Pendleton, Oregon Site of Jehovah's Witnesses Convention July 20-23

Jehovah's Witnesses have selected Pendleton, Oregon as one of 59 convention sites in the United States for their 1972 series of worldwide meetings.

Fred Huffman convention manager of Pendleton, said this year's assembly will be conducted under a theme of "Divine Rulership" and is scheduled for July 20-23.

Huffman said he expected 7,000 delegates for the four-day event from Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

"All persons interested in the Bible and in the kingdom of God will be glad to know that the Watchtower Society has made arrangements for this series of district conventions," Huffman said. "The program is designed to stress the importance of God's kingdom is a solution to the many problems confronting man."

Huffman said twenty conventions are planned for Canada, others in the British Isles in addition to those in other lands. He said upwards of 500,000 people are expected to attend.

Convention officials said the Rodeo Grounds will be used for the assembly. Huffman said the acquisition of many more convention sites was required this year due to continuing global expansion of the religious group.

Other conventions are being arranged for in Puyallup, Washington, and Tacoma, Washington.

The convention is designed for all members of the family; all age groups. "Much of the convention program

Cross Eyes

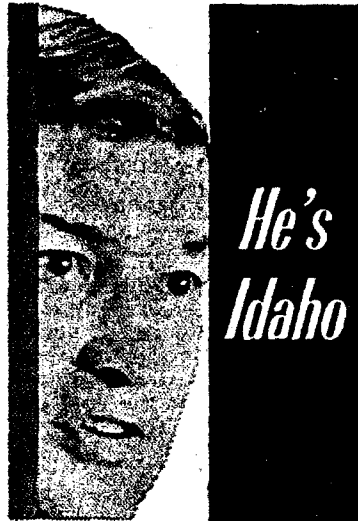

Children do not outgrow cross-eyes according to the Idaho Medical Association.

Cross-eyes require treatment, and the earlier a physician is consulted, the better. Proper and early treatment offers the only hope for improvement.

Cross-eyes are commonly caused by eye muscles which are not of equal strength. Instead of turning the eyes toward the direction of vision, the weak muscles let the eyes turn inward or outward.

Cross-eyes usually become apparent, by the sixth year, and if not corrected can seriously handicap a child. The cross-eyed person is forced to rely on a single eye for most visual work. Prompt medical attention may give the victim normal vision for the rest of his life.

will be interesting and vital to young people," Huffman added "and the Witnesses believe such family unity in matters of worship is essential in these difficult times."

Job Situation Stable In Latah County

Job placement activity remain stable in Latah county according to a report made by Frank J. Hartstein, manager of the Moscow office of the Idaho Department of Employment today. Hartstein said his office gave job finding help to 18 workers during the week, the same as during the previous week and exactly the same as for the corresponding week a year ago. He said that during the week, a total of 17 new jobs were listed with his office and at the end of the week 16 jobs were still open. Nearly all of the jobs that are now open and most of these that have been filed during the past weeks, have been for permanent full time workers. Hartstein said his office still has a number of young people seeking summer jobs and that the short term job is becoming harder to find.

Hartstein's report also indicated that the number of persons seeking unemployment insurance declined from the previous week and is almost as low as the figure for the same time a year ago. Currently, there are 265 residents seeking jobless pay, a week ago the total was 304 and one year ago there were 264 idled workers in the area. Twenty-four persons filed new claims for benefits, the same number as a year ago and one less than the 25 who

by Dee Hibbert
Idaho Fish and Game Dept.
With the warm June weather and the many people out in areas where snakes abound it might be well to give a rundown on the rattlesnakes in Idaho. There are three species in the state. The Prairie rattler, which is located in the northeastern corner, the Great Basin rattler located in the southern part and the Northern Pacific rattler, which is found in the northern part of the state. All of these snakes have a broad, diamond-shaped head with scales over the top. Their color is yellow-brown with irregular crossbands and dark areas in-between.

The common bull snake is the only harmless snake in this area that resembles the rattler, but they have an over-shaped head and no rattlers. The bull snake does not attack and kill rattlesnakes as some people think, but is very beneficial as it eats so many rodents.

In general rattlers just want to be left alone. If they have time and can find a way, they will leave the vicinity of a human in short order. Reptile handlers feel that they strike men in fear and defense, rather than attack. Some experiences with rattlers show that they have a trend to move away from the trail and have not coiled to strike even when stepped on.

