Department of Agriculture wants to provide time for both farmers and farm program officials to study the special farmers planting intentions report which is due January 27," stated Roy Glenn, chairman of the Latah County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

"So the sign-up period for the feed grain and wheat set-aside programs will be February 3 through March 10 instead of January 17 through February 25 as was first announced," he said.

"Many farmers are asking if these new sign-up dates mean program changes are in the offering. I don't think anybody yet knows. The planting intentions report will be carefully studied and evaluated. I suppose there is a possibility that unforeseen factors will show up."

The special planting intentions report on January 27 will be the first indication on a national scale of what farmers are planning for 1972 in the light of 1971 crop marketings.

In 1971, under a corn blight threat which didn't materialize, farmers planted and harvested a record corn crop. Wheat and feed grain production wasn't far behind and for farmers who had to fall at harvest, prices were too low. On the other hand, market competition for cotton and soybeans has resulted in good prices for farmers.

The 1972 set-aside program provisions announced by USDA are designed to help American Agriculture cut back on the acreage planted to all crops and to encourage farmers to produce those crops which best fit their farming operations. The aid is to increase farm income through the markets as well as protect farm income by making crop loans and set aside acreage payments available to program participants.

Participation in set-aside programs is voluntary, and February 3 through March 10 is the period when farmers sign up at ASCS county offices for participation.

Men well governed should seek after no other liberty, for there can be no greater liberty than a good government. Sir Walter Raleigh

The Package Isn't Free

The retail food dollar is down to 91 cents before the package or can is opened, according to a study which shows that packaging materials take the first nine-cent bite out of every retail dollar spent on farm foods, says Joanne Anderson, Extension Home Economist for Latah County.

Out of the $101.6 billion that consumers paid in one year for farm foods, $8.8 billion went into the packaging materials, according to research by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service. The materials are second only to labor in their share of the marketing bill.

Paper is the most popular of the packaging materials, and paper products accounted for more than forty percent of the packaging bill. The greater part of paper's share went into sanitary food containers, solid fiber and corrugated boxes and folding paper boxes.

Metal was second in popularity, with such things as cans, aerosols, metal foils, and pails accounting for nearly a quarter of the cost of packaging materials.

Glass and plastic containers cost less than a tenth of the total. The trend in packaging is toward more ready-to-serve foods.

Federal Aid Funds Up

Idaho's share of federal aid funds to the several states for fish and wildlife restoration plans next fiscal year is $851,572.76. Of this, $233,366.69 will be allocated for fish restoration work in the state under the Dingell-Johnson Act of 1950, and $618,206.07 will be allocated under the Pittman-Robertson Act of 1937 for wildlife restoration programs. Both PR and DJ programs are administered by the Idaho Fish

Wintering Conditions

Idaho's January thaw brought relief to many critical big game winter ranges around the state, but conditions remained critical in some eastern and northern ranges.

The Idaho Panhandle Region reported above freezing daytime temperatures, greening south and west facing slopes and game animals moving freely from valley floors to 7,000-8,000 feet.

In the Clearwater Region, the reservoir ice cover behind Dworshak Dam between Dent Bridge and Big Island still is a death trap for deer. Predation and drowning are the 2 big causes of deer mortality. Deer are losing winter habitat as the waters now being impounded by Dworshak Dam flood over 25 miles of it.

Reports indicate no problems in the McCall and Western regions or Magic Valley or Salmon. Eastern Idaho has abnormally high snow depths and deer are concentrating along roadway and railroad tracks. About two dozen deer have been killed by trains from Lava Hot Springs to Bancroft.

Despite snow melting chinook winds in the Upper Snake Region, where conditions generally were improved for wintering game, two critical areas remain—Victor Angle near Driggs (unit 62) and Iron Triangle north of Ashton. Extremely deep snow and not much available forage on poor range in limited areas made problems.

Trapping and moving deer to desert areas where forage is more abundant is underway again this winter on Leslie Buttes near Leslie. An emergency feeding program is maintained for a small herd of antelope near Roberts.

