

Genesee Firemen to Promote Tot Finder, Vial of Life Programs

In the continuing effort to provide service to the community and rural area, the Genesee Fire Department has undertaken a project called the Vial of Life. This project is funded by Lewis-Clark Moose Lodge No. 751, but it is up to the firemen to get it functioning.

The following is an outline as to how it will proceed. The firemen will distribute, door to door, a small brown plastic bottle with a form. The form includes your name, age, doctor, hospital of your choice, next of kin, insurance policy numbers and anything special about your health status the ambulance personnel should know, such as medication being used, allergies, heart condition, etc. After form is completely filled out it is to be placed in the plastic bottle in your refrigerator, taped under the top right hand shelf.

This is working very well for older individuals who live alone or might be alone for a certain period of time or might not be able to communicate with ambulance attendants when the need arises.

The firemen are also sponsoring the Tot Finder program. The Tot Finder is a large reflective decal that marks the bedrooms of children, invalids and elderly people. The decal, highly visible during the day and reflective from a light source at night, clearly marks the location of a child's room. Should fire strike, the decal alerts firemen to clear marked areas first.

It is the feeling of the firemen that these programs, when completed, will be very beneficial for all concerned. There is absolutely no cost to you. The materials for the programs will be distributed during the Crab Feed ticket sale.

Any questions you may have will be answered at that time. Your cooperation will be appreciated. Plans are now in the making for the Annual Crab Feed to be held February 9th.

H. S. Evans, 79, Passes Dec. 29

Moscow—Henry S. "Vest" Evans, 79, a lifelong resident of north central Idaho died Saturday at his home on Mountain View road in Moscow. He has been in ill health for several years.

Evans worked for Lawton motors in Moscow until his retirement in 1963. He was born April 29, 1900, at Agatha, the son of William M. and Myrtle Evans. As a young man he farmed on Potlatch and Texas ridges, worked as a town marshal and for Standard Oil Co. He moved to Worley in 1930 and remained there until moving to Moscow in 1943.

In retirement, Evans tended a large flower garden. He was also a hunter and fisherman up to the time of his final illness.

Evans married the former Harriet Robeson at the Grand Hotel, Lewiston, July 16, 1919.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by three sons, Paul Evans of Moscow; James Evans of Lewiston; and Harold Evans of Weiser; a sister, Lola Steensma of Moscow; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Shorts were in charge of arrangements.

Small Log Skidder Shows Promise

Moscow—Structural modification of a backhoe may lead to reduction of fire and insect damage risks in growing forests and perhaps provide an additional source of lumber and fuel in the future through a project of forestry researchers at the University of Idaho.

Minor modifications they made of a commercial backhoe may help loggers and land managers make use of small-diameter trees culled from forests. Presently, the small trees are either left or in most cases piled and burned. The small trees left in the forest sometimes fuel forest fires and serve as breeding grounds for detrimental insects.

According to Leonard Johnson, UI associate professor of forest products, tests of the prototype log skidder designed to handle small-diameter timber have been encouraging. Tests were conducted this summer on a backhoe modified to grapple and skid small trees by Johnson, Walter L. Moden, UI professor of agricultural engineering, and Michael Leverick, a UI College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences graduate student.

Their research, conducted on the college's experimental forest, tested the economic feasibility of transporting logdepoles, pines from the forest to a production area where the trees were cut into fence posts.

In thinning the 4.3 acre stand of pines to allow the remaining trees to show greater growth, the researchers removed over half of the original trees or over 60 tons of wood from the stand.

With present technology, small diameter trees have been too costly to use because the cost of transporting them from the forest to production areas has been too high, Johnson said.

"We went in (to the project) looking at it like you'd never utilize this wood if you can't get it to a landing," Johnson said.

The cost of skidding equipment and operating it discourages small timber use. Loggers found it cheaper to pass by a possible source of wood and energy than try to market small timber.

"Use of large equipment can also negate the original purpose of thinning through damage to the residual (forest) stand," Johnson added.

The modifications the team made on the backhoe included additions of a log grapple in place of the backhoe bucket and armoring to protect the engine and operator.

Johnson said the concept worked well during tests this summer, but additional work is needed to develop a grapple capable of handling a number of trees to make each trip for economically feasible.

