Moscow Office Reports Gives Job Picture

Job opportunities and job finding activities in the Moscow area remain fairly stable according to Frank J. Hartstein, manager of the Moscow office of the Idaho Department of Employment.

Hartstein reported that his office had placed 12 Latah county workers on jobs during the week compared with 12 given job finding help during the previous week. A year ago this week, only 7 jobs were found locally. A few farm jobs opened at the end of the week. A year ago there were only 15 jobs open. Hartstein said his office still needed farm tractor operators, some secretarial workers, telephone installation workers, an auto mechanic, cooks, waitresses, and domestic workers.

The annual "spring break-up" began during the end of last week and woods workers began filing claims for benefits this week, another part of Hartstein's report indicated. He said that 94 persons filed new claims for benefits during the week, compared with only 24 filed workers seeking jobs for the first time last week. A year ago 62 workers filed new claims. Nearly all of the new claims were filed by workers from the area's lumber producing industry. Additional workers are expected to file new claims next week, as equipment was being moved and some clean up work was accompanied during the current week. The total number of persons now seeking unemployment insurance in the area is 496, the highest for many weeks. A year ago the total was only 381. However, last year's spring break-up was just a few days later, and a total of 77 workers filed new claims during the week ending March 27, 1971. It is now anticipated that fewer than that number will file next week and that the total number of unemployed will not rise too much higher than the 500 figure. Weather conditions will dictate the duration of the unemployment of the loggers and dry weather for a few days will help immeasurably.

Genesee—Because of some recent near accidents and more than just a few complaints, Police Commissioner Walter Moden this week urged parents to make certain that their children know, understand and obey bicycle safety rules and regulations. If bicycles are used at night, they must be equipped with adequate lights and reflectors, front and rear. And, Moden added, city ordinances prohibit riding of bicycles on the sidewalks at any time.

GUN SAFETY TRAINING NEARS COMPLETION

Gun safety training, given by the Idaho Fish and Game Department in cooperation with the public schools and other interested parties, nears completion in the Clearwater Region. This instruction, given during school hours to all boys and girls in school classrooms, is intended to reach all students near the 12-year age level. It is at this age that a person may first legally purchase a hunting license or carry a firearm in the fields of Idaho.

The gun safety instruction includes a color slide, lecture, movies, actual gun handling and where facilities are available actual firing on a range by those students who wish to participate. These classes are given statewide and are on a voluntary basis. Many surrounding states require gun safety training for all youths wishing to purchase a hunting license for the first time. In these states, only those youngsters wishing to purchase a license receive this training. In Idaho, all youngsters, both boys and girls, receive the training.

The first schools in the Clearwater Region to receive the instruction were at Pierce and Weippe on January 19 and 21. District Conservation Officer Joe Bross of Weippe gave the training and was assisted by Robert Mason of Pierce.

Since then, Sacajawea and Jenifer junior high school of Lewiston, and schools at Deary, Potlatch, Genesee Troy and Kendrick have received the training. The schools at Kootkia, Kamiah, Orofino, Grangeville Cavendish and Elk City received the gun safety training the last of February and early March. At this time the Moscow junior high is finishing up their classes and schools at Nezperce, Cottonwood, Craigmont and Culesac are scheduled for March 21 to 24.

Typical of the gun safety classes given this year were those at Lewiston. There were 270 7th grade students at Sacajawea junior high and 300 7th grade students at Jenifer junior high. The classroom instruction was given by Conservation Officers Dwight Kilgore of the Lewiston district and Jerry Gifford of the Powell district and assisted by Dee Hibbert, Regional Conservation Educator at Lewiston.

The classroom instruction included a color slide presentation on statistics of gun accidents, parts of guns, techniques of safe gun handling and hunter's responsibilities.

Those students who wished to go on the range firing were given cards to take home for parental approval. Range firing was held on March 11 at the Lewiston Police Rifle Range. Instructing at the range were Dwight Kilgore, Walter Berry and Kent Ball of the Idaho Fish and Game Department and Jim Felton, members of the Lewis and Clark Wildlife Club.

