

Mountain Pine Beetle Damage Shows Locally

The mountain pine beetle, a small, black insect capable of destroying lodgepole and ponderosa pine trees is now beginning to cause concern in the Kendrick-Juliaetta area said Fire Warden Richard Benjamin.

"If you look back on the hill between Juliaetta and Kendrick, you can see some of the trees that have already been killed by the beetles", Benjamin said.

Lodgepole pine is a dominant tree on some 60 million acres of land in the Western United States and Canada. It contributes to the scenic quality of many landscapes, borders hundreds of campsites and trails, helps protect vital watersheds, and is an increasingly important source of lumber and other forest products.

The mountain pine beetle is always present in lodgepole forests. Evidence indicates an infestation existed in the Horse Creek Drainage of Utah Territory over 180 years ago, long before the white man began to explore the Wasatch Mountains. When beetle numbers are relatively small, the quarter-inch, black insect and lodgepole trees coexist rather peacefully, but during beetle population explosion, which can occur every 20 to 40 years in a given area, hordes of beetles destroy the forest.

Beetles kill ponderosa pine, an important source of timber, as well as lodgepole. Epidemic beetle outbreaks now are occurring in forests ranging from the Black Hills of South Dakota to California. In "normal" years, the beetle kills millions of trees, but during an epidemic a single National Forest may lose more than a million trees a year.

Infestations can balloon at alarming rates. A Forest Service survey during a major buildup in '63 showed that one infected tree produced enough beetle to kill six more trees. In the Rocky Mountain States, the beetle destroys more than 5.5 billion board feet of lodgepole and ponderosa pine timber every year.

Trillite Year

Attacking beetles leave telltale sawdust in bark crevices or on the ground at the base of a tree. A few weeks after entry, fungi carried by the beetles stain wood blue just beneath the bark. This is a certain indication that the tree has been attacked and killed.

Tree needles begin to fade as early as 3 to 4 weeks after an attack but the change from healthy green to deep reddish-brown usually is not noticeable until the spring following attack. Needles drop off the tree within 2 or 3 years after the attack.

Mountain pine beetles may attack individual, scattered trees but more often entire groups of trees are killed. Unchecked, group infestations can expand with each new beetle generation, and eventually large areas may suffer extreme losses of forest cover.

The flight period lasts from late summer to early fall. Mating occurs after the female bores into the tree. Eggs hatch into small grubs, and the grubs begin to feed on the tree's phloem before hibernating for the winter. Phloem is a complex layer of living wood just beneath the bark through which ingredients of a tree's food supply are transmitted.

In spring, the grubs resume feeding and grow into pupae. By midsummer, new adults emerge from the now-dend tree and fly to living trees to launch a new 12-month beetle life cycle.

Research has shown that, in addition to the number and distribution of large diameter lodgepole phloem thickness is very important to beetles. If the phloem is thicker than one-thirtieth inch, beetles can reproduce in numbers sufficient to kill several trees. In thinner phloem, they do not thrive, and in many cases populations decrease.

The specific site of a stand of trees also is important. Beetle survival is much greater at lower-elevation sites. Beetles are less able to withstand the harsh environments at high elevations. Many other factors also influence the amount of loss caused by a mountain pine beetle infestation.

Using data accumulated over the past 14 years on beetle behavior, infestations, and control attempts, scientists at the Intermountain Forest and Range Experiment Station have developed a model of beetle population interaction with lodgepole pine stands. They also have prepared some preliminary management strategies to deal more effectively with the insect.

The Beetle at Work

Forest Service scientists and co-operators have conducted extensive research to better understand the pine beetle's lifestyle and relationship to lodgepole pine. The results show that as significant threat will continue, but that effective control measures are possible.

Studies indicate that few lodgepole pine stands in the Intermountain and Northern Rocky Mountain areas are safe from the beetle. Depending upon the characteristics of sites, from 44 to 80 percent of lodgepole stands have experienced or will experience an epidemic. Usually, an epidemic lasts from 6 to 8 years.

Unfortunately, the pine beetle attacks the most healthy, vigorous trees in a lodge pole stand. Because beetles strongly prefer larger diameter trees, losses range from 1 per cent of 4-inch diameter lodgepole to 87 per cent of trees with 6-inch or larger diameters.

When adult beetles seek new, green trees in which to mate, they search for images of large dark objects against a light background. This searching behavior helps beetle populations expand, simply because the insects find larger trees with the greatest food supplies.

Control Methods

Natural enemies of the beetle woodpeckers and several insects, become more numerous when beetle populations are high. They do not, however, provide effective control by themselves.

