Watch Out For Sunburn !!

There is a simple truth that thousands of sun-worshippers learn at the expense of great pain and discomfort each year: A golden tan can not be acquired during your first day on the beach.

To get a tan without pain, begin your first day with about 15 to 20 minutes of exposure each on your face and back. Then extend your time in the sun each day.

Increase exposure by one third the second day, another third the third day and so on.

Painful burns can be caused by wind as well as sun, and it is possible to burn yourself severely on cloudy days.

Besides burning, too much sun can also cause sunstroke or heat prostration.

Long overexposure to the rays of the sun has been known to cause coarsening of the skin, so take it easy this summer suggests the Idaho Medical Association.

In a week you should have sufficient tan to protect your self from burning.

ARE YOU NUTS?

By Roger Williams
Mention spending a weekend camping and friends are likely to respond with "You've got to be kidding! It's still cold in the hills."

Of course, they are right, but there is no reason camping should be limited to the weekends between Memorial Day and Labor Day. With a few adjustments in equipment, cool weather camping has definite advantages.

When you really think about it, that mid-July camping trip when you got your line tangled with that of another fisherman in the next boat, fought off mosquitoes and came home with a nose like a beet, wasn't all that great.

In Idaho, early May finds the hill country still trying to unlock itself from winter, but the new green of spring is there. Hells Canyon is at its most beautiful about now. Later, temperatures will rise well over 100 degrees.

Cool weather camping means taking most things that are included on a summer camping trip, plus a few extras. With a bit of planning, summer gear can fit into cool weather camping simply by changing the way the gear is used.

For example, air mattresses should replace folding cots. The mattresses between the sleeping bag and the ground will give more insulation in the cooler months than will the cot.

Leave the pajamas at home during cold weather. Substitute quilted underwear for cozy sleeping when the temperatures plunge at night. A lightweight catalytic heater helps to warm a tent when early spring temperatures go below freezing.

Rain gear becomes more important for early spring campers, and those who plan ahead will include a hooded poncho. A versatile piece of camp gear, the poncho can be transformed into a makeshift shelter for stream side fishing, ground cloth for those spots where snow still sticks or a cover for an air mattress.

A skier's headband or knit cap is the best cool weather head gear if a camper is annoyed by cold ears. The hats that keep out the rain also keep in the heat, and sweat, mostly offsetting their good points.

Supplement the warmth of summer weight sleeping bag with a liner. An old comforter can be folded inside a light sleeping bag to give it that little extra warmth a camper needs in the spring. A word of caution: don't use Army blankets as liners; they add bulk but not much warmth.

Planning cool weather camping means discarding containers that will not keep liquids piping hot although the ice chest should stay in the car. It will keep foods fresher until you are ready to cook them.

Picking a campsite becomes a little more important in the spring.

Check tree limbs over the tent site carefully; limbs almost broken by snow during the winter can come crashing down on a tent if the wind rises.

Further attention to selecting the site itself is necessary in the spring. Look at how your prospective site drains. Some nice looking spots turn into bogs or small rivers when the early spring sun begins to melt snow. Camp well uphill from streams that may rise quickly with spring runoff.

While trees are extremely important for shade in the middle of the summer, cool weather campers pick campsites with an eye to using trees as windbreaks and taking advantage of the warmth of the sun in small clearings.

And when you break camp, pack all of your gear back into the car, drive away about 50 feet, then stop and get out of the car so you can take one last look around.

Often this trick will save you a lost piece of expensive equipment or keep you from leaving litter in the new green grass.

LEAVE THE BABIES ALONE

The latter part of May and the first part of June is the time of year when the fawn deer and calf elk are born. Every year young people, as well as adults, let their emotions get the best of them when they find these young animals. The animals are handled, molested and in most cases taken home or dropped off at a fish and game officer's home or at the nearest fish and game office.

First of all, it is against the law to handle, molest or take these animals home. They are sometimes left alone for several hours by their mother in the woods but after handled or moved by someone, a mother will often not accept them again.

If you pick it up and take it home what you are actually doing is signing the animal's death certificate. Survival of fawns in captivity is low due to changes in the diet. Zoos are full of deer and have no desire for any more. Even those that are raised still end up as a problem because they are not equipped to survive like a true wild creature.

IT HAPPENED WAY BACK WHEN

50 Years Ago Genesee News

Ernest, Violet, Eva and Ethel Qualey attended the picnic at Felton's mill Sunday.—Lawrence, Ernest and Theresa Kraut and Dorothy Erickson motored to Felton's mill Sunday to attend a picnic.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Broemelng were in attendance at the Uniontown Stock Show Wednesday and were not only interested in the livestock show but when it comes to foot races they showed some speed that was a surprise to some of the entrants. The four "R's", Rose, Rachel, Ralph and Robert, each took first place in the races they entered and, as a result, brought home $8 in good money.

John (Curly) Sullivan, who, last spring passed his 82nd birthday anniversary has spent 46 years of that time in the Genesee section and says this is one of the wettest springs he has seen since the year of his arrival here, which was the 13th of June, 1879.

Miss Esther Danielson, daughter of Mrs. Annie Danielson and John Elkum, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Elkum, motored to Lewiston Wednesday and were married in that city.

The members of the Genesee Rebekahs lodge were delightfully entertained by Mrs. Mary Burr at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anton Halverson at Lewiston Friday evening of last week.

Leland News: Pfc. Howard Hoffman has arrived from Camp Roberts, Calif. to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hoffman. Also visiting at the Hoffman home this week are their other children, Allan Hoffman and Mrs. Hugh Malone and baby son of Spokane. Allan has been called for induction June 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Craig and daughters of Portland, Mrs. Orval Walker and sons of Lewiston and Mrs. Lawrence Larson of Spokane were Monday dinner guests at the O. A. Walker home.

A deal was closed Tuesday whereby Mrs. Ross Armitage became the owner of the Kendrick Beauty Shop

ROAD SPRAY CREWS TO START SPRAYING WEEDS

Road spray crews are getting geared up to start spraying roads in Latah County for noxious weeds.

"Please give the men a break when you meet them on the road," requests Homer Putter, county weed supervisor. Spraying on the roads is a hazardous job with traffic going by at 55 miles per hour. With the sprayer running, and watching for at least ten kinds of noxious weed, it is not a job for a nervous person.

Every year we hear complaints of the crews spraying with a wind blowing. With the hundreds of miles of roads to cover in a very short period of time, it is necessary to spray even on days with undesirable wind. We just don't have enough windless days to get the job done. It is possible to spray in open road area by spraying into the wind and using care.

gress between Kendrick and Troy looking toward a post-war highway between these 2 points. It appears that the Federal government will put up 62 percent of required money, the remaining 38 percent to be expended by the state and local highway districts. Also prospects appeared excellent for improvements of the road between Kendrick and
