

FEEDING WILD BIRDS IS OK, BUT DON'T FEED OTHER WILDLIFE

By Kyle Johnson
UI News Bureau
Moscow—While many people are fattening themselves during the holiday season, others are thoughtfully leaving food outdoors for birds and other animals so they don't starve during the rugged winter months.

PUBLIC NOTICES

In The District Court of the Second Judicial District of the State of Idaho In and For The County of Latah In the Matter of the Application of MARK J. OSBORNE For Change of Name to SANDRA BETH OSBORNE Case No. 16424
NOTICE OF HEARING

A Petition by Mark J. Osborne, born the 27th day of November, 1960, in Florence, Lauderdale County, State of Alabama, now residing in Moscow, Idaho, proposing a name change to Sandra Beth Osborne, has been filed in the above Court, the reason being: That the Petitioner desires to take on a feminine name and personality, is contemplating that in the near future he will undergo the necessary treatments and surgery in order to change his sex, and that Petitioner desires a feminine name at the present time in order to prepare for his new position in life. Hence the petition to change his name. Petitioner's father's name is J. E. Osborne and his mother's name is Sheila Ann Osborne.

Such petition will be heard at such time as the Court may appoint, and objections may be filed by any person who can show to the Court a good reason against such change of name.

WITNESS my hand and the seal of said Court this 11th day of December, 1980.

"It's fine for people to feed birds in the wintertime," said Dr. Steven R. Peterson, associate professor and chairman of the Department of Wildlife Resources at the UI. "It's not only a good thing for the birds, but it's an educational thing for the people, too."

But feeding other wildlife isn't such a good idea.

"Only in specific situations is it worthwhile to feed elk and deer," Peterson said noting that the Department of Fish and Game has the responsibility to keep the animal populations fed if they think the population needs help.

Peterson said the wild birds only really need to be fed when their usual supply isn't available such as when snow might cover it. Some birds, such as the ruffed grouse, find their food in trees so they just climb higher into the tree as the snow piles higher, said Peterson.

People who do start feeding birds during the winter should be certain to continue until the snow is gone. "The birds become very attached," said Peterson. "Pretty soon they're depending on this thing to get them through the day."

Consequently, said Peterson, people should be certain they make arrangements to have the bird feeder restocked if they are gone for any length of time. If the birds run out of food, "they're going to die. It's as simple as that."

Any feeder will do Peterson said, as long as it keeps the feed dry and out of the weather. It should also be positioned near cover, such as a bush or conifer, and not out in the open where the birds may get "zapped by a hawk," he added.

There are a lot of bird mixtures available, some of them expensive. Peterson said one inexpensive method is to visit a grain elevator and get its wheat, pea and lentil screenings.

Another substance that can be fed to the birds is found at the butcher shop. Peterson said people can get tallow or animal fat there, take it home, melt it and pour it with some cracked wheat or oatmeal mixed in into a mold formed with a quart-sized milk container. Hung outside the high-energy tallow makes good feeding for the birds, he said.

Birdfeeding in the winter is a multi-million dollar industry said Peterson, adding that a person may end up spending several hundred dollars if he or she chooses an expensive feed. "You'll soon find out what they like," said Peterson. "They'll check out what they don't like."

The feeding of other wildlife such as deer and elk is not recommended. For one reason, some of them are not able to effectively digest the hay given them, Peterson said.

One way people can help wildlife in the winter is by not chasing them in their environment, said Peterson, who adds that it's fine for people to take snowmobile rides and cross-country ski trips into the woods.

"This is great," he said. "But you have to remember that the deer and elk and other animals are in a period of stress."

The animals have little feed available and are trying to save energy to keep warm during the cold. Consequently, a little common sense about the animal's predicament can help prevent any undue stress, Peterson said.

People can also help wildlife by keeping their dogs under control Peterson said.

"A lot of people will never admit their dog is running deer," said Peterson. "Dogs can really tear them (the animals) up and they'll do it. We don't want any more of that than we have."

The deer and elk in wintertime are often forced off higher ridges by snow into the valley floors, said Peterson. If chased, they can only go into the stream or up the slope or heavier snow, wearing them out and making them easier prey.

A Message to Friends:

The Christmas season seems to be a most appropriate time to send this message not only to my friends, but to the community as well. Christmas is a time of warmth, love and rejoicing as we all remember the birth of the infant Jesus and the message he was to bring to men of peace and good will. And, while we are grateful to God for the precious gift of His only son, we also remember with grateful hearts, those lives who touch ours daily, and whose care, friendship and understanding make it possible to survive.

