HIGH COST OF LIVING

They say the cost of living is too high. But there are things you cannot buy. You cannot buy a mother's loving care; You cannot buy a life to share; You cannot buy a child's prayer; Nor can you pay a friend to care. Upon a smile there is no price. And it costs nothing to say something nice. If one does not like to share, And does not really for others care. If you do not enjoy giving; Then you are not living; If you do not have the things, You cannot buy, Then the cost of living is too high!

Supermarket Know-How

Smart shoppers know items are placed in the supermarket in such a way as to increase their sales. Knowing this you are better able to resist pressures to overspend your budget.

A market list is the first step in curtailing impulse buying, suggests Esther H. Wilson extension nutrition specialist, U. of I. cooperative extension service. Shop once a week or as seldom as possible and after a meal. It has been proven you buy more when you are hungry.

Mass display suggests bargains. Check in the section the item came from to see if another article might be less expensive. You are more likely to impulse buy items from a large display than those from the regular shelf.

Imagine a large display of luscious grapes spilling over. You reach out and an unplanned item goes into your cart.

Bright, colorful signs suggest certain items are at lower prices. Again, check. It pays to know prices well enough so you can tell if "special" are real.

Staples and loss leaders are placed so you must walk over most of the store to find them. This encourages you to pick up other items as you walk by.

Tie-in sales are used to tempt you to select two items in place of one. Eye level placement works best to tempt you to pick up new and impulse type items.

Multiple pricing causes you to select more items instead of one. Buying three heads of lettuce is a waste of money if you can only eat two before they spoil.

Aroma from the bakery often makes your mouth water and you add another unplanned item.

Items are often placed near the check-out counter to entice you to select one while you wait in line.

Shop alone. When children and husband are along they may encourage you to overspend your budget. You don't want to appear the ogre who always says no to anything they want.

Buying non-food items in the supermarket often causes you to overspend cautions Mrs. Wilson. To stay within the budget the homemaker must be aware of the many methods used in supermarkets to increase their sales-mass displays; bright, colorful signs; tie-in sales; shelf and store placement; loss leaders; multiple pricing; and aroma.

Check Charities Before You Give

Many businesses and individuals decide early in the year the amount they plan to give to charitable organizations.

But before you decide on which organizations to contribute to, check out various charities to be sure your money actually goes for the purpose you intend rather than into administrative or fund raising costs. The number of charities asking

TETANUS IMMUNIZATION

With the advent of milder weather, most Idahoans are getting out doors more, and it is a good time to see that your tetanus immunization is up to date, reminds the Idaho Medical Association.

A minor cut or scratch could be major if tetanus producing spores are involved and farm, yard and garden chores increase the exposure.

The spores lie dormant in the soil of gardens, the dirt in garages, and even in the dust in homes. They can infect the victim through the smallest wound—a pin scratch, a bee sting, or a minor cut.

The first signs of tetanus infection are irritability and restlessness. Muscles rapidly become rigid, eventually causing a clenched-jaw that gives tetanus its nickname "lockjaw."

Once symptoms appear, the outlook is poor, even with the best treatment.

The best protection against tetanus is from a garden scratch; animal bite or small cut, is immunization with tetanus toxoid.

A booster is needed every five years and whenever there is an injury. Adults need protection as much as children.

Don't be caught without this immunization.

I only wish my great, great, grandchildren could be here to see all the incredible things the government is doing with their money.

Everyday is judgement day—Use a lot of it.

for contributions has become so extensive that it is impossible for the average person to check on the majority of them.

In some cases, administrative cost may run as low as four to five per cent. In others, the cost may well run over 25 percent which is the recommended amount suggested by reputable professional fund raisers, according to Ruth Spidahl, state home economics leader, U. of I. cooperative extension service.

Recommended standards for judgment might be: (1) reasonable fund raising and administrative costs (2) full financial disclosure (3) active governing board serving without pay (4) effective work toward legitimate purpose, with no duplication of effort (5) accepted promotion and fund raising practices.

Here are some ways you can learn more about a charity:

—Write directly to the national office of a charity and ask for a report that shows what percentage of the funds raised actually goes to beneficiaries.

—Consult the Council of Better Business Bureau Solicitations Review Station, 1150 17th Street NW, Washington, D. C. 20036.

—Check with your city and state government as some form of registration or licensing often is required.

If you can't get the information that answers your questions maybe you should consider donations to those who do satisfy your criteria, Ms. Spidahl suggests.

They Did It the Hard Way

You can't hear the stories of the early settler and not have an abiding admiration for their steadfastness and endurance.

They were all too familiar with hard times and toll. Some barely spoke the language but they struggled and withstood hardship, strengthened by their hope in this new land.

It was better times for their kids and grandkids that lured them, and the dream came true. Half the people you meet out here have roots that go back to those days. The man-killing work of the frontier has been replaced by rewarding careers and fulfilling livelihoods.

Energy that magnifies man's muscle power made it possible, and more energy will have to be found to provide for the needs of the upcoming generations.

At The Washington Water Power Company supplying this energy is about our most serious concern. We think, that with everyone's understanding and cooperation the job can be done.

Scout Exposition

Latah county Scout Exposition was held Friday March 9 at the Moscow Jr. high school Field House.

There were many skills and activities displayed for everyone to enjoy while they tried their skills at the different ones.

The Genesee cub pack displayed their skill at Origami, which is the Japanese art of folding paper into many different shapes and designs. There were paper swans, paper pin wheels, paper balloons, paper wolf heads, paper dolls and several other paper forms.

Boy Scout troop 352 had a box hockey which was a big attraction. The spectators enjoyed the action as much as those participating in the game.

The Genesee pack and troop both brought home blue ribbons for their booths. They were judged on the appearance of the booth; the continuous activity going on in the booth and how well it is organized.

Thanks to all who helped get the booths ready and helped clean up.

Among the many booths was a pine wood derby where the boys could bring their cars and compete them against the other boys in our district. John Burnett was the only boy from Genesee who remembered to bring his car. He was cheered on to bring home fourth place honors. We are real proud of you John!