The prototype backhoe/skidder had a 30-horsepower engine, Johnson said, in contrast to the smallest commercially built skidder with a 70-horsepower engine.

The prototype, with modifications, would still cost about half as much as the smallest commercial skidder, Johnson added. The cost difference might also allow smaller firms to concentrate on using small diameter timber.

The design of the basic machine requires a smaller turning area and could reduce the need for extensive skid trail systems, he added. Johnson said the early tests have indicated a slightly larger machine may be necessary and negotiations are underway to obtain a 40-horsepower backhoe for modification.

"We're trying to show two things," Johnson said, "whether you can pull this timber out and the cost of doing it."

The cost so far has not been easy to assess, Johnson added. Problems with the prototype led to some equipment failures and greater "down times" than would be encountered when design flaws are overcome. Other sources of wood and energy, still more readily available and relatively cheaper, further complicate the machine's economics, he added.

"We got into this partly trying to be ahead of the demand and because we're still a ways away from dealing with the material we put down during precommercial thinning," Johnson said.

The project received support from the university of Idaho, U. S. Forest Service and the manufacturer of the backhoe, Case-Davis, Inc.

Inflation Problem Darkens 1980 Farm Economic Outlook

Taking the measure of the severe pressure inflation is expected to exert on Pacific Northwest agriculture in 1980, agricultural college faculty members of three area universities agree that farmers' production costs will continue to rise at the same time that some markets for farm products could be adversely affected by consumers' loss of purchasing power.

In a year-end economic outlook report, representatives of the University of Idaho, Washington State University and Oregon State University repeat a warning they featured in their report a year ago: "Inflation is the most important problem facing the nation."

The new report predicts the build-up of wide-ranging inflationary pressures as a result of the periodic price increases of petroleum and the escalation of labor costs. It says the voluntary seven percent ceiling on wage hikes will be difficult to maintain while consumer prices are climbing at nearly double the seven percent rate.

The "pervasive" increases in energy costs and wage rates "spread into other costs and are added on to prices and marketing margins," the report pointed out.

Pacific Northwest farmers could possibly experience some marketing difficulties if there is an extensive, continuing slowdown in the U. S. industrial economy, the report said. Prices for beef, fruits and vegetables could be affected by "declining demands in Eastern consumer markets," the report explained.

Inflation is now eroding the "real" buying power of American consumers, authors of the report stated. They noted these negative developments on the economic horizon:

"With the slowdown in housing, the backing up of automobile inventories, the rise in energy prices and the onset of cold weather, further decline in buying power is expected this winter and next spring. Closely associated with this decline will be a rising rate of unemployment."

The economic forecasters saw bright spots as well as shadows as they scanned the 1980 outlook for Pacific Northwest agriculture.

"Export markets for agricultural commodities should remain strong during 1980," they said. "In a commodity-by-commodity review, the agricultural colleges' spokesmen saw these likely developments:

—With favorably weather, U. S. production of wheat and feed grains could reach record levels. Government "set-aside" programs have been discontinued for the 1980 crops.

—Market supplies of fed cattle during the first half of 1980 will be sharply below last year's level. Herd rebuilding is presently slowing down because beef producers have not had a favorable profit picture in recent months.

—Peas and lentil prices are expected to remain relatively steady.

—Prices of potatoes and dry beans have been fairly strong in recent months, but overproduction in 1980 could renew problems.

A decline in U. S. residential housing starts during 1980 is likely to dampen the demand for turf grass seeds grown in the Pacific Northwest.

—Hog producers' profit margins will continue to be squeezed through 1980 as the industry works out from under its large inventory of hogs.

—U. S. sheep producers will have a reduced inventory of stock sheep as 1980 opens; probably only 11 million head. Slaughter will have to be restricted substantially in order to build sheep numbers from this low base. Wool and lamb prices will continue strong.

—Poultry producers face an unpromising economic situation in 1980. Reduced pork prices have forced prices for poultry meat lower. Production costs continue to rise.

—Milk prices will increase in 1980. Dairymen should earn net returns approximately equal to those obtained in 1979.

—Weather conditions will be a key factor in determining the trend of hay prices in 1980. Demand for alfalfa hay was brisk and prices rose substantially above 1978 levels.