Rattlers seem to have a peculiar distribution in the Clearwater Region. The Salmon River is good snake country; in fact, Deer Creek seems to have an abundance of them. The filed initially for benefits in 1971.

At Moscow, the current total is 158, last week 166 and a year ago 143. At Genesee the total now is 9, the same as last week and one less than a year ago. In the Troy-Deary-Bovill area there were 54 persons seeking benefits, down from 74 a week ago and from 70 last year. 3 Kendrick residents are receiving insurance the same as a year ago but down one from last week. Thirty-eight checks are going into the Potlatch area compared with 49 last week and 37 a year ago. Hartstein predicted that the number of persons seeking jobless pay in the area would continue to decline for the next several weeks as summer work becomes more available. Workers will continue to be hired in the construction industry and most loggers should be back in the woods shortly, he said.

Selway River drainage from Selway Falls upstream to Selway Lodge is another area where rattlers are abundant. The Lochsa and North Fork of the Clearwater drainage have very few or no rattlesnakes. Hells Canyon on the Snake River is well known for its snake population. The area around Pittsburg Landing and upstream for two-three miles is one of the worst areas.

Snakes are interesting as a group and they aren't all these nasty creatures many people seem to think. For one thing, they aren't slimy, to the touch but very clean and dry. There is no odor to rattlesnakes when you pick them up. They are good to eat and many people consider their flesh a delicacy.

Snakes mate for the first time during the spring the female is about 2 1/2 years old. The young are born alive and are usually ten. The young snakes are on their own from birth and will start searching for food. Their principle food consists of small mammals such as mice, rats, cottontail rabbits, squirrels, chipmunks and gophers. They also prey on bird eggs, lizards, frogs and insects. They hunt primarily at night and strike their prey to kill it, then swallow it whole. They feed only once every week or two.

The rattles are made of the same substance as hair, horn or fingernails. The number of rattles does not tell how old the snake is, but how many times the skin has been shed, which occurs about three times a year. The snake will not always rattle before striking and some may even lose their rattles in rough terrain.

Rattlesnakes are equipped with fangs at birth, and although the venom glands and fangs are small, the venom is more concentrated than it is in the adult snakes. They have reserve fangs in successive sizes behind the functional fangs. These replace the main ones when they are lost or broken. The venom is held in two glands or sacs located on either side of the head and is usually bright yellow in color. In Idaho's rattlesnakes, the effect of the poison is the general breakdown of the blood structure with some effect on the nerves and brain.

Snake bites are not usually fatal. About 1500 people a year are bitten by poisonous snakes in the U. S. of which about 3 percent die. So some precautions should be taken in snake country. Snakes are often found around rocky areas and you should watch where you place your feet and hands. On a hot day they will be found in shady areas since they will die if out in the direct sun for 10 to 30 minutes.

Don't walk around in the dark with out shoes and a flashlight to see where you step since they are very active at night.

Recommendations for treatment of snake bite have varied through the years but the slash and suction method is slowly being discontinued. The best treatment is a cold pack around the affected area. A tourniquet between the bite and heart and antivenin shots are also treatments. If you are near a cold stream, stick the affected arm or leg in the water immediately. It is very important to stay calm and don't over-exercise yourself.

If you make an incision to draw out the poison, it should be as soon as possible after the bite. It should be made longitudinally to avoid cutting nerves and blood vessels and only about 1/4 inch deep. Use a sterilized knife or razor blade. Use a snake bite kit suction cup if possible. Remember, if the venom and blood is sucked out by mouth, any cut or sore in the mouth will also become infected by the venom.

If you're careful there is very little to fear from rattlers. However, it pays to be on your guard in snake country.

Controlled Hunt Bids

All applications for controlled hunt permits this year must be accompanied by certified checks or money orders covering the amount of the hunt fees. The shorter time element in processing applications and checking eligibility and the increased multiplicity of restrictive regulations require this change in procedure.

Controlled hunt applications and other materials are available statewide from license vendors. July 6 is the cut-off date for filing applications for the first drawing or moose, fasnep and goat. If an application is postmarked by midnight July 6, it is acceptable. The first drawing for moose, sheep, and goat will be held in Boise July 27, 1972.

