School Openings Decrease Area Unemployment

The start of classes at the areas schools resulted in a considerable number of idled workers returning to their jobs. This factor, coupled with returning students, combined to reduce the number of persons claiming unemployment insurance benefits through the Moscow office of the Idaho Department of Employment. Frank J. Hartstein, Moscow office manager, reported today that the total number of jobless pay claimants declined from 413 a week ago to a current figure of 389. 28 persons filed new claims during the week, he said, primarily newcomers into the area. Despite the decline from the previous week, the total number of persons seeking benefits is more than double the 191 who were seeking such grants a year ago. In the immediate Moscow area, the number dropped from 267 to 245, where many of the new claims were filed, compared with 134 a year ago. In the Troy-Deary-Bovill area, the total dropped from 71 to 64, but was far above the 19 of last year. In Potlatch, a slight increase was noted from 49 to the present 55 again more than double last year's figure of 23. The Genesee area remained stable with 12 now, 13 last week and 11 a year ago. The figures for the Kendrick area are 13, 13 and 4. Hartstein said he expected another decline next week, then a leveling off before the bad weather causes increased unemployment.

16 workers found jobs during the week through his office, Hartstein added. This is down slightly from the previous week but compares favorably with last Labor Day week when 15 workers were successfully sent on job interviews. 18 jobs still remained open at the end of the week in the Moscow area. Included were a Grant's writer, secretarial jobs, cafe workers and domestic workers, as well as some farm jobs.

Eyestrain Is Really Fatigue

People are often concerned about "eyestrain," although most physicians agree that there is no such thing.

There is eye fatigue, however it is not often serious, according to the Idaho Medical Association.

More than half of all Americans have something wrong with their eyes, and about 40 per cent of them wear glasses.

Despite the importance of vision, most people do not really know what is good or bad for their eyes.

Glasses may improve vision, but they do not cure defects.

Nothing, not even eating carrots, can cure nearsightedness.

Loss of vision can be gradual—so gradual that a person fails to realize what is happening.

Early treatment can be important, according to ophthalmologists, medical doctors specializing in eye care.

Regular examinations, and check-ups, when you not any changes or irregularities can help your ophthalmologist discover difficulties before they become severe.

Bird Seasons

This fall's upland game bird hunting regulations will show some of the effects of a poor 1974 pheasant season.

The department reported to the Fish and Game Commission that the state's most important upland game bird is continuing its downhill slide. The 1974 harvest was one of the poorest on record and was 24 percent below the 1973 harvest. Last fall's harvest was 34 percent below the 5-year average.

"A declining habitat throughout the major pheasant range brought about by urban sprawl, clean farming sprinkler irrigation expansion, land leveling and other developments in agriculture have brought the populations down" the department told the Commission.

Commissioners approved the following changes in this fall's pheasant seasons:

—No hen season this year.
—Reduce the daily bag limit from 4 to 3 cocks and the possession limit from eight to six in all areas that had a 4-bird bag limit last year.

—Reduce bag and possession limit to 2 cocks the whole season on C. J. Strike and Fort Boise Wildlife Management Areas in Owyhee and Canyon counties.

Hun chukar and quail seasons remain the same as last fall but Bonneville County's season will be the same as Clark, Fremont, Jefferson and Madison counties.

This means a 35-day reduction in Bonneville County. There was no change in the forest grouse seasons but sage grouse season was changed in two areas. Washington County west of U. S. Highway 95 was closed and five days were added to the season in the Pahsimeroi and Big Lost River drainages.

Dove season will run from September 1 to 14. There were no changes in the turkey or rabbit seasons.

Waterfowl Seasons

Last falls better than average duck and goose hunting seems to be headed for a repeat this fall.

Hunter questionnaires showed harvests up 19 percent over 1973 for ducks and 33 percent over the 1974's duck hunters, and goose harvests 1973 figures.

Commissioners approved a recommendation for a 100-day season on ducks in the Columbia Basin Mallard Area and a 93-day season in the rest of the state. Opening dates will be October 4, with a daily bag limit of 7 and a possession limit of 14.

Goose season will open October 4 and close January 4, 1976 in the 16 northern Idaho counties; October 11 through December 14 east of U. S. Highway 93; and October 11 to December 28 west of U. S. Highway 93.

The bag limit was set at 3 geese with a possession limit of six with no more than two Canada geese in southern Idaho.

Trapping Seasons

Strong fur prices are reflected in the increase in the number of trapping licenses sold in Idaho.

One change in this year's trapping regulations will be shorter fox trapping season on private land in Valley County where the season will begin a month later than on Forest Service land.

On private land, the season runs from December 1 to January 31, but on public land the season will be from November 1 to January 31 in Valley County.

In a summary of changes in trapping regulations, the department remains to discover difficulties before they become severe.

Aspirin May Be Antisocial

The aspirin that relieves one person's cold symptoms may help spread the infection to others.