Most of you know by now that I have sold the Antelope Inn to Doug Sloan and Paige Neishem. As I leave the business in capable hands, I feel I must thank both the community and my patrons for the friendship and support I received while operating the 'Antelope'. You have all been very good to me and I shall never forget it. It would have been impossible for me to have remained in business through the years without the loyal help of some wonderful employees. Your assistance and friendship, sometimes far beyond "the call of duty", will always be treasured with a grateful heart.

I hope to remain a member of this wonderful community and also that each of you find in your hearts the true spirit of Christmas now and in the days to come.

Thank you again,
Virginia Cantril

KHS Musicians Entertained Area Senior Citizens

On Dec. 17th the Swing Choir from Kendrick High School under the direction of Steve Young, music director for District 283, arrived at the Senior Center in Kendrick at noon. The young people gave us a special treat with their Christmas music. We all enjoyed their lovely voices and wish to thank each of them and Steve Young for their thoughtfulness.

The choir, with Kelly Cuddy accompanying them on the piano, sang, "Do You Hear What I Hear?", choir; "One Tin Soldier", duet by Robin Sanders and Bronwyn Manfull; "Jazz Gloria", choir; "O, Holy Night", solo by Beth Harris; "Christmas Song", choir and soloist Tony Moran.

Dec. 19th, members of the Swing Band and Concert Choir from KHS, under the direction of Steve Young, entertained the Seniors with several selections of holiday music. We enjoyed it very much. We always look forward to the young people's visits to us. In appreciation we would like to thank each in name: Members of the choir: Tony Moran, Marie Burdick, Cathy Hamilton, Cathy Bryan, Carolyn Stonebraker, Robin Sanders, Wendy Snyder, Jane Glenn, Jean Glenn, Bronwyn Manfull, Jerri Roy, Jackie Jones, Jamie Lohman, Mitch Cuddy, Rick Anderson, Alvin Wilson, John Siffow, Eldon Wilson, Randy Benjamin and Steve Lohman.

Members of the Band are Slade Zumhofs, Brian Thornton, Kelly Cuddy, Kristen Cuddy, Paula Fliger, Julie Smith, Jill Rossiter, Amy Noren, Carmine McKnight and Rheanda Wilson.

Bronwyn Manfull also sang a solo, "Snow Bird" which was very beautiful. Thanks to all and have a very Merry Christmas.

After the music, lunch was served, followed with a presentation of volunteer awards by Ruth White. These were presented to many who had helped with the many tasks that have to be done at our center. To name all would be impossible.

Then it was the Seniors turn, when they surprised Ruth and Bill White with a money tree in recognition for the many things they do beyond their duties. We also surprised Louise Pea with an Amayllis bulb for being so nice to us. 'Tend the afternoon, Mrs. Santa Claus (alias Mabel Glenn) arrived with treats for all.

Merry Christmas to all from the Golden Sunset Senior Citizens.

Steve Lohman Wins Crazy Legs Contest

The P. H. A. Chapter sponsored a Crazy Leg Contest from Dec. 15-19. In the contest, four unknown boys from the Kendrick J. V. and Varsity basketball teams had pictures taken of their legs, which were posted in the hall. Everyone voted with pencils on the set that they thought were "craziest."

The winner and contestants were named at the Pep Rally Friday. Darren Clemenhagen, Kevin Fliger, and Carl Ware all received a certificate with their leg's picture on it, along with a pair of socks. Steve Lohman, winner, received a certificate and 3 pair of socks.

We'd like to thank everyone who voted and participated in the event. Congratulations, Steve!

Troy Welsh is spending Christmas vacation early with grandmother Mrs. Fran Holden and his dad, Jake Welsh. Troy came down with Chickenpox before vacation and will be continuing his visit through Christmas.

Mrs. Fran Holden is recovering from knee surgery this week. Speedy recovery, Fran!

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lettenmaier of Lewiston and Rod Sangster of Anatoe were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Lettenmaier last week.

Tuesday Mari Welsh, Julietta, spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. John Lettenmaier.

Leah Hansen, Seattle, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Holden and Jake Welsh during the vacation. Jake and Leah called on Mr. and Mrs. Tom Marek and son this week and also visited Mr. and Mrs. John Lettenmaier.

Early Christmas—

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Trautman of Craigmont, Mrs. Marianne Trautman of Clarkston and Mr. and Mrs. Don Candler and son of Bovill, were all early Christmas party guests of Helen Cowger. The family decided to take advantage of the good traveling weather to Helen's house. They enjoyed Christmas dinner and a gift exchange.

Saturday, Mrs. Muriel Schoeffler and Helen Cowger drove to Moscow. Helen called on her mother, Cora Jennings, at the nursing home.