—Demand for onions in both foreign and domestic markets continue to display the strength that has been noted during the past few years.

—The world price of sugar has increased due to a decline in production. In 1979, U. S. sugarcane production declined 13 percent. In Idaho, the reduction was 4.5 percent—or 6,100 acres.

The 1980 Pacific Northwest Agricultural Outlook report, published jointly by the area's three land-grant universities, will be available in early January at county offices of the Cooperative Extension Service.

The report's review of the general economic outlook noted political difficulties that may stand in the way of governmental attempts to control inflation. This section of the report was prepared by Dr. A. H. Harrington, Washington State University extension economist.

"As a nation, we will face again a trade-off—a high unemployment rate or a high rate of inflation. In an election year, we are likely to be more sensitive to the unemployment rate," Harrington said.

Authors of the report said costs for energy, fertilizer, chemicals, farm machinery, credit, labor and land are likely to continue upward for at least the first half of 1980.

"Perhaps the greatest uncertainty facing farmers in 1980 is the availability and cost of energy. Political instability in oil-exporting Middle East countries, the aggressiveness of OPEC, the speed with which alternative energy sources are developed, domestic energy policies, and the priority agriculture will have in accessing available energy supplies are all critical, yet largely unresolved issues," they said.

Random thoughts on a winter night...

I went walking in the night Friday. It was the shortest day of the year and I wondered what I would find out there in the stillness of the dark trees. I am lucky enough to live down a long back road where my solitude is rarely interrupted by traffic and I walked and walked under the stars in peace. It was cold but not terribly. I was sorry there was not snow but not terribly. It could make serious water problems come summer if we never get some, and if it gets too cold without a layer of snow on the ground there's trouble. But trouble is always looking for us. What I found myself thinking about were the bluebirds of spring. They are far south now, in the jungles of Central and South America. Maybe even if bluebirds keep returning in springtime. There isn't much anymore that I can depend upon like I know I can depend upon that. And on turning around to walk back to my cabin, I realized how my own life has its cycles, too. Not quite so obvious or dramatic as if blue keep returning in springtime. There isn't much anymore that I can depend upon like I know I can depend upon that. And on turning around to walk back to my cabin, I realized how my own life has its cycles, too. Not quite so obvious or dramatic as the bluebirds coming and going, but nonetheless definite cycles. Patterns I could learn to depend upon, if I can trust myself to live comfortably with them. Even if the weather treats us well, the coming year is going to be a tough one. Just before reaching home again, I found someplace inside of myself that I possessed a conviction that my goals and the goals of my community were sound and worthy, and that I only had to always remember that conviction and I wouldn't get so confused by day-to-day events. There was indeed a bigger pattern I was living within. Maybe even tied in to bluebirds.

Use that tax label . . .

IT'S A LITTLE LABEL, but it can be a BIG help in getting a quick income tax refund," says Rebecca Markham of the IRS. Idahoans who use the label reduce the chances of a processing error being made that could delay their refund for weeks—and then too, they save time by not having to write the information given on the label onto the form.

Tips on Filing Income Tax Return

People do a lot of little rituals for good luck.

They throw salt over their shoulders, knock on wood, rub a rabbit's foot (if that's so lucky, how come the rabbit lost it?) and many horseshoes over doors.

While ineffective, these practices are harmless—unless, of course, the horseshoe falls on someone's head.

This is the time of year when Idahoans should do some other things for good luck—such as using the envelopes the IRS sends them with their tax return package; using the peel-off labels on the returns when they mail them to the IRS; and using the forms IRS sends them.

If they do, the IRS can process their refunds quickly and correctly. The problem is, many taxpayers don't use any of these things and it costs millions of taxpayer dollars. It costs money to buy the envelopes and print the form and extra dollars to process returns received without the labels.

Perhaps some Idahoans erroneously believe something on the envelope, label or form will bring about an audit.

"There is absolutely nothing on the tax forms, peel-off labels or envelopes the IRS sends taxpayers that can cause them to be audited," stated Philip N. Sansotta, Boise District Director.

"The only thing that can cause an audit is the figures put down on the return by the person who prepare it," he continued.