Controlled hunt fees are as follows, Deer (permit only) $3.00; Elk

(permit only) $5.00; antelope (includes $5.00 tag) $8.00; moose (includes $10.00 tag) $35.00; mountain goat (includes $10.00 tag) $15.00; bighorn sheep (includes $10.00 tag)

"The present system of welfare is simply not doing the job. To allow it to continue, would bankrupt this country, both financially and morally. We must develop a system that will encourage and train young people to become active, working citizens, rather than recipients of the Federal handout."

April, 1972

"We must not force cuts that will weaken the bone and muscle of our defense systems.

We must continue to guard against complacency, for without a strong deterrent force capability to resist the encroachment of Communism — both within and without — all other problems could be irrelevant.

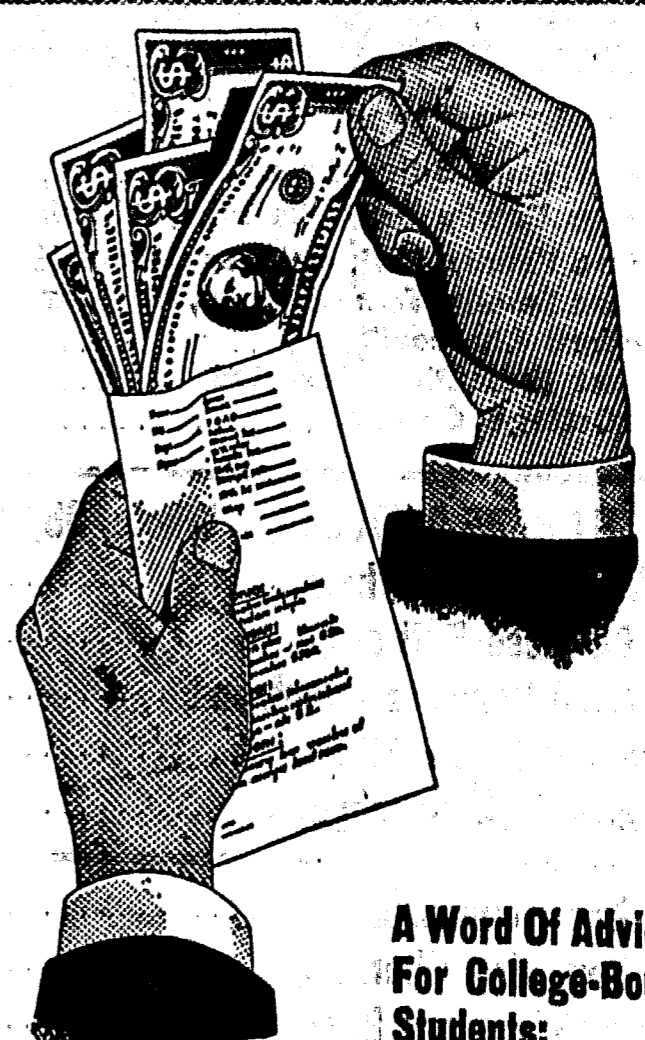

We must remain strong militarily, for there has been no significant change in the Communistic objective of world domination."

May, 1971

"The neighborhood school system has always been the backbone of the American education. If we permit the Government to have the power to alter that system in the assignment of students and selection of faculty, then we have also forfeited to the Government the right to regulate every facet of education, including curriculum and textbooks."

October, 1970

"Every single dollar spent for which there is no corresponding dollar coming into the treasury means more inflation. It is now the duty of each individual to elect a Congress which will hold spending within the limits of a balanced Federal budget."

Mrs. Newt Heath had the misfortune of braking two bones in her ankle in a fall recently, so is wearing a cast and riding more in her wheelchair than in the new car. Everyone is truly sorry she has to endure this pain and inconvenience and hopes all this will heal as soon as possible!

A group, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Steigers and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Steigers attended, as spectators, the National Old Time Fiddlers competition held at Weiser. Leaving on Friday by the Salmon River route, staying in Ontario, Ore., and returning via Walla Walla, they enjoyed a wonderful weekend trip.
Crowds of between 4,000 and 5,000 attended each evening of the week-end performance.

Sunday morning they were callers of Mrs. Oscar Kurtz in Nyssa, Oreg and Sunday at the home of the Lloyd Schneider family in Waitsburg.
Mrs. Patsy Buckley, granddaughter of the late Jeff Buckley of Fir Bluff, was first place winner of the ladies fiddling group of the nation! Her mother was Lulu Buckley, who taught in the area rural schools in the earlier days and is now Mrs. Geo. McDowell of Lewiston.

