Referendum Not Necessary On Juliaetta Water Rates Says City's Attorney

In an opinion by Glen G. Utzman, attorney for the City of Juliaetta, the council is not bound by law to submit to vote its action which raised the water rates August 1. Utzman's opinion on the subject was made public this week by Juliaetta Mayor Harold Freeman.

Citing a previous Idaho case as a precedent, Utzman stated in his letter that when the voters approved the water-sewer bond issue in May and November of 1974, it created a contractual obligation between the city and the bondholders to operate the water-sewer system so as to provide sufficient revenue to pay the cost of operation, maintenance, and redemption. He also cited sections of the ordinance which require the city to set these sufficient rates.

After receiving this opinion, Freeman said the council will not take any further action on the petition calling for a reduction in water rates. The complete text of Utzman's letter was as follows:

September 9, 1975
 The Honorable Mayor and City Council
 City of Juliaetta
 Juliaetta, Idaho 83535
 RE: Opinion on Water Rate Ordinance

You have requested an opinion as to whether or not the recently passed water rate ordinance is subject to the initiative-referendum statute of the Idaho Code.

Section 50-501 Idaho Code provides that the City Council of each City shall provide for direct legislation by the people through the initiative or referendum, or both, when petitioned by a number of qualified electors equal to twenty percent (20%) of the total number of electors, registered to vote at the last general City election. The City Council shall then submit to the people at a special election the question of whether or not an initiative ordinance or referendum ordinance shall be passed. The language of the code is broad and the statute itself does not provide for any exceptions to this initiative-referendum procedure.

However, on two previous occasions, November 7, 1972 and May 14, 1974, the voters of the City of Juliaetta approved the issuance of water-sewer revenue bonds as provided in Ordinance No. 168 and 179. This action by the voters created a contractual obligation between the City and bond holders, upon the issuance of the bonds, to operate the water-sewer system in a manner so that sufficient revenues would be generated to pay for the costs of operation, maintenance and redemption of the bonds and interest. In fact, Section 9 of Ordinance No. 168 and 179 specifically require the City Council to set water and sewer rates in an amount so that sufficient revenues can be generated to pay for the costs of operation, maintenance and bond and interest redemption.

The Idaho Court has recognized this contractual obligation on the part of the City in Swain v. Fritchman, 21 Idaho 783, 125 P. 519, where the Court held that ordinances making annual tax levies and appropriations, and this would include rate setting ordinances such as in this case, are not to be submitted to a referendum vote.

Therefore, it is my opinion that the ordinance establishing the water rate in pursuance of the contractual obligations as created by Ordinances 168 and 179 and approved by the voters in passing the water-sewer bond issue on May 14, 1974 and November 7, 1972, is not an ordinance to which Section 50-501 Idaho Code applies, and, therefore, is not subject to the initiative-referendum procedures as set forth therein. The passing of the water rate ordinance was merely an administrative action upon the part of the City Council fulfilling their obligations created by Ordinances No. 168 and 179.

Sincerely,
 GLENN G. UTZMAN

SELDOM SEEN BIRD CRASHES INTO JULIAETTA WINDOW

Upon investigating a loud crash, Mrs. Geo. Eggers found a belted Kingfisher had flown against the large front window and lay dead. The neighborhood boys and Mrs. Eggers got the bird book and identified the bird by the size, color, bill and crested head. It was interesting that only one was lost on State Street. A few days before, a sparrow knocked itself unconscious against the other window.

Rev. F. C. Schmidt Burial Services Held In Kendrick

Rev. Frederick C. Schmidt, 89, retired minister, died September 9, 1975 at Madison South Nursing Home in Spokane. Before his retirement, he served the Juliaetta and Kendrick Methodist Churches, made his home in Kendrick, and was loved and respected by all who knew him.

Born in Renville, Minn., and educated at Hamline University, he married Emma Joy Fredrick in 1917 and she assisted him in his ministry until her death in 1966. Returning from France after World War I, he was ordained a Congregational minister with pastorates at Warroad, Roosevelt and Bankton, Minnesota.

