She said that the response from ever relative they may have been in an earlier brochure had resulted in some other meeting, served to divert about 20 applications for the school and lull the audience. Taylor asked for any other questions, there was a brief silence and then he declared the meeting adjourned.

What follows is editorial opinion:

It is unfortunate that meeting ended so abruptly with so many questions still unanswered. This is not ducted the session smoothly and who actually had no other choice than to peared to be no immediate questions cause it was they who called the meeting and both discussed their olans freely.

Those who had come to the meeting did have questions - this is certain - for they were being asked as the people filed from the cafeteria that evening. Why the questions weren't raised that evening can only be a matter of conjecture. Perhaps the meeting did end too quickly before a rapport could be developed. Perhaps it was just the natural republic and make a statement or ask a question. Whatever the reason, sion did not acomplish what it should have—the questions and the uncertainty still exist.

If there is sufficient interest, another meeting might be in order, this time excluding the Latah and Nez Perce planners who proved to be too tempting a target for questions that were unrelated to the local issue. And, perhaps if the audience were to submit written questions in advance to be asked by a moderator a more representative opinion could be ob-

WAFT A WHIFF For the best of April's perfume Relax in a flower-filled room, Or saunter under trees in bloom Where the early honey-bees zoom. Find a field of bright daffodils Or clumps of blossoms on the hills. Narcissus, crocus all donate A fragrance sample while you wait,

Even green grass seems to send out.

A fresh aroma all about. Inhale the delicious spring air And the scent of violets there. It's a feeling forever pleasing Unless allergies have you sneezing. Lucille Magnuson