Sansotta went on to say there is no way the IRS can pre-determine which tax returns are to be audited. "The IRS is like a business. We have to get a decent return for our investment—no pun intended—so we audit those returns where it appears we are going to collect enough additional taxes to what it costs the IRS to make the audit. You can't tell that until you look at the returns," he said.

The IRS also does random audits to verify their methods used in selecting other returns for audit, but these are fairly small in number and are determined by chance.

"The forms we send out are identical. Only the so called 'tax packages' are varied and that's because we send each taxpayer what we think they need to complete a return. If a person filed a farm return last year, we'll send them a package with all the forms a farmer needs to complete the tax return this year. And if it was a short form, then we send that," Sansotta said.

As for the envelopes Sansotta said they are coded so they can be machine sorted according to type of return and the area they come from. When the IRS envelopes aren't used, then the mail is hand sorted and that takes more time and tax dollars.

"It's easier for the people who sort the returns to work with only one kind of return, if possible, and that's why we would like to be able to machine sort the mail first," he explained.

There's nothing very ominous about the labels either, according to Sansotta.

The two letters in the upper-left-hand corner are computer shorthand for the taxpayer's name.

The IRS verifies the correct account with just the two letters and the taxpayer's social security number. If the label isn't used, the IRS has to enter everything on the first three lines of the return, Sansotta said.

That takes more time and there's also more chance of an error being made that could delay a refund for weeks.

He went on to explain that the "D 82" or "D" and any other two numbers simply identifies the district the return is from. D 82, for example, is Boise District.

The number at the right of the district designation tells what kind of tax package the taxpayer was mailed. The number ranges from 1 to 5. A package 1 is the 1040 with Schedules A and E. Package 2 has these forms plus Schedules D and E. Package 3 has the schedules needed by business people to complete their tax return. Farmers get a package 4 and the package 5 has the 1040 A, or short form, in it.

When taxpayers don't use the label they also run the chance of our making a mistake which can delay their refund. Maybe we can't read their handwriting or we have to guess at an address and it could be enough to throw something out of kilter," Sansotta said.

Currently only about 40 percent of Idaho taxpayers use the labels.

Sansotta says he doesn't know what the IRS can do to increase usage of the label, but some measures will have to be taken.

"It just isn't practical to continue spending millions of tax dollars each year in unnecessary processing costs,

USDA, FDA, FTC Announce Plan to Revise Food Labeling

Washington—Three government agencies today announced a major effort to give consumers more information about ingredients, nutritional content and freshness of foods on food labels.

"This is the most important action in this area in over 40 years," Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carl Tucker Foreman said. "Labeling reforms are needed to meet the tremendous changes in food processing and distribution that have occurred since passage of the last significant food labeling law in 1938."

Foreman said the reforms should also help meet the increased demand of consumers to know more about food ingredients.

The reforms are being proposed by USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service, the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The plan, developed after an information-gathering program by the agencies that included public hearings, written comments and a food shopper survey, will be open to public comment for 90 days. A public hearing will be held March 4 and 5 at 9:30 a. m. in the main auditorium, Department of Commerce, 14th and Constitution Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

The plan will require more complete information about ingredients on food labels, including quantities of certain ingredients; nutrition labeling for more foods; clear labeling terms and concepts; open date labeling for some foods; and provide greater controls on food fortification, Foreman said.

It is not the oath that makes us believe the man, but the man ' the oath.—Aeschylus.

he pointed out.

"What we're hoping is that taxpayers will realize that as far as good luck goes, it's better to rub the peel-off label onto their return than it is to rub a rabbit's foot," Sansotta concluded.

Farmers' Expenses Increase Sharply

Clifton Anderson
Associate Agricultural Editor

Moscow, Idaho—Farmers production costs rose sharply in 1979 and additional increases will be occurring in 1980, according to agricultural college faculty members at the UI, WSU and OSU.

"Prices for energy, fertilizer, chemicals, farm machinery, credit, labor and land are likely to continue upward for at least the first half of 1980," the educators said in the 1980 Pacific Northwest Agricultural Outlook report.

Costs of fuel and energy advanced more than 44 percent in the year ending Sept. 15, 1979 and continued gains in petroleum prices will be registered in the coming months, authors of the report said.

"Since petroleum is a major input for many pesticides, price advances for pesticides can be expected in 1980," the economic forecasters said.