In 1938 he was called by the Tsimpshean Indians to serve the William Duncan Memorial Church at Metlakatla, Alaska. In 1949 he became pastor at the Lapwai Indian Mission and a few years later moved to Kendrick, where he served the Kendrick and Juliaetta Methodist Churches, retiring in 1956. The Metlakatlans asked him to return to Metlakatla for two more years during a time of transition. Retiring again to Kendrick, he was called to Finley, Wash. for a year. Following that, the Kendrick congregation again asked him to serve. He retired permanently in 1961.

The historic mission that Rev. Schmidt served so long at Metlakatla, Alaska, was begun by William Duncan who entered the area in the early days of Alaska from England via British Columbia. Rev. Schmidt was the first ordained missionary to follow Mr. Duncan. During his pastorate he was instrumental in the remodeling of the church, called "The Westminister Abby of Alaska", the building of a new nave, and the preservation of Mr. Duncan's home, currently being restored as a major museum. In 1947 Mr. Schmidt organized the tour of the famous 32-voice Duncan Choir on a 28-day tour of the entire West Coast, concluding with a recording session at the RCA studios in Los Angeles.

Survivors include a son, Warren, Spokane, Wash., several sisters and a brother in Chicago, a sister in Minn., and three granddaughters.

Graveside services were held Saturday, September 13 at the Kendrick Cemetery with Rev. Steven Caskey officiating.

The family suggest remembrance gifts be made to Rev. F. C. Schmidt Memorial Fund, Board of Elders, William Duncan Memorial Church, Metlakatla, Alaska, 99926.

Bulldogs Rip Tigers 34-0 At Genesee Saturday Night

Kendrick's Tigers and Genesee's Bulldogs battled on almost even terms for the first half of their football game Saturday night at Genesee, but in the second half the strength of the GHS line and the fine passing of Bulldog quarterback Dan Stout proved more than the Tigers could handle and Genesee sent their visitors back down the hill with the short end of a 34-0 score. It was the second victory in three starts for the Bulldogs and dropped the Tigers to a 1-2 record.

Mike Boe's opening kick off was brought back to the 30 by Genesee who then picked up five yards through the middle but couldn't get any more yardage and punted out of bounds and the Tigers took over on the GHS 40. Rick Steigers cracked off tackle for one yard, Doug Christensen picked up another three before he was stopped with a crunching tackle by Bulldog back Don Smith. Split back Ron Maynard picked up a first down to the GHS 21. Steigers banged it down to the 12 and there the Bulldog line stiffened and Doug Christensen's 4th down run was stopped at the line and the Bulldogs took over. Stout, trying for breathing room, brought the ball out three yards on a keeper play, but on the next

Kendrick FHA Chapter Off To a Busy Season

The Kendrick FHA chapter has had a busy beginning this year. To begin our year Tammy Armitage attended National Convention in Washington, D. C., and upon her return this summer, the members established a file system for the Lions Club Birthday Calendar.

Measurements have been taken for us to make sheets for the stretcher for the Community Ambulance.

A meeting was held after Tammy's return from State Executive Council and plans were made for the year coming up.

FHA week was held during the first week of school with such activities as Red and White Day, Poster Day and, to end the week, we passed out cookies to the student body.

We are all excited about a project to make quilt squares for our Bicentennial quilt that will be presented to the governor.

Employment Figures Start to Stabilize

Employment activities remained stable in Latah county during the past week. Frank Hartstein, Moscow office manager for the Idaho Department of Employment, said his office found work for 18 county workers during the week. This was two more than the week before. Continued harvesting operations accounted for some of the jobs, while others went into the trades and service industries. Cafe workers and retail trades workers were hired to care for the arrival of students during the past couple of weeks, he said. At the end of the week there were 23 jobs still open in the area. These include some technical and professional positions, secretarial and bookkeeping jobs, mechanical work, as well as jobs in the trades, services and private house holds.

