IT HAPPENED WAY BACK WHEN

Kendrick Gazette
December 1, 1937
Farrington-Kloster—

Arne Kloster, Southwick and Miss Helyn Farrington, Kendrick were married Saturday, Nov. 27, at 1:00 p. m. at the home of Bert Kloster, brother of the groom, upper Asotin road, with the Rev. O. L. Olsrud officiating. Attendants were Mrs. Rose Farrington, mother of the bride and J. H. Emery. The happy young couple will make their home near Southwick.

A group of young folks gathered at the home of Mrs. Rose Farrington Sunday evening to charavari the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Arne Kloster. Inghard Gjovaag and Helen Winegardner obtained a marriage license in Asotin last Wednesday and were married shortly after. They spent their honeymoon in Tacoma, returning home on Sunday. Sunday night the newlyweds were charavari by many friends, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Winegardner.

FIRST SECURITY BANK LETTER

The number of building permits for new dwelling units issued in Idaho during November dropped sharply below the October level and also was down from November, 1976 figures. This is according to the Idaho Construction Report, a publication of First Security Bank, N. A., said James Hoogland, Jr., manager Kendrick and Stan Merrill, manager, Genesee. The report, to be distributed this week is edited by Dr. Kelly K. Matthews, vice president and economist of First Security Co. service and management company of First Security Corporation.

For the first 11 months of this year, however, building permits are 22 percent above the 1976 total for the same period. Total construction value for authorized building permit construction in 53 major Idaho locations in November was $48,167,815 or 32.1 percent above the November 1976 level.

New residential construction for 861 living quarters during the month totaled $21,118,687 or 23.7 decrease in number and 15.5 per cent decrease in value compared to a year ago.

Nonresidential construction valued at $9,365,507 was up 55.6 percent from last year. Alterations and repairs showed the greatest dollar increase—a total value of $17,883,621 representing a 223.7 percent increase.

In the Boise-Ada county area of Southwestern Idaho, permits for new dwelling units continued at a high level in November. Most of the decrease in residential permit activity was centered in Northern and Eastern Idaho.

The average value per residential building permit statewide in November was $24,528—10 percent greater than one year ago.

FISH FREEZING FOR FRESH FISH

Summer catches of salmon, trout and bass and now the winter whitefish should provide a bounty of fresh food for the table with extra for the freezer.

Prolonging the fresh flavor of fish by freezing is easy. It is also a practical method of keeping good food on hand for months to come.

Freezing obviously halts the growth of bacteria until such time as the fish is thawed. But freezing immediately leaves fish of any kind open to other damage, chiefly oxidation and oxidation-related changes.

There may be dehydration and the consequent unwelcome changes of texture. Dehydration of fish can be held to a minimum by proper packaging and by maintaining freezer temperatures at a constant level so the temperature of the fish will not vary.

No packaging except vacuum-sealed metal containers prevents the loss of moisture in freezer fish. Balance of temperature between frozen fish and the cold storage unit is theoretically possible but difficult to achieve in practice.

Moisture loss may be seen first on the skin of the fish and results in the bleaching effect called 'freezer burn'. Fish that have been allowed to lose too much moisture suffer changes in flesh texture that may be described as 'woody'. The flesh becomes fibrous and tough when cooked, and the familiar flaky texture is lost.

Dehydration and oxidation could be prevented completely if frozen fish could be held in a vacuum. Since this is impractical for the average angling family, there are a few suggestions the Department of Fish and Game would like to pass along.

Fish should always be frozen as soon as possible, but since what is always best may not be practical, keep the fish cool and out of direct sunlight.

It is also important to have the fish cleaned with gills removed if the head is not removed and then washed to remove any bacteria on the surface of the fish.

Keep air away from the fish to the extent this can be done by some kind of protective material. It can either be plastic wraps or a glazing of ice.

Fish wrapped in freezer paper are more prone to spoil due to fish fat reacting to any air. As the fats turn rancid, the meat gains an unpleasant taste.

Perhaps the most effective and convenient way of storing fish is to completely freeze them in water. Milk cartons, plastic ware and plastic bags filled with fish and water are best in preventing oxidation.

Fill a carton with fish and add water nearly to the top, allowing for the expansion of the frozen water, then freeze. After the fish is frozen, add more water to the top to form a protective layer of ice, then refreeze.

Now that you know correctly frozen fish will last, it's time to go and catch some more.