The annual outlook report, published jointly by the land-grant universities of Idaho, Oregon, and Washington, contained these predictions—Heavier demand for tighter supplies will push up fertilizer prices 10 to 15 percent in 1980. In order to save money on fertilizer for spring use, farmers should stock up on fertilizer now.

Interest rates on agricultural loans will range from 11 to 15 percent in 1980. Rates may decline slightly by the end of 1980.

Farm machinery prices are likely to increase by 8 to 12 percent in 1980.

Land values are continuing to rise. In the entire nation, farmland prices increased by 14 percent in the year ending in February 1979. In Idaho and Oregon, land value increased by 9 percent and Washington state showed an 11 percent gain. Similar rates of increase are expected in 1980.

Genstler Christmas Letter to Genesee Friends

Christmas Greetings—1979

Dear Friends: We're already enjoying early Christmas greetings and newsy family letters from friends who suffer from the 'head of the pack' syndrome—and we're so glad you're out there. It's a terrific reminder to jaggards that the year's finishing line is fast approaching.

In the event you may have a remote interest in our 1979 activities let me fill you in on our less spectacular happenings. Darrell and Geraldine have transferred to Kansas City for his 2nd year in Ophthalmology residency. He is enjoying the added responsibility and feels he is getting good experience. Gel is doing dental hygiene to help keep the bills paid.

Curtis is enjoying life to the fullest—at last he can study engineering full time. He is enrolled at W. W. C. in full time under-graduate work in electrical engineering with his sights on Stanford for graduate work in that field. His sister tells him he'd better live healthfully cause in order to accomplish all he plans to learn and do, he's got to be around at least another 150 years! In the meantime he's doing Emergency Room work at the Walla Walla General Hospital to pay the 'school master.' We tease him that this is no doubt the first time anyone has taken the medical course to work his way through college!

Ana Jean has finished the nurse practitioner course and thinks she will take a mental rest for a while. She plans to work at Loma Linda for a couple of months before taking off into the far blue yonder. She will embark a Flying Tiger on Feb. 28 to work for a month at a Thailand Refugee Camp as a volunteer for the U. S. The U. S. Gov. (HEW) has asked L. L. U. to provide teams of doctors and nurses to help develop and organize the care for the thousands of Cambodian refugees who are fleeing the ravages of war. She plans to swing through the Far East to visit some of our favorite cities before returning home. She is excited about the whole program and so are we.

As for Mom and Dad, they continue to deepen their groove in Exeter while also busy, shuttling between their three favorite points of interest. Paul imagines himself as a 'gentleman farmer' with a full time 'assistant' showing off his well kept vegetable garden boxes and productive orchard. Right now we could feed all the rabbits in Tulare County with our run-away garden of broccoli, cauliflower, brussel sprouts, cabbage and collards—if there are more in the cabbage family we haven't heard of them and they all look alike! Today we harvested some of the results of our labor—a wheelbarrow full of beautiful red persimmons.

As another year comes to its end we are grateful for the abundant blessings of health and happiness. 'God's mercies never come to an end; they are new every morning.' May this also be your experience this special Christmas Season.

With Christian Greetings Paul and Pearl Genstler

Fewer Beef Cattle Moving to Market

Clifton Anderson
 Associate Agricultural Editor

Moscow, Idaho—A UI economist believes supplies of pork and poultry will continue at record levels through the first half of 1980, but he expects a major reduction in market supplies of fed cattle.

Dr. John Early, writing in the annual Pacific Northwest Agricultural Outlook report said feedlot operators have been reluctant to bid up feeder cattle prices in view of increased costs that have made cattle feeding a highly risky venture.

"Cow-calf producers are faced with calf prices lower than those of early 1979, high interest rates and increasing operating costs. As a result they may be unable or unwilling to expand the size of their herds. Bankers are reluctant to finance cow herd expansion except on operations with a strong asset base and even then at high interest rates," Early said.

Supplies of fed cattle during the first half of 1980 will be sharply below last year's level, he added.

"Prices for fed cattle during the first half of 1980 are expected to move up from the lower $60 range of the fall to the low $70 range. Just how high they will go depends on consumer behavior," Early said.