The number of persons seeking jobless pay declined sharply from the previous weeks' total of 389 to a current figure of 321. This decline was noted, despite the fact that 33 persons filed new claims during the week. Most of those who discontinued claims had either returned to classes or returned to work in school related activities. Those filing new claims were primarily new arrivals in the area, although a few were local people who had become unemployed for a variety of reasons. The decline was noted in all areas of the county. At Moscow the drop was from 245 to 211, but still nearly double last year's figure of 118. In the Troy-Deary-Bovill area, the reduction was from 64 to 48, but a year ago there were only 20. 42 persons continued to seek benefits from the Potlatch area, down from last week's 55, but more than twice as many as last year's 20. At Genesee the current figure is 9, last week 12, and last year 11. In the Kendrick area, the current total is 11, a week ago it was 13 and in mid-September 1974 only four persons from that area were seeking jobless pay. Hartstein predicted that the total would remain about the same for a while, then rise with the onset of inclement weather. Some rumors are "floating about," he said indicating a drastic curtailment of logging operations throughout North Idaho. Nothing definite has been established as yet, but many workers are becoming frightened of a "long, hard, winter," he reported.

Suddenly — It's Fall In Idaho

Suddenly, it's fall in Idaho. Days are shorter . . . nights are nippy and campgrounds are becoming the forte of late fishermen and big-game hunters.

Fall in Idaho also brings an abundant harvest of things to do—just for the fun of it. The Idaho Division of Tourism and Industrial Developments calendar of events is just off the press and will help in planning activities.

The Freedom Train will be in Idaho October 15-16 at Boise, where thousands will have the opportunity to view the heritage that made this nation great.

In keeping with the state's agrarian economy an all Bonner County Bazaar will be held at Sandpoint, October 24-25. The Festival of Food and Family Living will be staged in Boise September 26-28 and Idaho Falls will host the Rocky Mountain Craft Fair October 3-5. Sailing enthusiasts are sure to be interested in the last South Idaho Sailing Regatta scheduled September 27-28, at C. J. Strike Reservoir, just out of Mountain Home. Sun Valley will stage a symposium on Native American Thought and the Future of America, October 3-4-5.

Football is in full swing with collegiate teams vying for selection as bowl favorites.

Music is once again coming to the fore with the Northwest Opera Co. performing at Twin Falls, October 13-14 and the Sweet Adelines giving their annual concert in Pocatello, November 1st.

It would be interesting to hear today's teen-agers tell their children what they had to do without.

Parliaments of Owls and Gams of Whales

By Royce Williams
Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game

Everyone has heard of a litter of pups, and a flock of sheep is something almost anybody understands, but a leap of leopards? A skulk of foxes?

What yard is not invaded each fall by a murmuration of starlings?

What waterfowl hunter does not wish for a gaggle of geese, or, even better, a skein of the big birds? The difference seems to be whether the geese are on the ground or flying.

In his new book titled, "An Exaltation of Larks or The Venerable Game," James Lipton makes the modest proposal that we should not lose to "the hostile environment of our TV-tabloid world," the descriptions of animals that have come to us through the ages.

"Before it is too late I would like to propose a language sanctuary, a wild word refuge. . . one of our most precious natural resources. It deserves at least as much protection as our woodlands, streams and whooping cranes," Lipton writes.

Lipton divides terms used for animal groups into six families:

—Onomatopoeia, which is based on the sounds animals seem to make. The murmuration of starlings and gaggles of geese fit here.

—Characteristic, such as the leap of leopards or a skulk of foxes. This is by far the largest family, Lipton says.

—Appearance. What could a group of toads be except a knot of toads? A bouquet of pheasants describes those beautiful birds.

—Habitat class would include such things as a shoal of bass or a nest of rabbits.

—Comment, pro or con depending upon the observer's point of view would include a richness of martens, a cowardice of curs.

—Errors take in such things as a translator's mistake. For example: a shoal of fish became a school of fish.

