The America's Junior Miss competition is a nationwide scholarship program to recognize, reward and encourage excellence in our young people. At Mobile, Alabama, each year since 1968, it has selected the nation's outstanding high school senior girl from among thousands of contestants who take part in hundreds of communities in all 50 states.

More than $5 million in college scholarship and other awards are offered to the participating Junior Misses at local, state and national levels each year. Awards vary in each community and state. National awards total approximately $55,000 with a $10,000 scholarship to the college of her choice to the girl selected as America's Junior Miss. Lennie Jo Hallgren of Clarkston is America's reigning Jr. Miss and she is now a freshman at Washington State University, majoring in special education.

Lennie Jo best describes what America's Junior Miss is all about: "It doesn't emphasize good looks, but rather scholarship, poise, achievement and fitness. It is not a beauty contest, but a consideration of the whole person."

Judging aims to determine representative excellence and achievement in several areas, to determine the well-rounded individual with the personality and promise to serve as an able spokesman for her generation. Individual areas of judging and importance include:

- Youth Fitness—Physical well-being, coordination, stamina, agility, posture and carriage in sports attire are considered (15%).
- Creative and Performing Arts—Judging is based on originality, selection, costume and performance in an on-stage presentation of a performing art (20%).
- Poise and Appearance—Grace, posture and carriage in evening dress is considered along with good taste in attire, grooming and appearance (15%).
- Scholarship Achievement— Transcripts of grades and scores of scholarship tests and exams are reviewed and rated by qualified educators (15%).
- Judges Interview—In an informal session with each Junior Miss, the judges look for a sense of values, per-

Letters to the Editor...

Word has come that Maxine Ehlen Stander has died. About two weeks before Christmas, I shall miss her. She belonged to a bridge club which a friend of mine often entertained when I visited Boise and could play with them. It was always fun to see Maxine.

Dr. Ehlen, her father, was a fixture of Genesee during the early quarter of the century, and came night or day when any of us had a pain. His office was where Carl Simon's electric shop was built. The waiting room had a certain smell, but not as fearful a one as the inner sanctum which held the doctor's desk—a well-used round-top with swivel chair, a pot-bellied stove, an occasional straight-back chair and, dreadful of dreadfuls, a kind of chair you had to sit in to get things lanced and that sort of thing. The doctor had large eyes augmented by heavy lenses in his glasses, a drooping moustache and a very bald head. I never remember him in a hat except when he played in the town band and wore the cap of a horn blower, I don't know what kind. I was very fond of this man, but pretty respectfully scared of him, too! How many aches and miseries he did help me through like mumps, chicken pox, measles of a very difficult kind, numerous stomach upsets of painful nature, and a rough pneumonia. In our house, he was tops. And Maxine was his only daughter.

Their house was at the top of some steps which climbed up the bank directly behind his building and to the family home, the house just above. A small girl could find the best filled cookies on earth right in that pantry! Many a nice Sunday found the doctor, Mrs. Ehlen and my father, Walter Jain, playing solo after a good dinner and my mother reading contentedly alongside. Often Couvier, the son, played the piano. As a student at WSC, not U in those days, he excelled and Kitten on The Keys was my favorite. Maxine was a quiet admirer of her brother but let him do the performing. Maxine loved to travel and had gone around the world by ship and plane more than once. She could speak with firsthand knowledge of the world just any place the conversation touched.

At my time of life, I bid many friends goodbye. Genesee was such a good place to grow up in and so many people touched our life there to our benefit. Yes, I shall miss Maxine and feel sorry for her brother who survives in Boise and also her husband there. The Ehlen's were treasured family friends.

Sincerely, Grace Jain Wicks, Moscow, Idaho

The Kendrick School 'Principal's Corner'

By Bill Tracy

Metric System Workshop—

Ten elementary and secondary teachers will be attending a workshop on the Metric System this Saturday at the high school. Since the State Board of Education decreed that all Idaho school districts' instructional programs be converted to the Metric system by 1984, it has become increasingly evident that we must start using the Metric System as the primary language of measure in all classes and at all grade levels. This means that teachers in all content areas should not only have a working knowledge of Metrics, but should be trained in the use of educational materials and methods for effectively teaching the system to students.

Parents as well as teachers and students must begin integrating the Metric System into their measurement vocabulary. The most logical place for conversion to take place is in the schools, but parents can also get involved by learning and using the Metric System along with their children. Interested persons wishing to register for the Metric Workshop which will be conducted at Kendrick High School on Saturday may contact the School office for details.

Solar Energy—

Richard Barker, science teacher at the high school recently finished a solar energy unit in his Advanced Science Class. Students in the class were required to construct a functional model powered by solar energy. Some of the more successful projects included a solar still, a fruit dryer, a solar oven, and a water heating unit. The students not only learned about the practical aspects of solar energy and its application in meeting the world's energy needs, but developed a degree of the creativeness required of all inventors.

Semester Ends—

We are now in the last few days of the first semester. Students are preparing for final exams and are becoming increasingly concerned about their own progress over the past 18 weeks as reports cards will be coming out in about a week. Second semester will begin on Monday, January 17. Many students are making changes in their class schedules, some adjustments due to the new graduation requirements passed by the school board in December. Teachers are preparing for new offerings, two of which will be Child Development and Housing and Home Furnishings taught by Sharon Hoogland.

Excessive Absences Improved—

Last year at this time 9 students had exceeded 13 1/2 days of being absent and had to petition the school for reinstatement of lost credits. This year 2 students at the secondary level were not in attendance 85% of the days school was in session and thus will have to appeal their loss of credit. Whether the absences were due to illness or other reasons, I feel that student attendance has improved and would like to congratulate the parents and students for their concern and progress in this area.

CARD OF THANKS

I am grateful for the many cards and prayers, phone calls and visits while in the hospital and since returning home. Thank You.

FOR SAFE DRIVING

Safe, Dependable Winter Driving Requires Extra Care and Maintenance

A leaky or faulty muffler or exhaust system can be deadly on a car or truck in the wintertime when the windows are closed tightly most of the time.

Worn or poor snow tires can cause dangerous driving conditions when winter snow and ice are on the roads.

Brakes that grab or are out of adjustment could cause you to lose control of your vehicle when streets are icy.

Worn out points or spark plugs can make your car hard to start, especially on these cold mornings. And, an old, weak battery just can't give you the power you need in cold weather.

Good Anti-Freeze in the proper amount can mean the difference between complete protection and a costly repair bill.