Thursday was a bad day for accidents in this area. Four mishaps occurred from Cameron to Kendrick. Allen Stamper was one of those unlucky drivers. His pickup turned on its side near the bottom of the hill. No injuries were reported here from any of the accidents.

Saturday and Sunday the Allen Stamper family visited the Cecil Stamper and Jerry Stamper families of Ahsahka. Saturday the Allen Stamper family called on Mr. and Mrs. Damon Schneider.

Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Ermine Stamper enjoyed a birthday party in her honor at the home of her son, Mr. and Mrs. Woody Cox, Orofino. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bill Tuominen; Mr. and Mrs. David Stamper and family; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Stamper and family; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Matson and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Stamper and family.

Wednesday, Mrs. Dorine Stamper drove to Kooskia to visit Mr. and Mrs. Terry Hale.

Mrs. Dorine Stamper and Renee, Mrs. Julie Cooper and Kelly all enjoyed the basketball games at Kendrick this weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Wells drove to Pullman to attend a square dance Federation meeting Sunday.

Early Christmas—

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Watson, Mr. and Mrs. David Watson and Codi Rae, Mr. and Mrs. Duane Watson, Heidi and Jeremy, Mr. and Mrs. Rick Wilson and Ryan and Ester Souders were all guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Finke Sunday.

Monday Mr. and Mrs. George Finke plan to attend the Paradise Villa Nursing Home Christmas Party and to visit Lena Baack.

ONCE AGAIN IT'S CHRISTMAS

Once again it is the wonderful season of Christmas—wonderful not only because we pause to give thanks to God for His Greatest Gift, our Savior Jesus—but because we drawn to each other with special feeling of warmth, understanding and love that we seldom experience as we move through our lives at other times throughout the year. In our hearts we know the curt reply, the unfeeling remark, the thoughtless neglect is not really us; but it is only at the season of Christmas many of us pause to reflect on our great blessings and we remember we are all truly the children of God.

May that special warmth we feel fill the hearts of people everywhere. May each and everyone of you be touched by the spirit of Christmas and may it remain in your hearts in the year to come.

Jacks spoke Lewistonese

By Susan Tiede

"When I arrived at Lewiston, I couldn't speak English," said Jim Jacks of Craigmont.

When asked what he spoke, "WAAAAAAA" was the reply. Jacks, noted for his sense of humor, was born at Lewiston.

One time he had a railroad spike he kept telling his wife, Priscilla, he was going to use to hang the calendar. She kept throwing the spike out in the garage. One day, she came home and he'd hung the calendar on the wall with the railroad spike.

He'd cut off the spike's head and attached it to a nail. Jacks is also known for his inventions.

He has a workshop for both metal and wood-working in his garage. He retired from farming this year and some of his inventions went on the auction block with the farm equipment.

He made a couple of "lowboy mobile machinery rigs." They were self-propelled machinery trailers, but everything went hydraulic and on rubber tires, so they were out of date even if they worked pretty good, he said.

He made bells out of a piece of metal shaft for Christmas gifts several years ago. Priscilla has a "stage chest" Jim built for her. He cut the half-inch boards himself and made the trim out of tin on the grinder.

He can make anything he puts his mind to, she said. She saw a table made out of a tree cross section she liked and he made her one. It has bark covered trees for legs and a plastic finished top with rocks in the hollow center.

Jim also did rock carving and claims credit for the "baby face" rock carving on Granite Creek in the Elk City area.

"In 1929, Bill Carson and I were trapping that area. One spring day, I was sitting in the cabin door and thought I'd chisel Granite Creek 1929 in the rock.

"I saw a rock knob and thought it looked like a baby face so I went to work with a cold chisel and hammer."

That one afternoon's work in early March 1929 has brought much speculation and legends as to how the baby came to being and its significance.

Jacks and Carson trapped coyote, bobcat, lynxcats, mink, weasels and a few skunks along the South Fork. He noted that skunk fur used to be quite valuable.

From trapping, Jacks moved to Elk City as a mechanic for five years. He also worked in the Elk City mines, both hard rock and placer.

When WW II came along, he moved to Moscow to work at Inland Motor Chevrolet Garage for five years before he bought the Lakeview Hotel in Winchester from his mother, Louise Jacks.

"It was a 25 room boarding house with mostly mill workers and a few loggers that came in for the weekend. It wasn't elaborate. We cooked many family style meals," he said.

"When I got rheumatic fever, I sold the Lakeview then went to Red River Hot Springs and cured for a month before starting a radiator shop in Craigmont. I've been here ever since," he said.

Craigmont was a lot larger than it is now, Jacks noted.

He also had the Chevron station before he married Priscilla Olson and didn't have time to farm and run the station.

