Letters to the Editor . . .

Juliaetta Hopes Water Problems Over

Dear Bill, I would like to use your fine paper for a moment to communicate with the citizens of Juliaetta.

Local News Of Kendrick

Odie Draper visited with Carrie Gustafson Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Arnett visited with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Goss at Moscow Saturday evening.

two things wrong: no rain and no well water. We have had one well go from 80-100 GPM (gallons per minute) down to 40-60 GPM in '78 to completely dry in '79.

This brings me to one of the main reasons for writing this letter. The point is to tell the world that when the people of Juliaetta are asked and given a good reason, they come through with flying colors.

Harry F. Wegner, Civic Leader, Claimed by Cancer

Farmer, civic leader and Whitman County Commissioner Harry F. Wegner of Pullman died of cancer Monday. He was 59.

Wegner was a man who never held a grudge and who was 10 years ahead of his time in bringing farmlands preservation to the Palouse, according to James T. Henning of St. John, Whitman County Commission chairman.

Gerald Ingle Elected President of Palouse Living History Farm

Moscow—Friends of the Palouse Hills Living History Farm Museum elected new officers at a recent business meeting.

Gerald Ingle of Kendrick was elected president; Don Oleson of Moscow vice president; John Jameson, Pullman, secretary/historian and Dixie Ehrenreich of Moscow, who is director of the farm museum was elected treasurer.

Trustees who were elected include Gainford Mix, who is retiring president; Eugene Hilty, Colfax, Norma Dohler, Moscow; Margo Knight, Pullman; Charlie Peterson, Moscow; Ed Krumpke, Moscow; Grace Ingle, Kendrick; Don Morton, Moscow; and William Loney, Moscow. Ex-officio trustees are William Greever, Rodrick Sprague and G. Ellis Burcaw, all of Moscow. Burcaw is director of the University of Idaho museum, which is sponsoring the farm museum project.

The proposed living history farm museum, whose proposed site is west of the UI campus on the Washington border, will interpret Palouse Hills farm history from the House Era of farming, around 1915. When the museum is opened, a farm family will "live" on the farmstead, growing crops and performing daily tasks as a real family from that era would have.

This winter, researchers on the project will be restoring farm machinery from the period for use on the farm. The Moscow Mall Association has donated space in the mall for the restoration.

Restoration researchers Douglas Carr and Rob Hamburg presented a program on farming machinery and history to the Friends of the Farm gathering "Palouse agriculture in 1915 reflected the good economic health of agriculture in the country as a whole, moving many historians to call this the Golden Age of Agriculture," Carr told the gathering.

Fred Ellis Dicus, 72, Former Genesee Resident, Passes December 2

Fred Ellis Dicus, 72, a retired electrical engineer, passed away December 2 at his home in Lewiston, of an apparent heart attack.

Dicus retired in July of 1970 after 39 years with the Potlatch Corp. He was the company's electrical engineer who installed pre-to-logs machines in the Western Hemisphere.

He planned the wiring for the original company veneer plant that began operating in 1949. He was the engineer for the building of the No. 2 paperboard machine in 1955. He also helped design the power layouts for milk cartons at Silkeston, Mo, and Pomona, California in 1957.

He began working for the old Clearwater Timber Co. at Lewiston in the summers of 1927, 1928 and 1929 while attending the UI at Moscow. He graduated in electrical engineering in 1931, the year the Lewiston lumber company became Potlatch Forest, Inc.

He was named foreman of the Pre-to-logs fuel department here in 1939. He transferred to the new engineering department of the company in 1941 and he installed Pre-to-log machines in South America, Canada and the eastern United States the next few years.

He was born Sept. 10, 1907 at Moscow to Fred and Eugenia Dicus. He attended Genesee high school and he was married to Fern M. Kershner Sept. 28, 1933 at Moscow.

He was a trustee of the Lewiston Elks Lodge in 1971 and a long-time member of that organization and the Eagles Lodge. He also belonged to the Methodist church.

Survivors include his widow and a son, Don Dicus, both of Lewiston, a daughter, JoAnn McCracken of Winchester and four grandchildren, Cherie McCracken and Jody Howarth, both of Sheridan, Wyo., and Kenneth and Mike Dicus, both of Lewiston.