CEDA NEWS

Establishment of an urban planner position to serve in the Clearwater Economic Development District was announced by Leonard Williams, Lewiston city councilman and CEDA representative following the District's monthly board meeting on Thursday night. Williams said a grant of $16,000 from Housing and Urban Development funds to be matched by $4,000 shared equally by Moscow and Lewiston would make the position possible. In Lewiston the positions will be closely coordinated with the Clearwater Valley Regional Planning efforts. Chuck Bond, Moscow city councilman said, "the need for unified and coordinated planning which considers both Moscow and Lewiston has been recognized by CEDA for some time. This grant will provide the funds for that purpose."

WILD BABES REQUIRE "HANDS OFF" POLICY

The annual admonition "Let them alone" went out today from the Idaho Fish and Game Department with respect to wildlife young-of-the-year now being "found" in their hiding places. It's unlawful to molest them or take them as pets.

Such "adoption" and removal from their natural habitat and mothers care almost always leads to unnecessary death of wild babes of the woods. To molest them is a misdemeanor punishable by fine and jail sentence.

The young of any species require expert feeding and care. They usually wont survive away from their mothers. Some animals become extremely dangerous to humans as they mature.

To kidnap some animals—bear cubs for example is dangerous because the sow generally is nearby. Cubs weigh only a few ounces at birth in January but with the arrival of spring and the end of hibernation they weigh three or four pounds and are cute and cuddly. They emerge from the den with their mothers, active and hungry.

Raccoons fight viciously in self-defense or to protect their young. A female badger fights courageously for her youngsters. She is a good match for the average dog. The skunk possesses a pair of scent glands and uses them as needed in the direction of the enemy.

Although Idaho deer and elk fawn and calves usually are born in late May or June, it's not too early for the annual public reminder to let them alone. Twins are common with both whitetails and mule deer.

CLOUDY VARNISHED SURFACE

If your varnished furniture has a dull, cloudy look you may be able to restore it with linseed oil and gum turpentine, advises University of Idaho home furnishings specialist Willma Shryack.

The cloudiness caused by poor quality varnish cannot be removed without first removing the varnish. But, if the finish has been dulled by smoke, dust, and grease—as may happen in any household—then linseed oil and gum turpentine should revive it successfully.

First, clean the varnished surface, one section at a time, with one teaspoon gum turpentine and three teaspoons boiled linseed oil in 1 cup of hot water. Caution: Do not place this solution directly on heat. To keep it warm while you work, place the container in a pan of hot water. Use a soft cloth or a very fine steel wool to apply the solution. Then, wipe with a clean cloth wrung out of warm water, and follow by rubbing with a dry cloth.

To revive the cleaned surface, stroke it with a 3-0 steel wool pad, dipped in equal parts of raw linseed oil and gum turpentine. Apply very lightly and carefully, especially on the edges, to prevent the steel wool from cutting. Wipe off all excess solution with a dry cloth and the cloudiness should be gone.

The type of materials you use is important. Make sure you have boiled linseed oil for cleaning and raw linseed oil for the final rub-down. For both steps, be sure you have gum turpentine. Distilled turpentine should never be used for this job.

YOUR GAME DEPARTMENT

By Jim Humbird
 Idaho Fish and Game Department
 Wintering Game Report

It may be springtime in the valleys but wintertime conditions still prevail on some big game ranges where supplemental feeding continues because natural browse is in short supply. These winter ranges are found in eastern Idaho and Upper Snake region. Elsewhere in the state conditions range from improved to very good. For example, one of the trouble spots this winter has been on the North Fork of the Clearwater River upstream from Dworshak Dam. Ice now is breaking up on the fast-filling pool and the coyote-deer predation problem is about over. Temperatures have moderated and westfacing slopes are baring.

Snake River Islands

Approximately 85 islands in the Snake River from Walters Ferry downstream to Brownlee Reservoir will remain closed from February 1 through May 15, the Snake River sector of the Deer Flat National Wildlife Refuge. The reason for the island closure is to prevent geese from being disturbed or even harassed during the nesting season. Geese are susceptible to human activity including noise and often abandons nests when disturbed.