What about chemical controls? Studies of chemically sprayed and unsprayed infestation areas show that the beetle moved through both types of tree stands in a similar manner, killing about the same amount of lodgepole. Once an epidemic is underway, the physical difficulties of properly applying chemicals often prevent man from gaining on losses caused by the expanding insect population.

In mountain country, the difficulties include steep terrain and lack of access. Finding experienced control personnel, or training new personnel, and the sheer number of infestations often make it nearly impossible to start chemical control programs effectively.

One control possibility is to remove trees before they reach vulnerable sizes, thus eliminating or reducing the potential for beetle epidemics. Because beetle behavior is so closely tied to food supply—large diameter trees with thick phloem—logging the proper trees in a stand would reduce the food supply before the beetle becomes excessively active within the stand.

An estimated 60 percent of all emerging adult beetles come from infested trees 12 inches or larger in diameter, and 89 percent of emerging adults come from trees with 10-inch or larger diameters. Maintaining stands of lodgepole pine with trees no larger than 10 inches in diameter should restrict successful brood production and lessen epidemic potential. Managing lodgepole pine in this manner also should provide a continuous supply of timber, forest cover for recreation and watershed protection purposes, and sound wildlife habitat.

Although scientists have developed basic knowledge of beetle biology and general control techniques, there is a great need to integrate beetle control strategies into forest management practices. Existing techniques and knowledge should be perfected through experimentation and testing.

Carla Emery Moved To Spokane Hospital For Further Tests

Carla Emery was transferred Monday from Gritman hospital in Moscow to Sacred Heart Hospital in Spokane where she will undergo further tests in an attempt to diagnose an illness that has troubled her for the past five weeks.

Mrs. Emery was on a promotional tour of the country for her "Old Fashioned Recipe Book" when she was stricken in northern Illinois with what first appeared to be a heart condition. Later testing failed to confirm this and she was allowed to return to her farm home on American Ridge, shortly before Christmas.

Carla rested at her home for some time and then was admitted to the Moscow Hospital for tests. She has remained at Moscow since then but when she didn't respond to treatment properly and tests failed to pinpoint the exact nature of her illness, it was decided to transfer her to Spokane for further testing.

Until such time as Carla is able to resume her schedule of activities, plans for upcoming projects such as her radio show and summer plans for the School of Country Living, are being held in abeyance.

Late word from Mike Emery, who is with his wife in Spokane, called the Livingroom Mimeographer and reported that the first tests all proved negative. He told the office that others will be made and added that Carla might be at Sacred Heart a while longer undergoing therapy.

Coach Dick Ruark's Kendrick Freshman basketball team took its fourth win in five starts Monday night when Timberline came down and was defeated 46-25.

Kendrick wasted no time in taking control of the contest, running up 9 unanswered points in the first quarter before the visiting team could get a point on the board. Kendrick led 14-4 at the end of the first period and was never headed. The little Tigers had control of the situation 26-16 at the half.

Ed Pea led a hustling defense that held Timberline to just 10 field goals and the front three of Ken Warner, David Heppner and Steve Gustafson completely dominated both the offensive and defensive boards to contribute to the win.

Ken Warner's 14 points were high for both teams, Dave Heppner and Ed Pea each put in 10 points, Steve Gustafson 7, Brett Gertje and Kevin Harris each 2 and Pat May 1.

Robert Thomas scored 9 points for Timberline.

Juliaetta Council Appointments Made

Paul Gravelle was officially administered the oath of office of mayor of the City of Juliaetta by his retiring predecessor Harold Freeman Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the Juliaetta council.

Also taking a seat on the council for the first time was Eldon (Jody) Fey. Other members of the council are L. C. (Lude) Groseclose, Gene Taylor, and Art Boe.

Gravelle re-appointed Taylor Street Commissioner; Boe, Building and Zoning Commissioner; Groseclose, Water Commissioner, and named Fey as Commissioner of Safety, Parks, and Recreation, which includes supervision of the fire and police departments.

The council passed a resolution naming outgoing Mayor Harold Freeman as chairman of the Sewer Committee. The city is presently in the process of installing a sewage collection and treatment system and it was felt that Freeman, with his knowledge and experience of the project, would be the logical man to continue to oversee the project. Other members of the committee are Gene Taylor and Lude Groseclose.

Taylor was also elected president of the council and will act as mayor in the absence of Gravelle.

Gravelle noted that the next regular meeting of the council and engineers concerning the sewer will be next Wednesday evening, January 14. These meetings are used to review the progress of the work and approve monthly expenditures as required by law.

The council also approved an interim budget of $20,000.00 which will carry the city through until March 31 when the final budget for 1976 is prepared and approved according to Idaho law.

Sunday Storms Bring Snow

The second heavy snowstorm of the winter season swept across the region early Sunday morning, dropping almost a half-foot of snow in Kendrick and Genesee. This is the most snow the area has received since the heavy storm immediately following Thanksgiving weekend.