Rebuilding of beef herds has been under way in 1979, following four consecutive years of herd reductions. "Herd rebuilding will slow in the next six months due to less favorable fall prices for feeders and calves as well as high interest rates on working and investment capital," Early said.

"Domestic feed grain consumption during the 1979-80 marketing year will increase because of the anticipated greater number of hogs and poultry. Reduced cattle feeding will be more than offset by the increase in other meat-producing activities," the extension economist stated in an agricultural outlook report published jointly by the University of Idaho, Washington State University and Oregon State University.

"Hog prices through mid-1980 could fall into the low $30 range on a specific week—especially if fed cattle marketings bunch up in early summer. However, quarterly average hog prices should be in the middle to upper $30 range for the first and second quarters of 1980," Early said.

Profit margins of hog producers, narrowed by the abundant supplies of pork on the market, will continue to be slim during most of 1980 Early predicted.

Letters to the editor...

Editor: May all citizens of Latah County join with us in a New Year's Resolution to be active, alert and beware of any new laws or ordinances placed upon us without the privilege of a vote.

Let us not forget 1979 and the problems we faced in regards to the mandatory garbage fee.

1. Although the county was receiving a surplus of monies from a four-tenth of a mill solid waste levy assessed property owners in 1978, the Latah County Commissioners eliminated the levy and replaced it with a mandatory garbage system.

2. And, without the privilege of a vote, a mandatory charge of $3 per month or $32 per year (if paid in advance) is being assessed all property owners within the county, who, in return must haul all garbage to dumpsters or the landfill.

3. Several public meetings were held and although the majority opposed such a fee the county commissioners are attempting to implement the mandatory ordinance January 1, 1980, on a so-called trial basis.

4. After two costly feasibility tests the proposed garbage-to-steam generating plant is still being planned. At what cost to Property Owners in Latah County?

5. There are many "gray" areas on the steam generating plant proposal. May we all stand together and demand all the pertinent facts on this project before it reaches the construction stage.

Therefore be it resolved, as property owners of Latah County, and not having any garbage, we refuse to pay the mandatory garbage fee placed upon us without our privilege to vote to accept or reject this ordinance.

Cumberland wasn't a free pass.

But it was America's first generation gap. Between 1775 and 1880, generation after generation of American settlers plodded through the Cumberland Gap.

A natural pass through the Appalachians that became the gateway to the West.

It was tough going. The cost was great. In money. And lives. But they paid the price. Because they were building a country. Their country.

You can help build America today by buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

That way, a little is set aside from each paycheck to buy Bonds. Automatically.

It makes saving easy. And that's something you can't pass up.

Construction Lags, but Stumpage Prices Rise

Orliff Anderson
Associate Agricultural Editor

Moscow, Idaho—Prices for standing timber are continuing to show strength despite the widespread expectation of a housing slump in 1980, economists of the University of Idaho, Washington State University and Oregon State University note in a year-end agricultural outlook report.
"There is some basis for believing that even a relatively sharp drop in housing stats may not have the strong price effects which occurred in recent years. Growth in the do-it-yourself home fix-up market will blunt declines in demand occasioned by a fall in new housing starts," the report said.

The longterm trend in stumpage prices was said to be moving upward. Lumber and plywood firms may be caught in an economic squeeze because wholesale prices for their products are not increasing at the same rate as stumpage prices, the report warned.

General Telephone Company Seeks Rate Increase for Idaho Customers

General Telephone Company of the Northwest this week announced that it has filed an application with the Idaho Public Utility Commission for an increase in local telephone service rates for the company's Idaho customers.
O. M. Leavitt, Coeur d'Alene, Eastern Area Vice President—General Manager, in testimony prepared for the utilities commission in support of the rate increase application, cited escalating costs in virtually all areas of the economy as the main reason for seeking a rate increase, the first basic increase in Idaho since 1970.
If approved, the increase will produce $1,244,640 in new revenue annually.

The company's total investment in the Idaho telephone operation in 1970 was $44 million. By year-end 1978, this had increased to just over $111 million, an increase of 152 percent or an average of 19 percent per year. By 1981, the total plant investment is estimated to be more than $184 million. Leavitt noted that the increase between 1970 and 1978 was due mainly to the fact that the company had been replacing older equipment with more modern installations to cope with the rapid expansion of service in Idaho.
The company's investment to gain one main telephone in 1970 was $1,800. This investment has continued to increase so that in 1978 the company's investment to gain each additional main telephone was more than $5,700. Taxes also have made a significant impact on the telephone company since 1970. The company's taxes in Idaho have increased 334 percent.