If we take Lipton seriously, it does make writing about animals more colorful.

For example:

In a walk across an Idaho farm recently, we noticed a swarm of bees, a brood of hens, a string of ponies, a covey of partridges, a colony of ants, a murder of crows, a kindle of kittens, a raft of turkeys, a pace of asses, a peep of chickens, a paddling of ducks, a rag of colts, a trip of goats, a drove of cattle and a sounder of swine.

Or, on a recent outing with some birdwatchers, we came across a walk of snipe, a dule of doves, a siege of herons, a cast of hawks, a tidings of magpies, a congregation of plovers, an unkindness of ravens, a building of rooks, a host of sparrows, a descent of woodpeckers, a mustering of storks, a flight of swallows, a watch of nightingales, a spring of teal, a fall of woodcocks and a whole dissimulation of birds.

Animals kept grouping themselves together and we found a business of ferrets, a bale of turtles, a hover of trout, a husk of hares, a labor of moles, a dray of squirrels and an obstinacy of buffaloes.

It was getting to be too much. We put our pomp of Pekingese and clowder of cats back into the car and drove home.

I hope, Lipton writes, that the evangelistic tone (of the book) will be forgiven and that a few of these terms will stick to our ribs.

"If they do, we will be able to turn to someone and coolly and correctly say, 'Look, a charm of finches,'" he writes.

"What is more important is that

Abandoned Pet Problem Grows

Idaho shares a growing national problem of too many abandoned pets, mostly cats and dogs.

The Labor Day weekend brought most summer vacations to an end, many pets are not returning to cities with their owners. They are left to fare for themselves in the wild and many become serious threats to wintering wildlife.

The National Wildlife Federation says household pets are being abandoned by the tens of thousands each year. The pets are being dumped at country crossroads by owners who can no longer feed the animals. Others are turned loose when their owners move into apartments that ban pets.

Pets turned wild are becoming "a menace to humans, to domesticated animals and to wildlife," the Federation reports.

"They can kill as many as 5,000 cattle in one state in a single year, as they did in Georgia three years ago," the Federation said.

Reports of wild dogs killing household pets, goats, sheep and horses are becoming more regular. And they can maim or even kill children, as many suburban police forces have learned in recent years, the Federation said.

Idaho law holds the owner of a dog responsible if any dog is found running at large and harassing game animals. Conservation officers are permitted to destroy such dogs.

The problem came to a head in Idaho last winter when hogs harassed white-tailed deer in northern Idaho's deep snow, but the problem is a charm of poetry will have quietly slipped into our lives," Lipton writes.

Chinook Loss

The department's emergency summer chinook program has been set back by 65,000 fish.

3-inch chinook smothered in a race way at the McCall Hatchery when a bio-aide failed to turn water back into the raceway after he had turned it off to increase water pressure in an adjoining raceway.

The water was turned off so that there would be enough pressure to fill a tanker truck with water for planting a load of catchable rainbows. With the flow of water cut off, the small fish had died in the stagnant water by the time the bio-aide returned from planting the rainbows.

The 65,000 fish were part of 192,576 summer chinook being held at the McCall facility. Also, there are 387,000 summer chinook at the Mackay Hatchery, 22,231 at the Eagle Hatchery and 20,000 at the Hagerman Hatchery.

When we were kids 10 cents was big money, how dimes have changed!

not limited to Idaho.

The Federation reports more than 500 white-tailed deer were killed by dogs in Pennsylvania last winter. The dogs also pick off pheasants, baby rabbits and other small animals.

Deer are especially prone to attack by dog packs in winter because the dogs can run on top of the snow crust while deer cannot, the Federation said.

Overhanging these unpleasant statistics, the Federation said, is the threat of a rabies epidemic. Life spans of abandoned dogs and cats are estimated at less than two years, but in that time most manage to produce a litter or two and the wild offspring never receive rabies shots.

An estimated 15,000 puppies and kittens for which there will never be a home are born every hour, the Federation said.