Landlocked Salmon Regulations
 One exception to the statewide bag and/or possession limit of 25 fish of any species or in the aggregate of kokanee (blueback redfish or silver) and coho (landlocked silver salmon) is on the South Fork of the Boise River and tributaries above Anderson Ranch Reservoir north of Mountain Home, where daily bag and/or possession limit is five kokanee. From September 1 to October 31 in these waters it shall be unlawful to fish for kokanee with more than one single hook on the line, which must be 5/16 of an inch or smaller from point to shank. It is also illegal in this drainage of the South Fork of the Boise to kill or retain in possession any kokanee which has been hooked other than in the head. Kokanee make spawning runs from Anderson Ranch Reservoir up the South Fork of the Boise to Trinity Creek and other tributaries between September 1 and October 31 a time when these fish congregate and become extremely vulnerable to snagging hooks.

Kokanee during the spawning run rapidly change physiologically, with most oils and fats absorbed. The flesh becomes unpalatable to the human taste. Reducing the daily bag limit from 25 to 5 kokanee increases the escapement of these fish to the spawning beds.

So, the social security package is a rather full one, retirement benefits, disability benefits, survivor's benefits and Medicare benefits.

If your luck holds out it may be that the retirement benefit is the only one you will ever need. However, it's good to know that the whole package is always there—just in case

The telephone repairman was working in an ultra-modern business building that had no windows. When he finished, he tried to find a way out of the edifice but without windows to guide him he felt trapped. He finally came to an office where a woman was typing.

"How do I get outside?" he asked. Without looking up from her typewriter, she replied, "Dial 9."

A small boy was lost at the race track. He was crying loudly when a policeman found him and asked him what was the matter.

"Oh," said the policeman, "who were you with?"

"My father," said the lost child.

"And what's your father like?" the officer asked.

"Beer and women," sobbed Willie.

TRANSITION

Realizing my capacity for service to the community will soon begin to diminish, I have been looking for a young man to take my place.

The Genesee community has been good to me and I am unwilling to let The Electric Shop fade away as so many local businesses have.

Finding a capable young man, willing to take on the responsibilities of a business such as ours has not been easy—But Jade Harris seems a likely prospect.

He has leased the business for one year, with the intention of buying — should everyone concerned be satisfied. Ralph, Lucile, Viola, Don and I will continue with the business for the present.

I hope you will all give Jade the support you have given me for the past 34 years. I am sure that he will do his best to merit your confidence and trust.

GLYCERINE HAS MANY USES

If you haven't a handy bottle of glycerine on your shelf, you might consider buying one.

Glycerine has long been used in toothpastes and hand lotions because it holds moisture in products that would otherwise dry out. Food processors use glycerine in confections, gelatins, and frozen desserts. Druggists have it for internal and external use, reports Mrs. Ruth Spidahl, extension home economics leader at the University of Idaho.

As a handy household helper, rotary egg beaters, meat choppers and other cogs that require oiling could be lubricated with a few drops of glycerine instead of machine oil. If you use oil, there is always a danger of it contaminating the food, but glycerine is harmless and has no unpleasant flavor, Mrs. Spidahl says. She offers two more tips.

After cleaning a bathroom mirror, rub it with glycerine so the mirror won't steam from the hot water of your shower.

MARKED MOOSE SIGHTINGS ESSENTIAL TO MANAGEMENT

By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish & Game Department

It's a real happening when somebody sees a hump-backed, long-legged behemoth with a hooked nose and scanty tail. It's even more noteworthy when wearing colored ear patches and a neck band. Even so, most people recognize this animal as a lordly moose, largest member of the deer family.

All marked moose sightings should be reported to the Idaho Fish and Game Department in Boise or regional offices located at Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Salmon, Jerome, Garden City, McCall, Lewiston, and Coeur d'Alene, or to the district conservation officer. This information should include the color of ear patches, color of neck bands, numbers on the bands (if observed) where the moose was sighted (or bagged by hunter) and the date. The metal tags, ear patches and neck bands may be kept as mementos of the chase. A $5.00 reward will be paid for the return of radio transmitters worn by the animals.

Moose are found in many forested areas of northern, central and south eastern Idaho. Densities generally are low. Fremont county probably has the largest concentration in the state, according to Brent W. Ritchie, St. Anthony, game research biologist for the department. He estimates the winter moose population on a 1,200 square mile area at 500 to 600 animals, or about 0.5 moose per square mile.