Priscilla Mounce was raised in Tammany and took her teacher's training at Lewi-Clark. Her first job was at Kendrick where she had all eight grades and "a 5 year old that dropped in to visit from time to time."

They had to pack fresh water by the bucketful, but the kids liked to do things for the teacher, she said. They also had another side

"One day, there were 4-5 night crawlers laid out on my desk when I came in. They thought I'd cut a caper.

"I said, 'Oh my, must be going fishing,'" then put them in the wastebasket. That took the starch out of them (the students)," Priscilla said.

She married Glade Olson and moved to Craigmont planning to retire from teaching.

She started teaching again at the Mt. Pleasant School, southeast of Craigmont, which was about a half mile from their home, when their daughter, Jean, (now Mrs. Robert Zolber) was young.

She said she would teach until she got tired and quit for a term or two until the school board came to get her back.

"I had grades 1-8, but there wasn't always students for every grade. I enjoyed teaching, It was a nice school—inside toilets, room to play, a library and school room plus an outside water pump.

"All the parents used to come to everything at school. They'd dance and everyone mixed. They brought the youngsters by horse and sled or rode horses over the fields in the winter. School buses didn't start until 1947-48.

"After 4 years at Mt. Pleasant, I retired for a few years before the school board came after me."

They didn't have enough teachers at Craigmont. She taught the fifth and sixth grades in the old school building.

After Glade died, Priscilla stayed in Lewiston winters and worked at C. C. Anderson's Department Store until the school board came after her again.

She taught from 1952-1969 when she retired. She has taught many local residents over the years and remembers them as they were when in school.

One year when the teachers were getting their classrooms ready for school, she fell in the hall and broke both arms.

She had to take some time off, but when she returned, the kids were helpful and did things for her all the time, she said.

After she retired, the grandkids and great-grands kept her busy. She also has several hobbies along with her collections of Avon bottles and cups and saucers.

She started her cup and saucer collection when they went to Canada on their honeymoon.

"Jim collects anything he can get.—bottles of all kinds, grease fittings and a garage full of other items," she said.

He's resurrected three old hacksaws. One is a 1905 electric. He uses water to dissolve rust—"water makes rust so I soak them in water, not oil," he said.

Another is driven by a flat belt and had a patent applied for in 1842. It runs 60 revolutions per minute. He is writing the Planisfield, N. J., Chamber of Commerce to see what they know about the hacksaws manufactured there in the mid-1800's.

Jacks has a lot of faith in Chambers of Commerce. He has worked with Craigmont's for years and was in charge of this year's Community Chest Drive. He was an early Lion's Club member and an eight-year secretary-treasurer of the Craigmont Credit Union.

He has done quite a bit of carpentry work in the area and plans to do more in his retirement. When he doesn't have anything else to do, he whittles. He still has three carved chains which range from 3-6 feet long.

He carves white fir and ends up with "a chain longer than the original piece of wood. You gain about a quarter-inch in length with each link," he said.

He also puts a swivel in each chain to add difficulty to the projects, so retirement isn't "doing nothing" for Priscilla and Jim, it's having more time to devote to hobbies.

Just what is a lentil?

By Susan Tiede

This fall lentil growers took their product to the consumer in a rather unique way. Lentil growers' wives served a lentil soup and a lentil salad at area supermarkets.

Harold Blaine, administrator of the Idaho and Washington Pea and Lentil Commissions, thought a lot of people here in the pea and lentil capital of the world didn't know what a lentil looked like and hadn't tasted one either, said Mrs. Jim (Clarice) Knowlton of Melrose.

She was one of a number of area women that participated in the program.

The commission sent out a letter to lentil growers to see if there was interest in preparing the product samples for supermarkets in Lewiston, Moscow, Pullman, Colfax and Spokane.

After the initial contact was made, they held a meeting at the commission office in Moscow to prepare them for serving the samples.

They were furnished with recipes from the commission and signed up for dates between Oct. 13 and Nov. 15 to put in 6-7 hour shifts at the supermarkets.

The commission had arranged with Rosauers, Buttreys and Safeway to have the samples served. Two or three women worked at each of the stores.

The commission also persuaded several Spokane restaurants to participate in the promotion by adding lentil soup to their menu.

The in-store program was big in Spokane, but one store didn't have lentils after the women got there, she said. Mrs. Knowlton served the lentil dishes at Family Foods in Lewiston with Loretta Vowels and Micki Vowels of Princeton. They sold all the lentils there.

She and Vivian Scoville of Lewiston served lentils at Buttreys' and sold all but a couple of packages of the lentils. Lentils are usually not a fast moving item, she said.