SPRING RUN CHINOOK like this were killed by the thousands last year by nitrogen bubble disease in the lower Snake and Columbia river system. Caused by a nitrogen supersaturation condition, the disease is evidenced by external bilters around head, mouth and gills (see cut) which become fungus infested. Losses of salmon from this cause may seriously affect the number of fish needed for spawning in Idaho waters, but the U. S. Corp of Engineers has funding to install new devices, called "slotted bulkheads" and are being installed in the three Snake River dams. Tests indicate that the slotted bulkheads may significantly reduce nitrogen supersaturation and may minimize fish losses this year.

One day last week, a 30-year-old mill worker came storming into the Social Security Office with blood in his eye. It seems he had just discovered that $37 per month was being withheld from his paycheck for something called FICA taxes" (Federal Insurance Contribution Act).

In talking the situation over with his fellow workers, he learned that so long as he worked he would have to pay the tax. When he retired he could then receive a retirement benefit. His friends weren't sure how much he would get, and he noticed that the older workers seemed more in favor of the program than the younger ones.

He started doing some figuring. He reasoned that if he worked 35 years and paid $400 in Social Security taxes each year he would have $14,000 invested in the program.

"I want out," he told me, "I'll never get my money back. I'm being taken for a ride."

It took a while to calm him down. Eventually, however, I was able to learn that he was married, had two children under six and had worked at the mill for five years. His salary was about $8,000 per year.

I asked him if he knew what Social Security was worth in the event of his death or if he became disabled. He said he wasn't sure—and finally admitted he really knew nothing about the program except what he was having to pay for it.

I informed him that in the event of his death his family would receive about $400 per month for about 15 years—a life insurance policy with a face value of over $65,000. I also showed him that if he became disabled he and his family would receive nearly $6,000 per year so long as he was unable to work.

He was already aware of retirement benefits but was surprised to learn that he and his wife could expect about $300 per month when he retired. It would take them only four years to recover their investment. By that time I got around to talking about age 65 health insurance under Medicare, it was like frosting on the cake.

My man was convinced. Social Security wasn't such a bad deal after all. He, like most people covered by the program, simply had not realized the scope of the insurance protection he was paying for.

When he left the office, he took with him the knowledge that his future and that of his family was a lot more secure than he had realized—regardless of what might happen in all. That's what Social Security is all about.

Family life is too intimate to be preserved by the spirit of justice. It can only be sustained by a spirit of love which goes beyond justice.—Reinhold Niebuhr.

The first grade, and Arwin Nordby froze his cheeks Wednesday morning. Miss Bertha Loring was given a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. John Gesechen Thursday afternoon, Dec. 29.

Farm Bureau News

The President of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation, W. Dale Rockwood of Iona, said the Farm Bureau is supporting Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus, the Idaho Wheat Commission and the Idaho Wheat Growers in their efforts to resolve the dock workers strike.

Rockwood said that he had sent telegram to each member of the Idaho Congressional delegation as well as to President Nixon encouraging them to solve what he called this serious problem to Idaho agriculture.

The Idaho Farm Bureau official went on to say that Idaho farmers and ranch ers cannot afford to have the dock workers strike continue for a host of reasons. One of the most important being a loss in commodity exports. He said 1971 set a record in U. S. agricultural exports and "we cannot afford to see a decline in 1972."

Rockwood was also quoted as saying that one acre of production out of four was exported in 1971. "Exports of agricultural commodities are important in solving our surplus problem. The exportation of agricultural commodities also plays a real part in the balance of payments situation in America."

PETER DALLASEGO, 96, FORMER GENESEE RESIDENT, PASSES JANUARY 17

Peter P. Dallasego, 96, former Genesee resident, died Monday, January 17 at Tacoma. He was a former fruit rancher on the Snake River west of Lewiston.

He was born August 23, 1875, in Tyrol, Austria, and traveled to Venezuela at the age of 16 to satisfy his yen for adventure. From there he went to the Michigan woods to work as a cook in a logging camp, and later took his culinary abilities to the grain fields in the Spokane area.

It was about the turn of the century that Dallasego bought a partnership in the fruit ranch near Lewiston.

He married Agatha Fogarty at Lewiston in 1906, and they moved to a farm near Genesee. She died in 1930, but Dallasego remained at the farm until 1960, when he moved to Enumclaw, Wash., to be near his daughter, Mrs. Melvin (Arminta) Roen. He had been a nursing home patient since 1968.

