

Joe Nilson Retires After 22 Years

After 22 years employment in lumber products, 21 for Potlatch Forests, Inc., Joe Nilson, 64, retired on Nov. 1 of this year.

In 1915 Nilson began his career in logging operations as an employee for Lewis Lumber Company near Bovill. He worked for Shephard Lumber Co. at Kendrick, Rauch Lumber Co. at Troy and Cardiff Mills at Pierce before accepting employment with Potlatch Forests, Inc., on May 1, 1951. He was working as a car loader at the Lewiston plant at the time of his retirement.

Nilson, born October 3, 1908, was one of 14 children; 4 girls and 10 boys, born to Mr. and Mrs. Nils Nilson. He recalls vividly recalls memories of his parent's cherry orchard on Little Bear Ridge. During cherry season, he said, 40 teams a day came regularly to the 10-acre orchard for fruit. Steady pickers were engaged to gather the fruit, which his father, known to all as "Cherry Nilson", peddled from a 3-seated hack.

At the time when cars were still quite a novelty, Nilson recalls being appropriately impressed, as a car came every day for 1 week after cherries. Nilson remembers eating cherries beyond his capacity in his younger days and commented that he acquired an acute dislike for the fruit.

The family went regularly to Sunday School and church. If unable to attend regular services, they worshiped at home with his father as teacher. The Nilson children were "camped" for 3 weeks for being absent, Joe said, so all made it a point to be on hand Sunday morning.

Nilson spent five years working a 160-acre farm on Little Bear Ridge and many seasons working for Walter May on American Ridge.

He was married and later divorced. Nilson had two sons, Jack, who lives at Kendrick, and Leonard, who drowns in the Clearwater River, July 12 of 1957.

Following his retirement, Nilson moved to Kendrick where he lives in a trailer home. He plans to enjoy his retirement years gardening on his property and assisting local farmers in busy seasons.

What A Grandmother Is . . .

(Written by a Third Grader)

"A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other people's little girls and boys. A Grandfather is a man Grandmother.

He goes for walks with boys, and they talk about fishing and tractors and like that."

"Grandmothers don't have to do anything except be there. They're old, so they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the market where the pretend horse is, and have lots of dimes ready. Or, if they take us for walks, they should never say, "Hurry up." Usually they are fat, but not too fat to tie shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gum off."

"It is better if they don't type-write, or play cards except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like why dogs hate cats, and how come God isn't married. They don't talk baby talk like visitors do because it is hard to understand. When they read to us, they don't skip or mind if it is the same story again."

"Everyone should try to have one, especially if you don't have television, because Grandmas are the only grown-up who have got time."

New Correspondents For Hill Area

The Gazette is pleased to announce the addition of three new correspondents in the Southwick, Leland, and Cameron area.

Bulldogs Rip Tigers 48-0

Two seniors, Doug Moser and Dan Tyler, wearing the Blue and Gold of Genesee's football team for the final time, finished their high school gridiron careers in a blaze of glory Friday night at Kendrick as the two scored five of Genesee's seven touchdowns to lead the Bulldogs to a 48-0 victory over the Kendrick Tigers on the KHS field.

Moser, injured early in the season and out of action for several games, was back in top form Friday night passing for four touchdowns and running two over the goal line himself. Tyler, the speedy little back, caught two of Moser's passes for touchdowns, one covering 65 yards and the other 90 yards and also got a score on a 90 yard ramble.

The Tigers took the opening kickoff of the game with Osborn returning the ball to the Genesee 33. The Tigers picked up a first down to the Genesee 22 but their drive stalled and Genesee pushed them back and took over on downs on their own 25. Moser put the Bulldogs on the attack quickly and in the two plays had moved the ball to midfield. The Bulldogs drove down to the Kendrick 15-yard line before the Tigers defense stiffened up and held Genesee to four downs with the first quarter ending with no score on the board.

Genesee found the key to the Tiger defense in the second quarter. Greene ran up three touchdowns. Greene packed the ball down to the two-yard line early in the period and Moser bulled the ball across from there and a Genesee kick was good for the conversion. Genesee led 7-0.