She has looked for lentils in other stores since their demonstration and is surprised that the same amount of lentils a farmer sells for 22 to 30 cents will bring up to $1.09 in the same area's grocery stores.

One of the days they served the lentil soup and salad, an editorial appeared in the Lewiston Morning Tribune about the lack of lentil soup on restaurant menus. People made a lot of comments about it, but it was a coincidence.

Kids liked the lentil soup best. One little boy sneaked back for 4 of their 1 ounce servings, but told us, "Mommy doesn't know."

"Lentils are quick and easy to cook. We stressed they can be cooked in 20 minutes which is a help to working mothers," she said.

"Lentils don't have to be soaked like beans before they can be cooked. We had three new recipe cards to give out to people who wanted to make them at home after sampling ours."

Mrs. Knowlton made her soup the morning they served it and used her crockpot and two belonging to her daughters-in-law to keep the soup warm in the store. They served 250-300 at each store, she said.

They have received quite a few letters at the commission office requesting recipe booklets. They also advertised in Spokane that free recipe books were available.

Every year, they come out with several new recipes, so if you have an older lentil booklet, there are probably some recipes you don't have and are available from the commission office at Box 8566, Moscow.

The pea and lentil commissions hire a Seattle advertising agency to work with pea and lentil promotions. They have a test kitchen with nutritionists and creative cooks to come up with new ways of using lentils, Jim Knowlton said.

Knowlton is a former pea and lentil commission member and has toured the test kitchens.

In addition to peas and lentils, Knowltons and their Clarice Knowlton showed an example of the lentil salads served at area supermarkets last month.

sons, Terry and Dallas, raise wheat, barley and beef on their place on the west rim of Big Canyon near Peck.

Knowlton said the idea for a lentil salad came from one of the secretaries thinking their recipe booklet needed a salad.

They used to concentrate on institutional recipes. The commission had a limited amount of funds and thought that was where the most product could be sold with the advertising budget.

They have also made some booklets for home economists to use in demonstrating how to cook peas and lentils and are working on selling the public on lentils.

Lentils have been used in varying amounts for a number of years. It is an old world food, she said. It is high in protein, low fat and has a number of vitamins and minerals.

Different countries have slightly different strains of lentils with Chilean lentils being raised here since the 1930's.

The Chilean variety is the largest, easiest cooking lentil. A new smaller red variety is being grown on a small scale here, he said.

The following lentil salad and lentil soup are the ones they served at the supermarkets. The baked lentils are one Mrs. Knowlton added to the collection as it is a family favorite.

Washington-Idaho pea and Lentil Commissions
LENTIL CONFETTI SALAD
 ¼ pound (½ cup) lentils
 1½ cups water
 1 teaspoon salt
 1 cup cooked rice
 ½ cup bottled Italian dressing
 ½ cup tomatoes, seeded and diced

¼ cup chopped green pepper
 3 tablespoons chopped onion
 2 tablespoons each chopped celery and sliced pimento-stuffed green olives
 Chopped parsley

Wash and drain lentils. Place in heavy saucepan; add water and salt. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, about 20 minutes. DO NOT OVER-COOK: LENTILS SHOULD BE TENDER WITH SKIN INTACT. Drain immediately. Combine with cooked rice; pour dressing over mixture and refrigerate until cool. Add remaining ingredients except parsley; mix well. Garnish with parsley before serving. Makes about 5 servings.

Tip: Lentils require no soaking.

LENTIL SOUP
 1 cup lentils
 6 slices bacon, diced & fried
 ½ cup each diced celery and chopped onion
 ¼ teaspoon each thyme and rosemary
 4 cups water
 ¾ cup diced carrot
 1 teaspoon salt
 ½ bay leaf
 2½ cups diced tomatoes in

rich puree (S & W Brand)
 Rinse lentils; cover with 4 cups water. Add cooked bacon, carrot, onion, celery and seasonings. Bring to boil; simmer, covered, 45 minutes. Add tomatoes and cook 15 minutes longer. Remove bay leaf. Makes 4-6 servings.

Christmas carols were sung in German

Emma Stolte recalled childhood Christmases when carols were sung in German.

By Susan Tiede

"When I was young, we sang German Christmas songs as we were near a German settlement," recalls Mrs. Henry (Emma) Stolte of Melrose.

Her parents and 3 children came to the United States when Emma (Renken) Stolte was 3. Following her Munsterman grandparents to this country, they moved about 1½ miles west of Melrose which was on the edge of a German settlement. Many persons of German descent still live in the area.

Emma can still read and write German. Several years ago, she and husband, Henry, went to Germany to visit his relatives as she didn't have any left over there. The trip was a 50th wedding anniversary present from their 7 children.