STILL SOME JOB OPENINGS LISTED IN LATAH COUNTY

According to Phyllis Dunn, Moscow Local Officer Manager for the Idaho Department of Employment, the following jobs are currently open: office manager, credit reporter, clerical typist/bookkeeper, bartender, experienced waitress, institutional cook, bricklayer, cook, licensed cosmetologist, janitor and inside laborer.

Contact the Department of Employment at 221 E. Second, Moscow, for details.

There are currently 430 people in Latah county filing for unemployment insurance compared to 438 last week and 440 the same week in 1976. Current totals are: Moscow 208, compared to 210 last week and 237 in 1976; Genesee 17, 16, and 18; Troy-Deary-Bovill 122, 128 and 104; Kendrick 14, 12 and 16; and Potlatch 71, 72 and 65.

To learn which work saves, one must rightly meditate on these three, Doing, not doing and undoing.—Bhagavad-Gita

Family Affair—

YOU HAVE FOUR FACES;
KNOW ALL TO KNOW SELF

The struggle to know who you are is as old as Adam. Everyone fights this battle. Your struggle never ends. As you experience new things, you change.

Actually you are four people. First, there is your real self. This one is always changing. Its the part of you that's the hardest to keep in touch with. Everything that happens affects this self.

Next comes your self-image, or the person you judge yourself to be—the person you think you are. The third person in you is the ideal self or the one you'd most like to measure up to — your ideals.

Finally, there is a public self. This is the person you let others see. You don't think the person you are is someone people would like and admire, so you present this front to hide some of yourself. To be in good mental health, you need to be comfortable with all four selves. They must be reasonably like each other. For example, the ideal can't be so different from the real you or the self image that this causes trouble.

If the ideal is too different, you don't like yourself, and what then happens, you start defending yourself. Instead of honesty facing that you or your values have changed, you insist, by defending what you were, that nothing has changed. You are the same person. Your values are the same.

But you do change—all the time. So keeping in touch with who you are is a lifelong job.

That real self will show. If you try to hide it, it comes out anyway. You'll feel bored, anxious, guilty, and frustrated.

For example, Joan's husband, Dave, was offered a new and better job in a different state. Joan's ideal self said, "I'm glad Dave has this chance to get ahead. A good wife should support him in this move. I should be this way."

But Joan's real self didn't agree and said, "It's not fair. He doesn't think about what this move means to me and our children, we have to give up our friends and a place we like."

So her self-image wasn't all that good. She didn't feel like her ideal said a good wife should feel. So there was conflict inside; she didn't like part of herself.

But Joan's public self was all smiles. She put on the mask she thought others would like. She said, "Dave has a great chance for advancement, and I want to help all I can. I'm staying at home with the kids for awhile. I'll get the house sold and give him a chance to get settled before I join him."

What happened? Joan found that days alone with the children were boring, but she just "couldn't" find the right family to buy the house. She missed Dave and felt trapped and depressed. Finally, she developed ulcers. The feelings inside that she didn't admit to having—even to herself—were making her sick.

Her real self was out of joint. It showed up as boredom, frustration, guilt, depression or anxiety. Being anxious is the most common way the real self shows. Joan's ulcers came from her anxiety.

How does a person act when he or she is hiding or defending his real self? Joan showed one physical way, her ulcers. But there are many others that indicate stress. A person may be constipated or have diarrhea. He may be easily upset, exploding over the least criticism, or his muscles may be tense, making him tired, having headaches, etc.

Defensive people are hiding. They try to protect themselves and others from the part of themselves they don't like. But there is another choice, rather than being defensive. We can try to recognize what is happening. This is painful and hard to do alone. Talking it over with an understanding person can help a lot. Once you see the defenses you're using, you may find a better way to be yourself. This is growth.

When a person grows, he adjusts his public person, ideal self and self-image to reality. Then all his selves are bigger. He or she is better able to meet life as it is.

Restyled 1040A on Single Page, Single Side For FASTER Preparation

Boise, Idaho—Taxpayers who file the Short Form 1040A tax return will find that the form has been restyled and should be faster to prepare, according to Phillip Sansotta, Director of Internal Revenue Service for Idaho.

Instead of the previous version which was essentially a half-page form printed on both sides, the new 1040A is a full page but printed on only one side.

"The new change in format," said Sansotta, "provides the taxpayer with morespace and it is clearer to read. In addition, taxpayers making copies of the form for their files need only reproduce one page."

The full-page 1040A will also benefit the Government since it provides