Funeral service was conducted Friday at 2 p. m. at Brower-Wann Memorial Chapel with the Rev. Arthur D. DeLong of the First Christian Church officiating.

Burial was at Normal Hill cemetery.

GROUNDHOG DAY
 I shall remember loog—the way we took
 The leafless lindens and the nipping air.
 The bunch-grass trail above the sheltered nook;
 That led us onward to the Groundhog's lair.

I shall remember how his shadow fell
 Upon that wintry landscape wild and gray;
 And all the joy that we came back to tell;
 Oh so long ago on GROUNDHOG DAY.
 —Bert Gamble

An invitation to dinner had been sent to the town's new doctor. In reply, the hostess received an absolutely illegible letter.

"I have to know if he accepts or not," she said.

"Why don't you take it to the druggist her husband suggested. They can always read doctor's notes, no matter how badly they are written."

His wife went to the drug store and handed her druggist the slip of paper. He looked at it, went into the dispensary and returned a few minutes later with a bottle of pills.

"Here you are ma'am," he said. "That will be $2.75."

A young fellow studying for the ministry went fishing and carried two girls who attended the college along. A stranger who was fishing nearby noticed they had not caught any fish after several hours.

"Aren't catching many are you," the stranger asked.

"I am a fisher of men," replied the young man with dignity.

"Well, you seem to have the right bait with you," the stranger replied.

Ice Fishing Season Draws Many Anglers

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Dept.

This is the time of year when many Idaho fishermen become preoccupied with spuds and other gadgetry such as augers, axes, bars and improvised tools that can be used to chop holes through ice as much as one and one-half feet thick or more. It's work, too, because the ice must be strong enough to provide safety for a crowd of people, automobiles, sometimes airplanes, and often a small village of fishing shanties, which move periodically across level white planes of the frozen lakes and reservoirs in search of perch, crappies, bluegills, and whitefish.

Fishing through holes in ice probably is older than mankind. Aesop's fables contend that a bear lost his tail trying it over 2,500 years ago. Possibly the ancient Greek writer figured only the great bear that walked like a man would have the heartyhood to fish through ice. Any way, the bear waited too long between bites. His nethermost appendage was congealed in the ice. When the inevitable heave came to bring out the fish, Ere'r Bear lost his tail—or most of it.

Idahoans and other twentieth century anglers have added certain refinements to the sport—among which are one to four pound test leader and smaller hooks, size 12 to 16, rather than Ere'r Bear's tail dangling down through the ice.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department encourages wintertime fishing in waters that are open as many places are blessed with an abundance of crappie, bluegills, perch and whitefish which are not being harvested sufficiently to promote good growth. These species particularly benefit from heavy winter fishing. Crappies and bluegills congregate in large schools. The problem is finding them and it helps to have some idea about the habits of these species and the knowledge of the waters to be fished. One big advantage of ice fishing is that boats are not needed. Automobiles often are used for transportation and even snowmobiles, but walking is recommended on the frozen lakes—for safety's sake.

Under ice cover, most fish are caught on or near the bottom. Because they must see what appears edible, this depth cannot be more than natural light will penetrate through the ice and water. For the beginner who does not know either the habits of the fish or the underwater contours of the lake, the best bet is to go with somebody who does have the "knowhow" or to follow the crowd and chop holes in the ice when his fellow anglers do. Another good method of finding fish schools, especially when the frozen plane is deserted by other less hardy or more prudent anglers, is to search for ice holes that were cut previously. An accumulation of cigarette butts, candy wrappers and bloody spots are good clues. Open up these old holes and try it.

Most fishermen already carry the tackle needed for a trip to an ice-covered lake or reservoir. Equipment can be as diverse as that used during the open water season, except that poles should be fairly short, usually no longer than a bait casting rod. Many ice fishermen use real shorties of 15 to 24 inches in length or less. These short rods are especially useful inside the fish house or shanty where elbow room is limited. Grub-type bait generally is used in shallow water in such abbreviated outfits. Some type of modified tip up, stripped down to a short stick with nail or ice pick blade in one end, serves to hold the rod upright. Incidentally, fishing through an opening broken or cut through ice is the only type of fishing in which two or more poles per person may be used.