"We spoke both high and low German, so we didn't have any problems with the language which surprised the German," she said. While there, they saw the house where Emma was born and her father operated a bakery.

At Christmas, mother and father both baked for the Christmas season, she said. Her father worked at a Spokane bakery for awhile, but did not like it as it wasn't like German bakeries.

"They always worked to make it a nice Christmas for us kids. We got practical gifts. My sister and I would get dolls too. Nobody around here had store bought dresses. The mothers had to make the dresses on treadle sewing machines.

"We usually just had a small family gathering for Christmas.

"At home, we had a small tree, but at church (Good Hope Lutheran), they had a big tree. The tree had all different colors of candles—white, pink...only white candles were manufactured for Christmas trees."

The 4 inch tall candles were put in holders and clamped to the tree. They had to take a long stick to light the candles all around the tree at church.

The church candles were lit on Christmas and New Year's Eve. The rest of the tree decorations were like now with a star for the top.

In addition to church Christmas programs, they had one at school. Emma went to the Fairview School and later Melrose School.

"At Melrose, we had the Christmas program upstairs of the big 2 story school house."

Melrose then had at least 30 families, a store, post office and church.

One couple now lives at Melrose and there are an abandoned church and several other buildings remaining.

At Melrose, some of the students rode horses to school and kept them in the barn by the post office and fed them at noon.

The small room was so full of children, the one on the end of the row had to sit on a chair, she said.

"We walked about 2 miles to school with the Meisner Lethrum, and Damman children and Katie Stelljes. We also had to walk to church or catch a ride with Damman in his sled in the winter until my dad got horses."

Man back in Emma Stolte's youth

The Renken children spent about a year living with their Munsterman uncles after their mother died when Emma was 10. Their father decided the whole family should be back together. In the summer months, when they didn't have to go to school, they had to walk to Melrose in the evenings to get their mail as they didn't have rural mailboxes, she said. After Henry and Emma were married, they moved to a farm about a mile from Melrose where they also raised cattle, pigs, frying and laying chickens.

Their 7 children attended the Melrose School then Gifford before they went to college or other school.

Emma likes to garden and raise flowers both indoors and outdoors. She has been a member of her church's women's organization for the 55-56 years since it started. Last week she was busy making popcorn balls for the children's Christmas program.

She is also planning Christmas and tree decorations for those of her 7 children, 17 grandchildren and 1 great grandson that may be here for the holidays.

Farm-grown fuel eyed

Some backyard gardeners take pride in growing giant sunflowers, but bigger is not better so far as commercial growers are concerned.

University of Idaho agricultural researchers say new dwarf varieties of sunflowers are expected to find favor with farmers who have encountered problems in harvesting tall-growing varieties.

"The ideal sunflower for dryland farms in our area will mature in mid-August. It will be a dwarf, the right size to be harvested directly with a combine," said Dick Auld, University of Idaho agronomist and plant breeder.

Several commercial hybrids that were evaluated in this year's national sunflower trials appear to be "very promising," Auld reported.

Agricultural scientists in Idaho, Washington and Oregon are working in close cooperation as they seek ways to make the growing of sunflowers and other oil-seed crops more profitable for Pacific Northwest growers, the UI scientist added.

Auld said oil-seed crops are likely to become increasingly important because vegetable oil can be used for food purposes and also as tractor fuel.

He said current research at the University of Idaho College of Agriculture is aimed at these goals:

—Testing the use of vegetable oil as a fuel in diesel engines.

—Studying methods for on-farm processing of vegetable oil from sunflower, safflower and rape—oil-seed crops which perform well in the Pacific Northwest.

—Evaluating yields of dwarf sunflowers and improved varieties of other oil-seed crops.

—Trying to find a winter-hardy safflower variety that can be planted in the fall.

—Screening new varieties of winter rape, in quest of a variety that will be superior both in its yield of high-quality oil and in the feeding value of its oil-meal.

With oil-bearing seeds presently in strong demand, sunflowers, safflower and rape are seen as attractive cash crops by some growers in dryland farming areas, Auld said.

"Vegetable oil also offers farmers the prospect of gaining independence and self-sufficiency regarding their fuel needs.

"In the future, if an emergency arises and diesel oil becomes unavailable, farmers might keep their diesel tractors in operation with homegrown vegetable oil," Auld said.

Production of oil-seed crops is not difficult and farmers will be able to process vegetable oil "much more readily" than they could distill fuel alcohol, the UI agronomist pointed out.

At present, vegetable oil is "not an economically attractive alternative" to diesel fuel and researchers still have "unanswered questions" concerning the longtime effects of using vegetable oil in diesel engines, Auld emphasized.