The coming of new drugs (Succinylcholine chloride) took moose out of the unmanageable animal class and a tagging program soon followed. Succinylcholine or Anectine are trade names of the drug used to immobilize the big body muscled moose long enough for workers to mark them. It is delivered with standard dart gun equipment. All darts are barbed with the top of the barb one-fourth inch from the basal end of the one and a half inch needle. The darts easily catch and hold firmly in the animals hide.

This technique was borrowed from the domestic livestock industry which had found it reliable for use during branding round-ups without roping and tying horses and cattle. The effect of the drug, a muscle relaxant, wears off in a half hour or so and the animal jumps up and runs off.

Moose tagging made its debut in the Sand Dunes area of Fremont County early in 1961. Wes Shaw, Boise was the project leader, assisted by A. E. Nelson, former regional biologist, conservation officers and a licensed veterinarian. This was the start of a yearly program to learn about moose movements, migrations, age, amount of calving and other factors needed for good management.

Shaw says such data helps maintain game populations at desired levels. During the years 1961, 1962, 1964 and 1966, 92 moose were marked in the Junipers, Henry Lake, Kilegore and Modoc Creek areas. Moose, unlike deer and elk, tend to be solitary animals but frequently concentrate after migrating to winter range where the feed will be better and winter survival is easier. Tagging is done while the animals are in the winter areas. The animals move out later, following the new grass, weeds and greening twigs back up the hills into high country. By hunting season they are many miles, sometimes over a hundred, from the winter areas.

Brent Ritchie started his ecological study of moose (Alces Americana shirasi) in southeastern Idaho in 1969, continued it during 1970-71, and again this winter. His study area is about 30 to 40 miles in Fremont county. It is bordered on the north by the state of Montana and on the east by Yellowstone National Park. His program objectives are to determine population status and habits, condition of the habitat, and controlling factors so that moose management can be improved.

Shaw and his fellow workers hovered over moose in a helicopter and discharged the muscle relaxant drug into moose by means of a hypodermic needle dart fired from a Capture Gun. After the range was no more than 35 feet. The target is a large muscle high on the hind quarter. Anyone who has ever had a "shot" at a doctor's office knows the spot. It takes an average of about ten minutes for a moose to go down after the dart hits. These big animals are alert but docile for about one-half hour. But some recover in no more than five minutes. Workers too, must be alert for a moose that jumps up sooner than expected, often belligerently.

Ritchie's crew of four to six men use snowmobiles most effectively in capturing moose. This method puts less stress on the moose and is less costly and more convenient. Wintering areas are cruised until a moose is less costly and more convenient. Wintering areas are cruised until a moose is less costly and more convenient. Wintering areas are cruised until a moose is less costly and more convenient.

Idaho Fish & Game Department Senior Resident Permits
Two changes in the Idaho senior resident license permits were made by the 1971 state legislature, the Fish and Game Department reminded sportsmen today. One of them allows Idaho residents of ten years or more who are between the ages of 65 and 70 to buy combination hunting-fishing licenses for $1 instead of the usual $6. Some 225 of the $1 senior resident licenses have already been sold since January 1 at the Boise office of the Fish and Game Department. Sales from more than 600 license vendors statewide are not available.

The second change allows 70-year-old residents of ten years or more to get a five-year courtesy hunting-fishing combination permit free. This essentially is the same permit that in the past has been a standard for septuagenarians with six months residency. Some holders of this permit may not have the minimum ten-year residency requirement under the new law when their current permit expires. In that event, such persons may buy resident licenses. Applications for the 70-year-old resident free permits may be obtained from all license vendors and conservation officers. These must be filled out and a permit will be issued either in person or by mail at any regional office. The new five-year senior resident hunting-fishing combination permits will be valid for 5 years. They are sealed in waterproof plastic coverings and imprinted with the prefix 92, which must be included as part of the permit number when applying for any controlled hunt.

When a current senior resident permit expires, the holder should go back to the regional office where the original permit was obtained or write the headquarters office of the department in Boise.

Commission To Meet
A public hearing on matters concerning the preservation, protection, perpetuation and management of Idaho Wildlife is scheduled for the afternoon of April 10 at Boise by the Idaho Fish and Game Department. It will be part of the April quarterly meeting of the Commission beginning the same day. Quarterly meetings of the Commission are required by state law. This is not the meeting called for the purpose of establishing closing dates for big game hunting seasons. That will be done at a special commission meeting to be called for that purpose sometime in May. Opening dates for upland game bird hunting seasons will also be set at the special meeting in May. Closing dates for game bird hunting seasons will not be established until late summer when more information is available about this year's nesting and brood success of the various species.