The funeral was held Tuesday at Malcom's Brower-Wann Memorial Chapel with the Rev. J. Stanley Lyman officiating.

Spring Steelhead Season To Open January 1

A spring steelhead season starts January 1 on the Salmon River and a section of the Snake River, following action by the Fish and Game Commission during its recent meeting in Boise.

Anglers will be allowed a daily bag limit of 2 steelhead with a possession limit of 2 and a 6-fish season limit. A 1980 fishing license and steel head license and steelhead permit are required.

The fall steelhead season continues through December 31. Following that date however, catch-and-release fishing on the Clearwater River system will be closed.

And in the catch-and-release stretches on the Clearwater system, fishing for all species will close from January 1 through March 31.

On the Salmon, from its mouth upstream to Mackey Bar bridge, the fall season runs from January 1 thru April 13. From Mackey Bar bridge to 400 yards downstream from the mouth of the Pahsimeroi River, the season is January 1 thru March 30.

The Snake will open January 1 through April 13 from Dug Bar upstream to 400 feet below Hells Canyon Dam. All steelhead 28 inches and longer must be returned to the water unharmed.

Commissioners were told that an estimated 5,000 steelhead—the great majority of the hatchery fish—are in the Salmon river run.

They are returning to the Pahsimeroi Hatchery, where about 1,000 adults are needed for spawning operations at the facility owned by the Idaho Power Company and operated by Department of Fish and Game personnel.

Whooping Cranes On the Upswing

from Bill Loftus, College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences

Moscow—Of the 18 whooping crane chicks hatched this spring at Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge in southeastern Idaho, 11 are dead, 6 have safely reached New Mexico wintering grounds and one's location is unknown.

Six, possibly seven, whooping cranes have survived their first fall migration out of the 24 eggs carefully transported to Grays Lake this spring and entrusted to greater sandhill crane foster parents as part of a project to increase their numbers. The project is a joint effort between the U. S. and Canadian wildlife services and the UI.

These young whoopers have joined the ranks of one of the world's rarest birds. Biologists estimate 120 whooping cranes now live in the wilds or captivity. The foster-parents flock, man's first attempt to reintroduce whoopers to areas they formerly inhabited, now numbers at least 15 birds.

About 75 whoopers now breed and summer in Canada and migrate south for six months of sunny southern weather on the Texas Gulf Coast at Aransas National Wildlife Refuge during the winter.

Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Maryland holds captive a flock of 29 whoopers for research and to insure that no sudden catastrophe in the wild exterminates the species.

Energy-Saving Practices Taught By Extension Service

Clifton Anderson, Asoc. Agricultural Editor
 Moscow—Big savings in energy use will be achieved if American farmers and homeowners are taught energy conservation practices by their friendly county extension agents, according to a newly published report entitled "The Cooperative Extension Service in Transition."
 Prepared by a nationwide committee of extension leaders, the report describes innovative new programs that are being developed as the Cooperative Extension Service's answers to the energy crisis and other pressing problems.
 The report said extension is not only an excellent system of informal education but also a "process of leadership development and community improvement in the nation's 3,000 counties and 50 state programs. It's a process for people to define and learn skills to meet their most urgent needs now and in the future."

 Extension programs are designed to meet particular needs in counties and states and "the Cooperative Extension Service does not have a national program as such," the report emphasizes.
 Commenting on the report, the director of the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service said Idaho continues to need extension programs that will provide solutions to the problems of production agriculture.
 James L. Graves said extension programs in Idaho are in three basic areas—agriculture-natural resources, family living and youth development. "Since agriculture is the bedrock on which Idaho's company is built, our extension programs emphasize the production, management, marketing and processing of food and fiber products. When agriculture faces new problems—such as those associated with energy, safety and use of chemicals—extension must respond to those problems, as we are doing in Idaho," Graves explained.

 Graves said extension has the built in flexibility to adjust its programs to meet new needs. New activities mentioned in the national extension report were set into motion by citizen groups and extension workers who tried to find solutions to local problems, the Idaho extension director pointed out.
 Listing 10 high-priority goals that extension workers are trying to achieve through programs of education and demonstration, the report said energy conservation is a matter of great urgency. "The United States is consuming energy faster than it can be produced," the report warned. Along with energy conservation, cerns" of U. S. extension workers.