A Kendrick fumble set up the next Genesee score as the Bulldogs recovered on the Tiger 30. A few plays later, Tyler scored and the conversion as worth two points for a 15-0 lead.

Moser unleashed his passing attack and flipped to Tyler in a passing-running play covering 65 yards for the next Genesee score. The kick attempt failed and the Bulldogs had it 21-0.

Kendrick, still in the game, fought back and moved the ball to the Genesee 19 and then Osborn penetrated inside the 10 before the drive stalled and the half ended.

In the third quarter Moser made it 28-0 on a six-yard run, then passed to Greene in a play covering 33 yards for a 35-0 score. It was 41-0 after Moser hit Ron Herman on a play covering 20 yards. Doug and Dan climaxed the evening and their own careers with a 90-yard pass play to end the game 48-0.

Nation Nods To Nixon

Unofficial returns from across the nation, the state and Latah County gave President Richard M. Nixon his mandate from the people for four more years of leadership. Carrying what will be the greatest electoral landslide in history for himself, Nixon's sweep apparently aided two GOP candidates in Idaho as James McClure won a seat in the U. S. Senate and Steve Symms took the First District seat in the House of Representatives.

At the county level Nixon won approval from Latah voters but he didn't carry McClure or Symms with him, both of these men trailed their Democratic opponents. Unofficially Nixon received 6,043 Latah votes to McGovern's 4,548.

Harold Snow, incumbent Republican, and Norma Dohler, a Democratic newcomer, were elected to the Idaho House of Representatives. Orval Snow was re-elected State Senator for District 5. Snow is a Democrat.

In two close contests, both incumbent Democratic County commissioners lost their seats to Republicans, James R. Lucas, a Republican and retired veterinarian defeated Leon Danielson for the seat from District 2. In District 1, W. C. "Bill" Jones defeated Herb J. Zimmerman.

Pete Leriget, Democrat, won over Robert T. Felton and will become Latah County Prosecuting Attorney.

Incumbent Latah Sheriff Ed Pierson, Democrat, won over his Republican opponent Elton Walker and wrote-in candidate Larry Waterbury.

In District 7, Leo Butler and Claude Judd, both Democrats, won House of Representative seats. Werner Brammer, American Party candidate finished a surprisingly strong third.

Juliaetta Sewer Nixed

Poem By Mrs. Magnuson

At the Gem State Writers' Guild convention at Boise, October 28th, a poetry workshop was held by Dr. Charles Wright of Boise State College. Members of the Guild had been asked to submit poems on the subject of "Peace" and these were judged and evaluated at the workshop.

First place award was presented to Ella Faulks of Homedale, Idaho. Second place winner was Lucille Magnuson with the following poem.

Peace-Maker
His hands were made for working,
praying, feeling.
The war days go by, all precious time stealing;
Opportunities are lost, with no return.
Yet those hands will always strive and write and yearn.
They'll bind the wound and hold the needle steady,
And heed the call with medicine at ready.
Strong fingers will sustain the sufferer's need,
Steady hands the anguished cries for help will heed.
Though sights are too brutal and cruelly real,
Those careful hands will hurry to mend and heal.
No battle weapon's as strong as loving care.
Peaceful healing starts when the medic is there.
Lucille Magnuson

EXERCISING
 For those who know they should be exercising more, but seem unable to find the time, there is much to be said for walking.

Walking is becoming an almost forgotten pastime with most Americans. For exercise and for exploring the world around us, walking has a great deal to offer.

People who have difficulty falling asleep often discover that long brisk-walks in the late evening often is more effective than a pill.

Fresh air and exercise such as walking stimulates the brain by feeding it more oxygen.

Long walks are also a well-known aid to digestion.

Set your own pace and select your own path. Taking children for a Sunday walk in the woods or park can be fun for the whole family.

Relax when you walk. Let your arms and legs swing normally.

Common sense is not so common. —Voltaire.

CRAIG MOUNTAIN HUNTING

Hunting on Craig Mountain, Unit 11, opens for deer on November 11 and runs through November 26, 1972. This area is good deer hunting and has a limited elk population. There has always been a problem because the land is mainly in private ownership. Access to the area in the past has been limited, and in some cases, closed altogether.