Despite the large amount of snow the temperatures remained around the freezing level or slightly above. The result of this was a quick melting of much of the snow and slush and water on streets and sidewalks. Travel conditions were reported poor in many sections.

Little moisture fell Monday but early Tuesday morning the snow began again and added another inch or more to what was already on the ground.

Up in Genesee and vicinity the new snow was whipped along by moderate to strong winds and caused drifting. Schools in Colton were closed by the wind and snow, but remained open in Genesee and Kendrick.

Several of the grades in the area were in poor traveling condition Tuesday morning. Several vehicles had trouble on the Southwick grade and Fix Ridge grade was snow covered and slick.

Lots of Moisture—

December rainfall on American Ridge totaled 3.48 inches it was reported Tuesday by Dick Benscoter, who maintains the figures for the Soil Conservation Service.

Almost all of the December moisture came in the form of rain. There was heavy snow late in November but this melted within a few days and there was little more of the snow until this past Sunday.

Even more moisture was recorded by Charlie Bower up on Big Bear Ridge, who reported his total for the month of December was 4.06 inches.

In Juliaetta Paul Gravelle was sworn in as mayor, replacing Harold Freeman, who had served four years and did not seek re-election. Coming in as councilmen were Jody Fey and Lude Groseclose.

Groseclose was elected to the council in November although he was already a member, being appointed by Mayor Freeman to replace Fred Clemenhagen who resigned.

In Kendrick John Deobald will be ending an eight-year career on the council and will be replaced by Jerry Brown. Wayne Harris, who was elected in November, is already a member of the council.

Monday evening in Genesee, Stan Merrill became that town's freshman council member as he was sworn into office with other re-elected councilmen, Walt Moden, Leonard Singhose, and Jerry Linehan. Singhose will also be president of the council.

Ice Safety

Thin ice can turn a winter fishing trip into a disaster, but there are some precautions ice fishermen can take to prevent a cold swim in the middle of January.

—Check the ice thickness close to shore. Cut a hole close to shore and if the ice is less than 2 inches thick, don't go farther out on the lake. —Cool of ice gives a hint about how safe it is. A clear, blue color is safest. If a green tint is showing, that's a sign of weak ice. —Always ice fish with a buddy. A fall through or on the ice means you will need some help quickly. —Two inches of ice will support 1 person on foot; 3 inches a group in single file; 7 1/2 inches a car or snow mobile; 8 inches, 2 1/2 tons; 10 inches, 3 1/2 tons; and 12 inches, 5 tons (all weights are gross).

—Ice cannot be expected to hold as much weight during alternate cold and mild weather spells. If ice is soft or slushy, it has to be twice as thick to hold the weight. —Any vehicle on the ice should move slowly. Speed creates pressure and causes ice waves that can break the ice in front of the vehicle. —When heading on ice slushy, be sure there is adequate ventilation. —Folston fumes are given off by all heaters except those that use oxygen as fuel.

Late Seasons
Although duck hunting in Idaho closes Sunday January 11, an upland game bird season does remain open until January 18.

Hun, chukar, and quail hunting continues in the Selkirk River drainage in Adams, Idaho, Lewis, Nez Perce & Valley counties down to the mouth of Sheep Creek.

The same season closing date applies to the Snake River drainage from Bannock Dam down to the Tammany Creek south of Lemhi, and John's Creek drainage above the Lake near Grangeville are regulated.

Cottontail and pygmy rabbit season remains open through February.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT

The concept of local self-government and local control over local affairs is an ingrained and desirable part of our American governmental system. Each year we hear our state politicians exclaim their belief in and support for "local control." But local control in Idaho is a myth. It doesn't exist and it never has existed.

Local self-government and local control over local affairs exists when local citizens, through their local governments, have the authority and the revenue-raising capacity to take care of their own local problems and needs without having to secure the approval of state and/or federal officials. Idaho local citizens and their local governments do not have that authority and that revenue-raising capacity. The absence of this authority and revenue-raising capacity leads to loss of local control over local affairs as the state or federal government steps in to solve local problems that local governments cannot solve because they lack the authority or funds to cope with them.

The time has come for our state politicians to stop talking about local control and to start doing something to see that local self-government becomes a reality. We need stronger local government, not stronger state and federal governments.

HYPOLYCEMIA

A condition which is quite rare, hypoglycemia (low blood sugar), frequently blamed for a wide range of discomforts for which it is not responsible, observes the IMA.