Friday afternoon the Bob Heimgartner family of Yakima, accompanied by Lena Zumhofe and great grandchildren Connie and Brian Straw, all of Mt. Home, arrived for a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Heimgartner.

This is Margorie's "home territory" so the family will not feel strangers in a new land. We wish them the best of everything and will miss them a lot!

The Leslie Heimgartners and house guests drove to Kootstana and Stites on Sunday for a visit with relatives. Connie and Brian remained for a two day visit with their uncle, Ed Straw at Stites.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Blair and daughters of Lewiston were Sunday afternoon callers in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clelia Holmington.
The Wayne Heimgartners were Saturday evening dinner guests of her mother, Mrs. Hunter and Aunt Charlotte in Lewiston.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harri and Mrs. Lily McCall, all of Clarkston were Sunday supper guests in the Wayne Heimgartner home.

TUMBLE WEED
Boasting and brave and bold, I saw you rounding,
The fence-row in the summer fallowed land,
Pregnant with seeds of sin, with rap-ture bounding
Scattering your venom on the fertile land.

I wish I had not seen you in your sorrow,
Rain-soaked and prostrate by the hayshed door,
I pray for you and for a BLESST tomorrow.
That you will find a way to—
SIN NO MORE. —Bert Gamble

LETTERS FROM READERS

Kendrick, Idaho
June 25, 1972

Dear Editor.

If you should decide to print this, it might serve to remind a few careless drivers that not only humans fall prey to speeding cars. Too many people fail to consider that other living creatures also, are entitled to safely share our land and perform the duties that God intended for them. For every human fatality, a hundred lesser animals must die upon our highways . . . daily. Too many, so called, "humans" do not even have the courtesy to inform the pet owner of the misfortune they have inflicted upon it.

This is the third draft of this letter I have written; the first two most deserve to be read, but words spoken in anger, though they convey the bitter unvarnished truth, often defeat their own purpose.

Anyone who has ever gathered up the remains of an adored pet from some roadside ditch, where some "Devil Take The Hindmost" speed demon had placed it, knows the utter futility of tears, or curses cast upon the unresponsive air!

Three days ago I retrieved the lifeless body of our mother cat from beside our gate . . . but a few feet from our dwelling. The fact that such an accident might very well have happened to a child, slows down these road-runners not one iota, while practically racing their chariots through our front yard!

While most drivers respect the situation that our home lies so closely to the county road, it takes only one thoughtless one to do a lot of harm.

We gently buried our mother cat; but unless I am all capable of carrying out the duties that God had allotted to her, her three-week-old kittens will perish from starvation.

Must we sit quietly while a few "ground-bourne jet fliers" turn our peaceful country road into something resembling a California race track—a deathtrap for anything that steps beyond our family gate?

We are conservationists. We care about our animals, great or small, wild or domestic, and we wish to keep them. Why else would we pay today's prices for food to sustain them?

It would seem that we also pay taxes to maintain county roads on which to have them slaughtered!

I am not demanding—I am pleading for some consideration for our rights and for deliverance from missile-armed-vehicles; manipulated by racers who seem determined to beat some unknown opponent to some finish line. The laurels they win might serve a better purpose—decorating the graves of their hapless victims along the way.

Erma E. Bowers

Meat Tenderizer and Hair Spray May Serve Dual Purposes

Meat tenderizer and hair spray may seem out of place in the laundry room but they useful there when you need to remove stains relates Ruth Spidahl, extension home economics leader, U. of I.

Use meat tenderizer as the last step in removing salad dressing and mayonnaise stains, she advises. First spray the stain with drycleaning fluid. Let fluid evaporate, then cover stain with liquid detergent or a paste made from dry detergent and water. Last sprinkle the spot with meat tenderizer and launder.

Use hair spray to remove ballpoint ink stains. Simply spray stain thoroughly before laundering, Mrs. Spidahl advises.

Other laundering methods and techniques that she recommends are: use hot water—it does a better cleaning job and kills germs better than cold water does. Add water softener to rinse water to prevent build-up of static electricity. Wash white nylon with white fabrics only because it picks up color from colored fabrics.

Keep cotton and polyester fabrics white by washing them in hot (140) degrees water. Mrs. Spidahl says. If they are yellowed hot water washes will gradually whiten them; overnight soaking in detergent will speed up the whitening process.