Last year most of the land was open to public hunting by most of the private landowners in the area. There were some problems but things worked out fairly well.

This year in a meeting held with two major landowners, the sheriff's office, the Lewis-Clark Wildlife Club and the Idaho Fish and Game Department it was planned that the access to the area would be handled much the same as last year.

All Potlatch Forests, Inc. lands would be open to hunting except the posted safety zones, which are closed to hunting at all times. This is the area where cattle are being held and the Sweetwater picnic area.

Nelson Howard is opening all of his land to hunting, except three areas that will be closed to all vehicle traffic. These areas are:

1) The Wapshel Road from Zaza Point to the river, which will be blocked by locked gates on both ends.
 2) The Madden-Corral Gate at the head of Corral Creek will also be locked.

SUGAR FOR HICCUPS
 Maybe the embarrassed hiccupper can at last forget all the "cures" he has tried in the past: holding his breath, having a friend yell unexpectedly in his ear, or putting his head in paper bag. A recent experiment has shown that a spoonful of ordinary table sugar, taken dry, will cure the hiccuppers. Three doctors report that the simple sugar cure worked on 19 of 20 hiccuppers. Three of them suffered a recurrence of the annoying problem with 10 to 24 hours after the first sugar treatment, and all three responded to repeated doses of sugar.

There are numerous checking stations being held throughout the region. Some are permanent stations and some temporary operating only for a few hours. Idaho law requires that all hunters must stop and report at a checking station if it is on their route of travel. This applies whether or not the hunter has game. Failure to do so is a violation of the Idaho code.

PEA INDUSTRY THREATENED BY WEEVIL

The outbreak of pea leaf weevil is causing concern among growers and dealers. Many farmers plan to quit raising peas, or at least to cut acreage drastically, due to this new insect.

Inland Empire pea producers and dealers are invited to attend a "Pea and Lentil Workshop" slated for 9:30 a. m., Thursday, November 9 at the Student Union Building, University of Idaho campus. This workshop is sponsored by the Idaho Pea and Lentil Association and the University of Idaho college of agriculture.

This workshop will take an industry approach to an industry problem. Farmers, dealers, State and Federal entomologists, research workers, agricultural chemical dealers and applicators will work together to help the industry combat the pea leaf weevil.

"We can't give up to a single insect without a fight," states Harold Blain, secretary of the Idaho Pea and Lentil Association.

DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT

The number of persons seeking unemployment insurance in Latah Co. has climbed to 164, reports the Moscow office of the Department of Employment. This compares to 132 during the previous week and 163 during the same period a year ago.

During the week, 38 new claims were filed. Wet weather conditions in the woods and the completion of some phases of construction projects has contributed to the increase in claims.

Job placements dropped off somewhat during the week but still remained higher than last year's total. Fourteen area workers were placed on jobs compared to 23 last week and ten during the same period a year ago. Nineteen new jobs were received and at the close of the week there were 23 positions available. Current openings include domestic

HEAVY BLEEDING

When a serious wound is bleeding heavily, don't waste time—put pressure on the wound immediately, suggests the Idaho Medical Association.

Use the closest available clean pad. A handkerchief will do.

Place it over the wound and press firmly with your hand, or with both hands.

You can hold the pad in place with a long bandage such as strips of cloth, necktie or belt.

Use a tourniquet only to control bleeding for an amputated or severely mangled arm or leg.

Unless bones are broken, raise the bleeding part higher than the rest of the body. Keep the victim lying down.

Remember: Heavy bleeding comes from wounds of one or more large blood vessels. Such a loss of blood can take victim's life in three to five minutes.

Prompt care is important. When you have the bandage in place and the bleeding under control call or send for a physician.

workers, clerk-typist, secretary, cook waitress, shoe repairman, TV repairman, office machine serviceman, furnace installer, pressman, bindery foreman, and yardman.

CIGARETTE SMOKING

Fewer Americans are smoking cigarettes today but those who have not abandoned the habit are apparently smoking more, reports the Idaho Medical Association.