Tests conducted by researchers at the University of Illinois showed some surprising results. Even the investigators were astounded. When a person who already has a cold takes aspirin, the amount of viruses in their nasal secretions actually increases.

People catch colds by inhaling the droplets expelled by cold-sufferers who do not cover their nose and mouth when they sneeze or cough. If they also take aspirin, they may be even more of a menace.

The research on the subject was done by infecting healthy medical students with two rhinoviruses, two of the hundreds of viruses that cause the common cold. For 8 days, some of the volunteers received aspirin to treat the infection, while others received a dummy pill. The results showed that those receiving aspirin had a moderate reduction in the frequency and severity of symptoms. They were able to stay out of bed longer than the other group. But they also showed higher amounts of viruses in secretions from their noses.

Why this should be baffles the researchers who published their results in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. They suggest that aspirin somehow interferes with the body's defense system against viruses. But more research will have to explore the reasons how and why.

Genesee, Kendrick Students Pledge UI Fraternities

Moscow—Over 200 men have pledged 18 national fraternities on the UI campus during summer and early fall rush.

During the coming weeks other pledges will be named, according to Bruce Pitman, UI Greek advisor.

Among the students are Wayne Jensen, Delta Chi, Genesee; and Jeff Czrnowski, Farm House; Mark Mus-toe, Pi Kappa Alpha and Bob Parks, Pi Kappa Alpha, all of Kendrick.

One of the first things one notices in a so-called backward country is that children are still obeying their parents.

PULL-TAB ON BEVERAGE CAN

Don't drop the pull-tab from a beverage can back into the can until the container is empty, suggests the Idaho Medical Association. You might swallow the tab.

The chances of swallowing or inhaling a pull-tab are small, but the potential hazard can be completely eliminated by waiting until the container has been emptied before dropping the tab into the can. Put it in your pocket or toss it in a waste basket.

Two Chicago physicians report on two cans in which individuals accidentally swallowed tabs. In a third instance it was inhaled.

One of the swallowed tabs was retrieved by an instrument inserted into the esophagus, while the other passed through the digestive tract. The inhaled tab required surgery for removal.

The physician's problem in such cases is complicated by the fact that the tin aluminum tab shows up only faintly on an x-ray, and can be easily overlooked.

The Permanent, Floating Pollution Game

The search for a pollution solution is hitting snags.

Industries complain that clean fuel and control devices are too costly. Times are tough. Why not relax air quality standards and let our lungs suffer a little?

As a cheaper substitute and a way to circumvent present laws, major polluters like coal-fired electric power plants and steel mills are proposing to build tall smoke-stacks to disperse the pollution, especially sulfur dioxide. The stacks would be gigantic, twice the height of the Washington Monument. When adverse conditions like stagnant air developed, says these industries, production would be curtailed or the facility would switch to lower-sulfur fuels.

The proposals sound sensible but has dangerous loopholes. The most important drawback of dispersing pollution is the increased health risk from loading the atmosphere with sulfur compounds. When sulfur dioxide is released, especially from tall stacks, much of it is transformed to sulfates which are extremely dangerous to plant, animal and human life. Sulfates can be formed hundreds of miles from the sulfur dioxide pollution source.

For example, it is now thought that sulfates in East Coast cities may be caused by power plants as far away as the Midwest. Today, virtually the entire eastern half of the country suffers from a sulfate level that the Environmental Protection Agency believes high enough to aggravate respiratory disease.

Help your Idaho Lung Association, 2621 Camas Street, Boise Id. 83705, the Christmas Seal people find a real pollution solution.

Self-Help Medicine

New attitudes toward medicine are taking shape. The passive patient is on the way out. The "activated" patient is now appearing.

The activated patient is a partner in his or her own health care. At some health centers, for instance, patients and health professionals draw up a personal health plan for patients and allow them access to medical records. A patient's bill of rights has just become law in Minnesota. One of the major provisions is that patients receive complete information about their treatment.

Courses teaching people how to be activated patients are cropping up around the country. Georgetown University is one of the colleges that offers courses to teach people how to check their own blood pressure and breathing rates and how to change to more healthful lifestyles.

Someday soon people may keep their own medical records of symptoms, illnesses and immunizations. Even elementary school children, health educators hope, may chart their own record and learn the idea that symptoms of illness are really the body talking with a special language.

Changing habits and taking responsibility for staying as well as possible could revolutionize the patient picture in this country. Take the habit of cigarette smoking, as one example. Ninety percent of chronic bronchitis and emphysema is self-induced by cigarette smoking. So is 90 percent of lung cancer. And a third of all heart disease.

Too many of us missed out on health education in school or went to health classes taught by a distracted coach. But it's not too late to start learning. Take the first step and contact the Idaho Lung Association, 2621 Camas Street, Boise, Id. 83705, the "Christmas Seal" people.