In discussing the inflation spiral and its impact on the telephone company, Leavitt gave this comparison: in the last 10 years, the price of lead has increased 289 percent and copper 92 percent. Automobiles have increased 59 percent and gasoline has risen 188 percent. On an overall basis, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the consumer price index has risen 103.5 percent in the past ten-year period. On the other hand, the price of basic telephone service in Idaho remains the same today as it was in 1970.
Leavitt emphasized that while the telephone company has held these rates constant, millions of dollars have been expended—and will continue to be expended—to provide service to customers through installation of the most modern switching equipment and application of the newest technology in telephone service to its Idaho customers.
Leavitt also cited growth in the company service to Idaho customers. Between year-end 1970 and year-end 1978, total telephones increased by 45,113 or 94 percent. By 1981 projected total telephones will reach 124,000 or an increase of 31,000 over 1978.

As an example of the company's efforts to contain costs, Leavitt said that while the number of employees in Idaho increased from 593 in 1970 to 950 by the end of 1978, the number of employees per 1,000 telephones has declined from 12.4 per 1,000 to 10.2 today.
Operating within the Presidential wage guidelines, the company has provided a continuing program of pay increases and benefit improvements to its Idaho employees since the last rate increase in 1970.

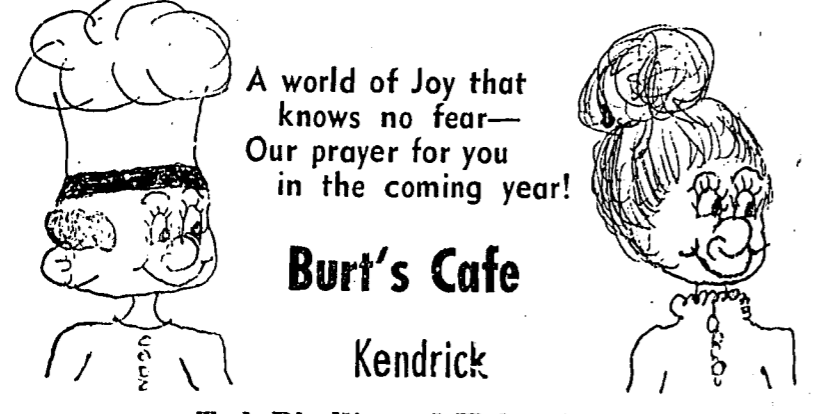

Leavitt cited four basic reasons for the company's increasingly higher investment rate: the cost of replacement equipment; inflation at all levels investment in more technically sophisticated equipment to meet customer service requirements, and investment in labor saving equipment to offset increasing operating costs.
Leavitt's testimony included a description of major service improvements that have been completed over the past several years in Idaho and he outlined a continuing ambitious construction program. That program will cost $30,187,000 in 1980.

Legion-Auxiliary Christmas Party Held Dec. 15

Twelve members of the Legion Auxiliary were present at the December meeting on December 15th at the Legion Hall, Genesee. Barbara Carbuhn, president, conducted the meeting.
The recent Holiday Brunch, Fashion Show and Card Party was a huge success, members were told. The treasurer's report was given and Girls' State discussed. Betty Morken is chairman of Girls' State and the date and time of the February meeting will be discussed later. Beverly Boyd and Marie Scharnhorst will be hostesses.
It was decided to hold a series of three card parties on consecutive Sunday evenings, starting soon after the Catholic Daughters Card Parties are over. Publicity will be circulated later as to time and dates. Gladys Liberg will serve as committee chairman. Correspondence was read from Lewiston member, Ethel Kambitsch, who sent a donation to the Unit for the luncheon. We welcomed a new member, Mrs. Don (Margaret) Grieser.

Gifts from members were given to the building or to the oil fund. A Christmas party was held with the Legion members, following the business meetings. The rooms were decorated in the Christmas motif and hostesses for the evening were Irene Stout and Barbara Carbuhn.