Based on data collected from 37,000 households, the National Center for Health Statistics reports that the percentage of smokers among the U. S. adult population decreased from 41.6 per cent in 1965 to 36.7 per cent in 1970.

The largest decrease occurred among males—from 51 percent to 43.7 percent during the 5-year period. The proportion of female smokers dropped from 33.2 to 30.9 percent.

Among the over 17 population, there was an increase in the number of former smokers—from 16.1 million in 1965 to 23.9 million in 1970—a jump of 4.7 percent.

Despite the decline in the number of smokers, the report indicated an increase in the percentage of heavy smokers during the 5-year period.

In 1965, for example, an estimated 23.7 percent of the male smokers puffed 25 or more cigarettes per day and in 1970 the figure was 26.4 percent. Also in 1970 a smaller proportion of smokers were smoking less than 15 cigarettes per day.

The truth about Bronate, the "educated" herbicide. From a weed that lived just long enough to tell about it.

"Oh, it was terrible. A tragic day for weeds indeed.

There we were happily robbing the wheat of their precious moisture and nutrients when the Bronate hit.

First the tarweed, henbit and dogfennel keeled over and died. Then the mustard family collapsed simultaneously. And finally my own family of crowfoot went before my very eyes.

I'd heard about Bronate but I never imagined it could wipe us out like that. I mean, we crowfoot are a hardy lot. Old Uncle Slimleaf, rest his soul, told us this Bronate wasn't like any other herbicide. It was educated. It knew the difference between weeds and wheat. It even says on the label it will kill 26 kinds of us.

He said farmers use it because when it killed us, it wouldn't hurt a grain of the wheat. Even the new herbicide sensitive varieties like luke wheat. And they'd get up to 12 to 20 bushels more yield per acre.

That's why it's the first choice of farmers out here in the Northwest.

Well, Uncle Slimleaf was right, dead right.

Anyway, by the time we realized Bronate was coming it was too late. We were goners.

It's just a matter of time for me now. I don't know how much longer I can hang on.

My last words to my fellow weeds are: stay away from Bronate. It r-e-a-l-l-y w-o-r-r-ks."

Bronate.

Works on weeds, not wheat.

For information on how Bronate can help you, see your supplier or write Mr. R. P. Rich, Rhodia/Chipman Division, 120 Jersey Avenue, New Brunswick, N.J. 08903.

A young woman tells us that one night on a rough Pacific crossing she was in her cabin undressing for bed when suddenly she was overcome with seasickness. In a panic she rushed out into the corridor and headed for the bathroom. It was not until she who was feeling equally miserable that she realized she didn't have a stitch of clothing on. Horrified, she let out a shriek. Her fellow sufferer looked at her warily. "Don't let it bother you miss," he groaned. "I'll never live to tell anybody."

Nothing is quite as annoying as to have someone go right on talking when you're interrupting.

The lawyer badgered a farmer who was witnessing for the other side. "How much are you being paid," he sneered, "to come into court in your Sunday overalls and tell big lies?"

The farmer drawled, "not as much as you are, or you'd be in overalls, too!"

A woman testifying at a prayer meeting: "I ain't what I ought to be; and I ain't what I'm going to be; but anyway, I ain't what I was."

Remember: The trouble with a guy who talks too fast is that he often says something he hasn't thought of yet!

LITTLE BOYS

Thank you God, for little boys, who bring

To Grandma's special joys.

A hurried kiss—(he hasn't time).

"Come, watch my model airplane climb!"

Pocket full of string and nails,

Colored rocks and slimy snails,

Faded jeans, and much too small,

"Goodness, but he's growing tall!"

A swelled-up sliver in his thumb,

A sniffly nose that wants to run,

Scabby knees from a bicycle wreck,

Chewed fingernails, and dirty neck,

Can't stand carrots, spinach, peas,

"But I'll have a few more cookies, please."

Globs of mud and sand tracked in,

"Tell me child! Where have you been?"

"Aw Grandma, I don't need a bath!"

Gotta help Granddad feed the calf."

"Oh alright—but I'll be all wrinkled!"

Couldn't I just be sorta sprinkled?"