Hypoglycemia has taken the place of much of a group of psychosomatic illnesses of 14 to 20 years ago as a medical fad. Dr. Rachmiel L. Levine, Executive Medical Director of the City of Hope Medical Center, Duarte, California, wrote in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"It is undoubtedly very attractive and satisfying to believe in one plausible and scientific biological explanation for feelings of fatigue, weakness, dizzy spells and exhaustion," he said.

"This set of symptoms is such a common affliction of mankind that it begs for an explanation in terms of an easily understood chemical change in the body. The modern concept is to blame it all on the low blood sugar levels."

Low blood sugar can cause these symptoms but so can many other health problems. It has become common to treat 'hypoglycemia' with injections of adrenal cortical extracts, he said. Such extracts, said Dr. Levine, may have a placebo effect, but they are mainly helpful in producing better incomes for the manufacturers and dispensers.

"In reality, the syndrome (low blood sugar) as a cause of disability in the adult is rare, and the proper diagnosis can only be made by modern hormonal assays and tests."

There's a sign on the 12 million ton Hoover Dam which reads: "Government property—Do Not Move."

NO TWO CHILDREN ARE ALIKE

No two children are alike and parents should become unduly concerned when one walks and talks earlier, notes the IMA.

There are, however, general mileposts in a child's development:

- 1 month—Can lift chin off table.
- 2 months—Can lift chest off table.
- 3 months—Reaches for objects with out success.
- 4 months—Can sit with support.
- 5 months—Can sit on lap and grasp small objects.
- 6 months—Can sit in high chair and grasp dangling object.
- 7 months—Can sit alone.
- 8 months—Can stand with help.
- 9 months—Can stand by holding on to furniture.
- 10 months—Can creep.
- 11 months—Can walk if led by one hand.
- 12 months—Can pull up and stand with help of furniture.
- 13 months—Can climb a few stairs.
- 14 months—Can stand alone.

IRS PROVIDES FREE TAX ASSISTANCE TO LOW-INCOME AND ELDERLY

The Lewiston office of the Internal Revenue Service is seeking volunteers to help low income and elderly persons prepare their tax returns. The program, Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA), was established seven years ago to help taxpayers who cannot afford the cost of a professional return preparer but still need help in filing their return.

The volunteers will be provided with training by IRS personnel in the preparation of relatively simple tax returns. Training will run January 12 through 16 from 6:30 until 9:30 p. m. at the Lewiston IRS office, 1618 Idaho Street.

Any individual or organization interested in helping with VITA should

The Farmer's Slice.

He gets the revenue from about 3 slices in a loaf of 18 slices. So very little of the retail food prices you pay gets back to the farmer.

In fact, there is only about 5 1/2¢ worth of wheat in a 35¢ one pound loaf.* Much of the cost for bread goes for other things. Packaging, shipping and the middlemen between the farmer and the supermarket shelf. Added all up it accounts for 85% of the retail price.

On products with a high degree of processing, farmers receive very little of the retail cost. Even if wheat farmers gave their wheat away, a loaf of bread still would cost 29 1/2 cents.

The farmer's slice. It's not as big as it once was.

HEART DISEASE, ULCERS AND STROKES

It is not necessary for businessmen who reach the management level to have heart disease, ulcers and stroke ailments commonly associated with executives. Further, these ailments are by no means limited to executives. They can affect almost anyone. A few suggestions offered by the Idaho Medical Association to help executives preserve their health can be readily applied to most Americans. Watch your weight. Strenuous diets usually are not necessary. Just eat less.

For exercise, golf is fine if you enjoy it. If you get upset over every missed stroke and lose your temper, brisk walks will serve just as well, perhaps better.

Take real vacations with time to relax and unwind. An occasional day or two won't do. Smoke less. Better still, stop smoking if you can. There is no doubt that smoking is not good for you. Cut down or stop drinking. Two cocktails before dinner might be one too many. One might be too many for some people.

Get plenty of sleep without the use of drugs, if possible. Leave business worries at the office.

Folks never understand the folks they hate.—James Russell Lowell

Kanyon Klub Meets Jan 14

The Kendrick Kanyon Klub will meet with Mrs. Ed Nelson Wednesday, January 14, at 1:30. Mrs. Viola Johns and Mrs. John Wilson are co-hostesses. Roll call will be "something new I've tried."

Commission Meets

Opening dates for 1976's big game seasons will be set January 27 when the Fish and Game Commission holds its quarterly meeting in Boise. The meeting begins at 9 a. m. January 27 in the Commission Room, 600 South Walnut, Boise. A public hearing is scheduled between 1:30 and 5 p. m. on the same day.

Some people are willing to do an honest day's work—only they want a week's pay for it.

Mabbott, Juliaetta, on Sunday. Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Brown joined Vlah Dodge, Lewiston, for an enjoyable evening at the Senior Citizen's dance held at the YWCA.