Winter Litter Deposit
Melting snow in many places around the state has uncovered cans and bottles, paper and plastics, the work of wintertime litterbugs. The state Highway Department says that Idaho spends over $250,000 a year for the cleanup of 5,000 miles of highway system. The Idaho Fish and Game Department says that it

SOCIAL SECURITY IS MORE THAN MOST THINK

by John S. Jennings
Field Representative
Too many people think of social security only as a retirement plan. It's that all right, but it's many other things too. To appreciate the true value of social security protection you have to consider the whole package. It is a basic retirement plan with several protection giving riders. It has a dollar value right now, the amount depending on the worker's individual earnings.

The average person sees social security as some vague and intangible something way off in the distant future. This is probably due, at least in part, to the naturally human characteristic of thinking ourselves young. This trait persists until about age 60. At that time we are shocked into the realization that our retirement years are fast approaching and that certain provisions need to be made.

Another reason for our picturing social security as something extremely costly as much to replace an outdoor toilet that has been destroyed by vandals as it does to build a goose nesting at Market Lake or in Boundary County. The Idaho Beautification Council, Inc., says that Idaho is too great to litter. All of this is in defiance of state law, which sets a hefty fine for littering.

ly remote is the common practice of considering only the retirement features of the system. Such a narrow view overlooks the valuable protection afforded to the worker's survivors.

One of the chief reasons for social security's existence is to provide for widows and children of deceased workers. This is something you have right now and it is worth thousands of dollars. This life insurance as it could be properly called is but one of the riders or supplements to the basic retirement plan.

Another rider or supplement to the retirement plan you pay for is disability or income protection insurance. In the event you become totally disabled for at least a 12-month period, payments are made to you and your family. The payments begin for the 7th month you are disabled and continue for as long as you remain totally disabled. Of course you don't plan to be injured in an auto accident, or get hurt on the job or have a heart attack. And, if you don't you won't need the disability rider. But peace of mind is worth something just in case your plans don't work out.

I often hear the complaint to the effect that "I'll never live to collect that money." At present there are about 13 million retired workers collecting social security benefits. This figure does not include their dependents wives and children.

In addition, there are about 1.5 million disabled workers who are collecting a monthly check. Payments are also made to their families. In the case where the pessimistic prediction comes true and the worker himself does not collect monthly payments are made to surviving widows and children.

We haven't mentioned Medicare but this is another important part of security taxes part of which are earmarked for the hospital insurance plan under Medicare. Then, when a worker and his wife reach age 65 the bulk of their hospital expenses will be paid for by the system.

So, every worker, regardless of age in hospital care is so great and the frequency of hospital stays is so high for elderly people that the cost of this care must be spread out over a person's working lifetime.

Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends for it is one of God's best gifts.—Thomas Hughes.

OUR COMPETITION RECOMMENDS BRONATE.®

Our competitors think so highly of Bronate as a broad-leaf weed killer in wheat and other grain crops that they want you to tank mix their products with Bronate.

While we appreciate the compliment, we don't necessarily go along with the recommendation.

Because while the addition of less effective herbicides to Bronate may help the other herbicides, it doesn't help Bronate. Matter of fact, it can hurt Bronate.

Unlike many other herbicides, Bronate kills your weeds without damaging your wheat. And tank-mixing reduces Bronate's high degree of selectivity.

Also, unlike other herbicides, Bronate isn't restricted to any particular soil type or condition. And tank-mixing limits Bronate's wide range of application.

Use Bronate alone if your weed problems include Tarweed, Gromwell, Henbit, Dogfennell, Crowfoot, Purple Mustard, and the rest of the Mustard family. Or any of the 23 other kinds of weeds listed on the Bronate label.

Our experience has shown that Bronate used alone has increased productivity for Northwest wheat farmers by as much as 20 bushels per acre.

Is it any wonder our competitors recommend Bronate?

For more information on how Bronate can help you, see your supplier or write Mr. R. P. Rich, Rhodia/Chipman Division, 120 Jersey Avenue, New Brunswick, N.J. 08903.