In flannel jamas, clean and neat,

He snuggles close, so we can read,

Grandmas love this time of day,

When little boys are done with play,

A sleepy head begins to nod,

He's sound asleep—Yes, thank you God,

For guarding, guiding from above,

All little boys that Grandmas love.

Hardest Places To Get Offer Quality Hunting

By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish and Game Dept. Anyone who thinks elk is like shooting cows in the feedlot faces a quick change of position unless he buys his meat over the counter and his trophy from a taxidermist.

It's not entirely a man against beast proposition, either because a hunter alone and on foot certainly does not have the advantages of those who go hunting well equipped to work the rugged backcountry. Experienced nimrods thinking in terms of saddle and pack horses, even before deciding which wins what ridgetops, are likely to have the most game during the week or two they plan to hunt.

Stories are heard every fall that somebody shot an elk which practically rolled downhill into a pickup truck. Some are true, but most of these magnificent big game animals usually match wits with sportsmen in rugged timbered regions far from roads and the haunts of man. Moreover, the carcass is too heavy to bring to camp without horses. One quarter is more of a load than the average man wants to backpack in rough country.

Elk are altogether unlike deer because they are not tied to one particular locality. During the September and early October hunting seasons, bulls are fighting each other and herding together all the cows they can defend. Tomorrow they may be miles from where they were yesterday or today. Except by accident, a man on foot cannot keep up with their wanderings. The only other means of ground transportation that will go most places that elk do is a horse.

Rubber tires carry elk hunters to the ends of roads and shoe leather gets them back a few miles into more remote areas, but the difference a few miles makes often is the difference between easily accessible and virtually impossible hunting country.

It's against elk nature to accommodate themselves in all-equipped inexperienced hunters and it generally works out the other way round. Many successful hunters hire out fitters and guides to get them into elk country. They plan plenty of time for their hunts and get several miles away from backcountry airstrips. It pays off in quality hunting, prize trophies and meat in the locker.

Anywhere from 40 to 90 percent of Idaho's elk kill by hunters is made on north-central ranges depending on weather and other factors. About half of the state's harvest is in the Clearwater drainage and the counties of Clearwater, Idaho, and Shoshone all are big elk producers.

However, all but four of Idaho's 44 counties support some elk and there are many places where the herds are underharvested. Some of these are parts of areas where most of the total kill is made. The good harvest, from the standpoint of sound game management and those so low that herds and range sometimes are out of balance, often are separated by just a few steep trail miles.

Horseback hunting generally follows a basic pattern. The most common is for riders to dismount as soon as fresh elk sign is found, hunting quietly and slowly on foot. Elk sometimes can be taken completely by surprise—provided the stalking is from the downwind side—and a shot can be squeezed off with deliberation but, if elk get a trace of human scent, elk break for cover without waiting for their natural enemy to come into sight. However, they are not the speedsters that smaller numbers of the deer family are. They are bigger, easier targets. Escape routes are often predictable and guides often cover such crossings with hunters taking strategic "stands." Success again depends upon favorable wind currents. There is a notable single-mindedness about elk hunters in the backcountry. Relatively few deer are shot, especially early in the season. They are trophy hunters, shooting more bulls than cows until time begins running out and the clicking tyranny of clocks calls them back to responsibilities on the homefront.

Errol Nielson big game supervisor ment says the evidence is convincing that Idaho can accomplish more desirable elk harvests (and wilderness deer harvests) by distributing available hunting pressure over backcountry areas more uniformly so better success ratio can be achieved.

At least the number of hunters in these wild river drainages is not increasing in proportion to Idaho license sales. There seems to be a need for encouraging more resident hunters to leave the roads and go deeper into primitive regions.

Idahoans also must accept the outfitter and his packstring and the airplane as valuable game management tools. For many years, non-resident hunters have been recognized for their present and potential capacity to provide the hunting pressure where it is needed most.

Some Idahoans seem to believe that long seasons have been set as means of showing favoritism to outfitters and guides, allowing them to make more money from exploiting big game herds. The truth is that longer seasons do give people more opportunity to hunt the backcountry but has not increased hunting pressure unduly.