"Agricultural engineers say it's possible that fuel additives may have to be added to vegetable oil to prevent damage to diesel engines. They're also considering engine modifications as a means of improving utilization of vegetable oil as a fuel," he said.

In the average 162-pound man, 43 percent of his weight is muscle; 14 percent fat; 14 percent bone and marrow.

This is the way they used to plow a field.

Rotate tillage, scientist advises

Crop rotation has become a well-accepted agronomic practice. But tillage rotation?

A University of Idaho soil scientist believes either rotating tillage systems, or adopting a minimum tillage system, offers the best hope for saving energy and soil without paying a yield penalty.

Professor Roger W. Harder of the UI Plant and Soil Sciences Department recommends using no-till for fall-seeded crops and minimum or conventional tillage for spring-seeded crops in the rotation.

He presented his findings at the 1980 Idaho State Wheat Growers Association convention in Boise.

An example of a rotation where this could be used is wheat-wheat-pea or wheat-wheat-lentil. The two winter wheat crops could be no-tilled and the third year pea or lentil crop could be conventionally tilled.

This would provide one year out of three when the plow would be used, breaking up the soil and mixing residues and fertilizers to plow depth.

The two years of no-till with the winter crop would reduce the number of field operations and give good erosion control during the critical winter and early spring runoff periods.

This tillage rotation principle could also be used with other cropping sequences, Harder said.

He explained that intermittent use of the moldboard plow will go a long way towards eliminating certain weed and insect populations and improving plant nutrient availability—all problems that have appeared under continuous no-till.

Harder's work is part of a comprehensive, federally funded effort by Idaho, Oregon and Washington scientists to find "Solutions to Environmental and Economic Problems" (STEEP).

This tri-state project seeks to reduce soil losses and the resulting sediment loads in the region's waters without disrupting crop production or farm incomes.

Wishing you a very happy Christmas and exciting New Year.

Wheat yields set records, prices hold firm

The 1980 U.S. wheat crop developed through a variety of conditions—from drought to excessive rains—but reached a record 2.36 billion bushels, 10 percent larger than last year.

On the strength of this crop, total 1980-81 marketing year supplies rose to 3.3 billion bushels, also the largest ever.

But the price dampening effects of the larger wheat supply have been more than offset. While wheat prices began the season below year-ago levels, prospects for record disappearance—particularly strong exports—coupled with cautious farmer marketing and reduced feed grain and oilseed supplies, have boosted prices well above last year.

Wheat in the farmer-owned reserve was released in late October when farm prices reached $4.20 a bushel.

For the season, the average farm price is expected to range from $3.95 to $4.25, compared with 1979-80's $3.82.

Expectations of another banner U.S. export year were heightened further when China's import requirements were revised upward and it became apparent that Southern Hemisphere countries would have reduced exportable supplies.

Thus, total U.S. share of international wheat trade in 1980-81 is projected at 46 percent, compared with 44 percent in 1979-80.

Global wheat production in 1980-81 is forecast at around 440 million tons, 5 percent above the low outturn in 1979-80. Except for India and China, all major Northern Hemisphere producers harvested larger crops.

Dry conditions have reduced crop prospects significantly in the Southern Hemisphere. Total utilization at 447 million tons implies a further drawdown of world wheat stocks in 1980-81 of about 7 million tons.

Thus year-end stocks, estimated at 72 million tons, would represent 16 percent of the world's yearly utilization, the lowest level since before 1960.

U.S. domestic use may rise slightly because of an expected expansion in wheat feeding and continuing growth in food use. Since total 1980-81 disappearance will absorb most of the record crop, end-of-season stocks will remain close to last June's 903 million bushels.

The supplies of the various wheat classes vary considerably this year. Record harvests of Hard Red, Soft Red, and White winter wheats mean alltime high supplies for each—up 7, 36, and 25 percent respectively from last season.

In turn, adverse weather hit the spring crops, reducing production prospects and creating some quality problems. This year's Hard Red Spring supply is down by 12 percent and Durum by 15 percent.

Wheat producers had no planting restrictions for their 1980 crop. Prices are holding relatively strong in spite of the record crop.

With current prospects pointing toward higher price levels next season, and no set-aside requirements for the 1981 crop, producers are likely to expand their plantings—possibly to a record acreage.

TOXICOLOGY CENTER EYED

Animal and human health specialists in Idaho and Montana are investigating whether to establish a regional environmental toxicology center to serve as a clearing house for information on toxic substances.