One of the more popular baits is the white grub, or maggot. Some anglers use stoneflies, others swear by small, pale salmon eggs or light colored artificial flies. The rigging

Committees For Forty-First Legislature

State Senator John Mix, and Representatives Harold Snow and George Brocke, Jr., all from District 5, reports that they will be serving on the same committees as those assigned to them in the first session of the Forty-first Legislature.

Senator Mix, who is Minority Assistant Floor Leader, is a member of State Affairs and Transportation committees.

Representative Snow is House Assistant Majority Floor Leader, and is vice-chairman of the State Affairs Committee. He also serves on Ways and Means. Mr. Brocke's assignments are Agricultural, Education, and Resources and Conservation.

The Legislators said they would be glad to hear from their constituents at any time on matters in which they have an interest. They may be reached by addressing mail to them at the Senate or House of Representatives. If matters are urgent Senator Mix may be called at Boise, 384-2088; Representative Snow at 384-3011; and Mr. Brocke at 384-3013.

carries enough weight to drift the hook near the bottom.

Of course, many ardent anglers scorn the creature comfort of fishing houses, taking to the streams and other open water. This makes it an even colder recreation, but special whitefish bag limits of 50 fish per day make it worthwhile.

Whitefish are native to waters in nearly every part of the state and the best fishing for them is during the winter months. They often are a foot or more in length weighing up to three or four pounds. Average weight is about a pound. Properly handled, a smoked whitefish is a real delicacy. The yellow perch, an introduced species in Idaho, but now widely distributed and well known to most anglers is rated as one of the best of pan fishes because of its firm, white meat and excellent flavor. Perch rarely exceed a length of 12 inches and a weight of more than a pound. It is a popular winter fish in American Falls, Lake Chatcolet and Lake Pend Oreille. There is no bag limit on perch, crappie or bluegill.

Idaho law and fishing regulations permit ice fishing in all waters that are open for fishing. Bag limits must be observed. Cisco, or peaknose, can be taken by Idaho and Utah dip netters under special reciprocal regulations from January 1 to February 15 and in such quantities that there is a ready-made story and small industry on the spawning grounds on the east side of Bear Lake, the huge body of water that straddles the Idaho-Utah state line.

Friendship is a strong and habitual inclination in two persons to promote the good and happiness of one another.—Eustace Budgell.

Selway River Road Closed Temporarily

The Selway River road has been temporarily closed to motorized traffic according to Forest Supervisor Robert O. Rehfeld. The closure is necessary to prevent harassment of wildlife. Elk and deer had been forced into the river bottom because of deep snow at higher elevations. Effective immediately, the road will be closed from the O'Hara bridge upriver to Race Creek. The public is asked to cooperate.

Big game animals are experiencing one of the toughest winters in years and motorized intrusion would only complicate an already critical situation. Undue harassment during stress conditions tax the body reserves of wintering big game, and can affect next spring's production of young.

There are several roads that are ideal for snowmobile use. They are the Swiftwater road, Coolwater road and Hamby road. All of these roads are snow covered to the river and provide for excellent snowmobiling trips.

Caution should be observed on the Coolwater road as snow cornices formed and are hard to recognize. Information concerning road closures or snowmobile use can be obtained from the Nez Perce Forest Supervisor's Office at Grangeville, the Fonn Ranger Station or the Idaho Fish and Game office at Lewis-ton.

Steelhead Regulations

Early spring fishing for steelhead generally starts about the first week end in March, but spring like weather, sometimes comes sooner to warm the water and give fishermen the urge to try it.

Records of the Idaho Fish and Game Department show an accumulated total of 63,183 steelhead were counted over Ice Harbor Dam by October 31, 1971, the cutoff date at the counting facility in the fall.

Steelhead are defined as rainbow trout which are taken in the Snake River drainage below Hells Canyon Dam, the Salmon River drainage and the Clearwater River drainage (excluding lakes), and which exceed 20 inches in fork length.

Daily bag and possession limit is two steelhead, with no more than two steelhead in any seven consecutive day period. It is unlawful for any person to take more than ten steelhead in any calendar year.

Rainbow trout under 20 inches in fork length taken from steelhead waters shall be classified as trout.

People who fish for steelhead must have in their possession a steelhead trout permit for which there is a fee of $1.00. Anglers are required to list steelhead catches on the permits by date. In addition, they are required to record the river section from which each fish is caught. Section numbers are shown on maps issued with each permit.