Backcountry penetration up steep, rocky canyons is tough but pays dividends in quality hunting. Color is everywhere—in the orange berries of mountain ash, the crimson drupes of sumac, and the gold of aspen against contrasting hues of pines, firs, spruce and larch. The elk are rutting and for thrills that chill the old backbone, the bugling of a challenging bull is hard to beat. Its an arpeggio of sounds, ranging from a high pitched whistle to a few throaty grunts. Simple whistles, store-bought or homemade, duplicate this mating call when properly used.

American Indian of yore gave more time to studying wildlife habits than is possible for most people today and it is said that they could lure any-

Elk Study Areas Closed To Travel

The question is: Do elk, logging roads, and people get along together? That is the question a special five-year elk-logging road study will attempt to answer. And the hunting public will be asked to cooperate by observing certain road closures in the Lewis & Clark and Beaver-ha National Forests which will be signed as off-limits to all vehicles.

Forest Service officials add that violators of road closures due to this study and other purposes on all National Forests are subject to a fine of up to $500 and/or jail sentence of up to 6 months and that officers of the Forest Service are empowered to make arrests or issue citations for trespass offenses.

Regional Forester Steve Yurich pointed out that the use of road and area closures to administer and protect the resources in the National Forests has been normal procedure in past years, but the closures on these particular Forests as a result of the Elk-Logging Study will have a direct effect on big game hunters.

Details and descriptions of the areas and roads that are closed are available at District Ranger offices and Supervisors office of each of the Forests concerned.

THE SPIRIT OF THANKSGIVING DAY

This November 23 is Thanksgiving Day—one of the most thoroughly American of all our holidays. It celebrates the very beginning of the United States, and the mere mention of this holiday conjures up memories of the traditional turkey dinner.

In our seemingly dissentious nation, we tend to lose the real revelation of Thanksgiving—we have the feast without remembering its reason. The importance of Thanksgiving has increased with each passing year. The first settlers in our land found time to offer thanks for their lives, the meager food on their tables and the chance to live in freedom and hope on the hostile shores of an unknown land. Let us pause for a few minutes this Thanksgiving to contemplate the many good things we enjoy and offer our thanks for them. In doing so, we shall gain a renewed strength to tackle our difficulties and imperfections with faith and good spirit.

With gratitude for the strength, purpose, charity and pride of our forebearers to which we owe the freedom and opportunity that bless us today, let us bow our heads this Thanksgiving Day. It is indeed a day to count our blessings. And it is a time to renew our care of them for the sake of generations yet to come.

HUNTER ROLE IMPORTANT TO GAME CONSERVATION
By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish and Game Department It's important to remember, in any discussion of hunting, that big game seasons are established primarily as an act of conservation.

Enjoyment of the hunt itself is actually of secondary consideration. Many hunters, however, derive far more satisfaction from their participation in a hunt when they know the need for the role they are playing as wildlife managers. Hunters actually are practicing ecologists, whether they know it or not, and whether they even know the meaning of the word.

Ecology, a word used a lot these days, often indiscriminately by people who have never looked it up, is defined by Webster as "a branch of science concerned with the interrelationship of organisms and their environment."

Prior to the coming of the white man, the organisms that lived in the place now called Idaho, the buffalo, deer, elk, moose, caribou, antelope, bighorn sheep, mountain goat, mice and rabbits—the prey species—along with the wolves, mountain lions, bobcats, coyotes, and the Indian, as well as the predators—created an ecologist balance for their environment.

By nature, the prey animals over-reproduce themselves. For example, graphs show how a pair of mice, or some other highly reproductive animal, would produce some astronomical figure of progeny in a few months, or years, if left to multiply unchecked.

The antlered animals also increase in numbers, although not as dramatically, of course, as the various rodents with their shorter life spans. Even so, left in increase unhindered, they would soon face starvation. A particular range can grow food for just a certain number of animals. Over-use will destroy the range, leaving food for a few or none at all.

In huge areas of Idaho and the intermountain region, both cattle and wildlife species share the same range. The number of domestic livestock animals, including horses and sheep, must be controlled to prevent overgrazing and so must the numbers of wildlife animals.