 —Safe, efficient and effective pest control.
 —Strengthening American families in the areas of nutrition, youth development and family relationships.
 —Improved access of people to government programs and increased efficiency in the delivery of extension services.
 —Involving rural citizens in occupational safety and preventive health maintenance programs.
 —Improved quality of life for the disadvantaged, the elderly and minorities.
 —Reduced unemployment and underemployment in rural America.
 —Improved income and living conditions for farm families with limited resources.
 —Upgrading the quality and availability of housing in rural areas.
 —Preserving and enhancing the quality of the rural environment, including water resources, woodland, air quality and waste management.

By developing new programs which may help to solve the energy crisis and other national problems, the Cooperative Extension Service has demonstrated that it is "indeed dynamic, relevant, effective, efficient and able to mount programs in the national interest," the report said.
 Action on new educational projects must not divert attention from traditional extension programs that continue to be needed, the report said. Urging continued emphasis on efforts to improve crop and livestock production, the report pointed out that the growth rate of agricultural productivity during the 1970s has lagged 40 percent below the growth rate of the 1950s and 1960s.
 "Such a decline can only lead to higher food prices and the loss of the U. S. competitive position in world markets," the report said. "One basic cause for this decline has been inadequate funding of agricultural research and extension within the nation's land-grant system—the wellspring of knowledge and technology which has fueled our agricultural system."

 World population is growing and current U. S. food and fiber production should be doubled "safely and efficiently" in the next 40 years, the report said.
 The nation's farmers need the assistance of agricultural researchers and extension workers in order to increase production substantially, the report stated.
 "The research/extension community believes it can be done. The system is in place to do it. There are no start-up costs," the report said.

Letters to the editor...

Dear Editor:

THE BEST LIFE INSURANCE POLICY YOU CAN HAVE

Basic Cardiac Life Support is the foundation upon which a life system rests.

No matter who elaborate a community emergency system is the degree of success is directly proportional to the ability of all public safety personnel and a significant number of the general public to administer basic life support at the scene of a life-threatening situation. It is the person (s) who is present within the first four (4) minutes of sudden death who determines whether the victim lives. And, that person must know Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR).

CPR courses are designed to insure the accuracy and retention of CPR skills, to know prudent heart living, risk factors, signals, action for survival and system entry. Accuracy and retention are gained by over-learning and re-training. For information on CPR lessons, call your fire department. The life you save may be your own!

While emergency cardiac care is the most important single element of the system, other life threatening situations should be considered, arterial bleeding—1 minute or less! Shock, poison, drug overdose, electrocution, drowning and broken bones to name a few of the accidents encountered in our daily living. Again the first person at the scene will determine whether the victim lives. The extent of injuries and complications from neglect or improper handling. It is this person's duty to comfort and stabilize the victim at the scene and get them into the advanced life support system (ambulance and E. M. T.'s) as soon as possible. Again the more people who know Standard First Aid, the more lives may be saved and less chance of permanent injury and suffering.

For further information on First Aid Training, call your Red Cross or fire department.

Editor:

In response to an article in the Lewiston Morning Tribune, 11-30-79, which stated that District Superintendent John Grove of Troy was (and I quote) "a bit vexed" to see an inaccurate statement about the district's budget, which I had quoted at a pre-legislative meeting in Lewiston 11-28-79 that $53,000 was spent for psychologists.

Perhaps there is a communication gap between the school district and the property owners (taxpayers). When we received our tax statement for 1979, I was more than "a bit vexed" when I noticed our levy assessment had been lowered, however our school taxes had increased $106, 67! Then when one reads in the Idahoian the following statement—Whiteline School District No. 284, Statement of Revenues, Expenditures and Changes in Fund Balance—Year needed 6-30-79:

Operations	Budget
Psychologists—Elementary	$34,693.11
Psychologists—Secondary	$19,791.41
	$22,933.00

As you will note, I quoted the budget lower than it was published! How is one to interpret such a budget item?

He also stated (and I quote) "This is very erroneous and damaging to the district". For all concerned citi-