Cisco Dipnet Season

Bonneville cisco, a small silvery fish sometimes called "peak-nose," move into the shallows of the eastern shoreline of Bear Lake to spawn about January 10 and the run continues for 10 days or two weeks, sometimes longer.

Under a reciprocal arrangement, fishermen are required to have either an Idaho or Utah fishing license for 1972. Cisco may be taken with dipnets during a special season running from January 1-February 15. Dipnets may not have an opening that is greater than 18 inches in any dimension.

Special bag limit on cisco for non license holders under 14 years of age is 25 fish per day. Licensed fishermen may take 60 cisco a day. Waters on the mouth of St. Charles Creek from the lower county bridge to a distance of 600 feet into the lake have the same season as the streams—closed until the general season opens in the spring.

will join 4-H delegates from 23 other states selected for the trip award by the Cooperative Extension Service. Their meeting is at the largest commodity market in the world—the Chicago Board of Trade.

Miss Fleener's grain study included observing the operations of a grain exporting company and studying careers in grain industries how government laws affect grain, food wholesaling and retailing and the role of prices in marketing.

Filing Due By Jan. 31 On Wool Sales

Producers who file applications and 1971 marketing reports on wool and unshorn lambs by January 31 at the Latah County ASCS office will receive payments early in April under the National Wool Act. So reports Melvin Procunier, member of the Latah Co. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

Applications should cover only wool and unshorn lambs sold during 1971 marketing year which ended December 31. Marketings after that date will be eligible for payments to be made in 1973.

"The County ACS Office will provide information on the items that should be included with producers' applications, and will give assistance as needed," Procunier said. Wool producers are eligible to receive payments regardless of the quality sold in 1971. "As with all ASCS programs, the Wool Program is administered without regard to race, color, creed, sex, religion or National origin of participants," he said.

The payment rate for 1971 marketing will be announced early in April following announcement of the National average price received and is expected to be well above last year's rate, which was 102.8 percent. $3500 was earned by 34 Latah Co. Wool growers in 1970.

Rep. Geo. F. Brocke, Jr., Reports From Legislature

Tax Raising Issues Under Consideration

The Revenue and Tax Committee was told last week that the state can get $10.6 million if the double deduction were eliminated from the state income tax. This would mean new revenue, and would not effect people earning less than $5,000 per year according to the acting budget director, D. E. Chilberg. He said 33 percent of the households come under this bracket.

Oregon voters raised the cigarette tax in that state four cents a package, bringing their tax to 9 cents. Idaho has 7 cents now and the Governor suggested that Idaho cigarette tax be raised to 9 cents to make it in line with Oregon. Previously many Idaho border town citizens would pick up cigarettes by the case in Oregon.

A state general fund budget which will require more taxes will probably be out by the second week in February according to members of the Joint Senate Finance-House Appropriations committee. The total budget the next biennium would probably be somewhere between the present $136 million and the Governor's recommendation of $149 million.

Members of the House Transportation and Defense Committee favor increasing both driver's license and student fees to finance driver training in the schools, and plan to draft a bill which would raise the minimum age for drivers to 15 years. A sub-committee is working on this bill. The house education committee is also studying the driver training program.

Most legislators generally favor increasing the gasoline tax. Some want 1 cent and others two cents, the governor's recommendation.

A proposed constitutional amendment allowing tax-paid bussing of parochial students has been introduced by the House Education Committee. Presently the constitution does not allow use of public monies for private schools. This is to offset probable closing of more catholic schools in Idaho with students being enrolled in public schools where the cost would be much greater. The law passed by the legislature previously was declared unconstitutional.

The Fish and Game Department is asking for $7.5 million to finance its operations this coming year. Present budget is $7.2 million with the funds coming primarily from hunting and fishing licenses and federal grants. No money comes from the general fund. The Department will have an estimated carryover next June 30 of about $1.5 million.

The estimated carryover on June 30, 1973 is expected to be about $400,000.

The fast growing snowmobile sport is generating many letters to the legislators asking for some control of the sport. This matter was discussed at a meeting between the House Resources and Conservation Committee and the Dept. of Fish and Game. One has to do with prohibiting firearms on snowmobiles and to allow Fish and Game Dept. to prohibit snowmobiling in big game wintering areas.