Before the coming of the livestock industry, farms, cities, second homes and resort areas and highways, nature established ecological balances that flowed and ebbed with over-production and its consequences. For example, when prey species over-produced their numbers, the predators took the surplus. When the supply of prey animals was short, the prey animals soon became less abundant.

But the balance was destroyed with the settling of the West.

The slaughter of the Plains buffalo needs no retelling but the fact that the lobo wolves who preyed on them, turning to domestic livestock in order to live, were also destroyed.

In many other places, however, the other prey species—deer and elk, principally, are as numerous as ever. In some instances, where logging practices have opened up new ranges they thrive in greater numbers than is possible in a virgin forest.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department is charged by law with maintaining of wildlife populations, and increasing them when rangeland and other factors make that possible. Until now the establishment of hunting seasons, based on knowledge gained over many years of research, as well as trial and error, is one of the effective tools for achieving this goal, for which no valid substitute has been found.

Consequently, there is not only a minimum harvest sought, but also a ceiling on the number of animals that may be taken every year, and this is of significance to out-of-staters who have given thought to a hunting trip to Idaho. In some cases, local hunters are insufficient to effect an adequate harvest. In some instances, they are too numerous, and overcrowding creates problems. Obviously, such situations hold little attraction for nonresidents who must pay premium fees for licenses.

One of Idaho's most-sought-after big game species is elk. A large animal, prized for its excellent meat, it receives adequate hunting pressure most places, save only the most remote of wilderness areas. Other prized species are moose, mountain goat, antelope and mountain sheep. These all are controlled hunts, which means that permits must be applied for and a drawing held to select winners.

Most people who think of moose think of Canada or Alaska, but there are nonetheless huntable populations of this largest of the antlered animals in Idaho. This is a scenic and mountainous state, with vast wilderness regions, and relatively unpeopled, at least in comparison with most states, and it does hold large and varied populations of wildlife. Elk probably is the state's most important big game animal. Certainly the north and central regions of the panhandle hold great herds, and at the least, places Idaho among the top states in the country as far as the majestic wapiti is concerned.

Strangely or so it seems to persons unacquainted with wildlife and their requirements, a disaster occurring many years ago is at least partially responsible for the large number of elk that roam the Idaho mountains today. In the early part of the century, a series of great wildfires destroyed the forest in a large part of Idaho and western Montana, principally in the upper Clearwater drainage. Grass and browse become reestablished in the scorched earth, creating prodigious amounts of feed for antlered animals.

During the period needed for young trees to sprout and eventually grow to a size to once again crowd out the browse, this was excellent elk habitat.

Now much of this prime elk range is deteriorating, elk-wise, since the

BLOOD PRESSURE

It is perfectly normal for an individual's blood pressure to vary from time to time according to the Idaho Medical Association.

It may rise during excitement and drop when a person is at rest. Blood pressure is the pressure put on the walls of the arteries as the heart pumps blood through them.

For some people, this pressure remains at higher levels than it should. This is called hypertension, and about five million people in the United States have it.

Continued high blood pressure overworks the heart and circulatory system and reduces their ability to work as well as they should.

Hypertension sometimes causes no symptoms, and only a physician can tell when it is present. Treatment can do a great deal to control it.

forage is growing out of reach. Game department and forest service workers are burning some of the critical winter areas to stem the tide, but it is doubtful if this range improvement by fire will go fast enough to hold the big elk herds.

"Death By Ounces"

"Death by Ounces" is the title of the 1972 edition of The Travelers Insurance Companies book on highway accident statistics. The 'ounces' are the 80 proof variety.

Consumption of such drinks by motorists in the United States in 1971 caused death for 27,000 men, women and children and injuries for 2,350,000 others, according to statistics in the book.

All studies undertaken so far point up that alcohol taken in any amount immediately before driving impairs the operator's ability to some degree. This has long been recognized in many foreign countries and is reflected in extremely stringent legislation, notably in the Scandinavian nations.

Finland, for instance, jails a person caught driving with any detectable trace of alcohol in his blood. Even with no accident involvement, he faces up to 5 months' imprisonment.