Dr. Loren Koller, assistant dean of the Idaho faculty of the Northwest College of Veterinary Medicine, said scientists in Idaho and Montana have expressed interest in the possibility of a center which could serve as a focal point for problem solving and information on

Celebrate A Special Occasion With An Easy-To-Prepare Dinner

Celebrate a special occasion with this elegant, but easy-to-prepare dinner. (If using frozen hens, remember to thaw them early in the day in the refrigerator.) Scotch Glazed Cornish Hens are perfect party fare when partnered with asparagus hollandaise and an endive salad.

SCOTCH GLAZED CORNISH HENS

- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1/2 cup diced smoked ham
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon rubbed sage

- 4 Cornish game hens (about 3/4 pound each)
- 1/2 cup orange marmalade
- 1/4 cup Teacher's Scotch
- Frosted grapes
- Parsley

In skillet, brown mushrooms and cook onions and parsley until tender in butter. Stir in rice, ham, salt and sage. Use to fill cavities in hens. Truss. Arrange on rack in roasting pan. Bake at 400° F. for 20 minutes. In saucepan, combine marmalade and Scotch. Heat, stirring, until jam is melted. Brush on hens. Bake 20 minutes longer, basting frequently with glaze. Serve garnished with grapes and parsley.

BANANAS TEACHER

- 4 small ripe bananas
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar

- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 3 tablespoons banana liqueur
- 3 tablespoons Teacher's Scotch
- Vanilla ice cream

Peel bananas and cut into quarters. Brush with lemon juice. In chafing dish, heat sugar and butter over direct heat until sugar is melted. Add bananas and cook, turning once, about 2 minutes on each side. Add cinnamon. Sprinkle with liqueur. Heat Scotch and add. Serve over ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

BAKED LENTILS, U.S.A.
For 12 hearty servings, each a rounded half cup:

- 1 pound (2 and 1-3 cups) lentils, washed
- 1 onion stuck with 3 whole cloves
- 1 bay leaf
- 5 cups water
- 2 teaspoons salt

Combine in a Dutch oven or in top-of-the-range heat-proof cooking ware. Bring water to boiling point. Cover; simmer 30 minutes.

- Without draining, stir in 1/2 cup catsup
- 1/4 cup molasses
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

2 tablespoons minced onion
Top with 4 slices uncooked bacon, cut in thirds. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F. (moderate oven) for 1 hour. Uncover last few minutes to brown bacon. Serve with brown bread, relishes, and not much else!

Variations: (1) Omit bacon. Just before serving, sprinkle liberally with shredded Cheddar cheese. Allow to melt and brown. (2)

Top lentil mixture with panbroiled link sausage; brown before taking from oven. (3) Before baking, stir into mixture inch-thick slices of Italian, Spanish or German sausage. To serve, sprinkle top with grated Parmesan cheese. (4)

Combine the cooked lentils only with 1 1/2 cups diced cooked ham, 1/4 cup minced onion, and 1 clove minced garlic cooked lightly in butter. Add 2 tablespoons snipped parsley, 1/2 teaspoon crushed dried thyme, 1/2 cup red wine. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour.

Note: It's a good idea to prepare enough Lentils for several dishes, to be refrigerated and used as desired or made up into casserole dishes to freeze for future enjoyment. Lentils taste so good in so many dishes, a popular round-the-calendar, indoor-outdoor treat, served as salads, meat accompaniments, Whole Meal Casseroles.

Any one of these Lentil Casseroles is good for potluck suppers, and cook-outs. Or carry them in insulated containers for picnics and camp meals. Year-round Good Eating!

Swine growers consider UI sow facility

By Susan Tiede
Decisions on two major issues before the Idaho Pork Producers Association convention at Pocatello were deferred until a vote of the membership could be taken, according to Roy Baldus of Nezperce, who is vice president of the association. Baldus spoke to a joint meeting of the Camas Prairie Swine Growers and the Twin River Swine Growers at Craigmont Nov. 20. Baldus is president of the Camas Prairie Swine Growers. The possibility of building a 30-36 sow facility at the University of Idaho will be going to a membership ballot. The proposed project would be financed by swine growers donating one hog for sale. Currently, much of the U of I swine program is with Washington State University and the difference in semester starting times causes some problems for students. The proposed Idaho facility would be more vocational while WSU is research oriented.

Baldus thought they would be sponsoring a meeting with representatives from the University later this year to explain the proposal before it goes to a vote.

Raising the "dimes-for-profit" to 20 cents was the second issue before the convention which will go back to the membership.

"They want to do it as an entire state, but knew this district would not favor it," Baldus said.

The doubling of "dimes-for-profit" would give the National Pork Council twice as much money. Much of the money would go for advertising with some television promotions.

"If it weren't for the National Pork Council, we wouldn't be eating cured bacon now," Baldus said. They worked to keep cured bacon from being banned, but the opposition still hasn't given up the fight.

A group promoting animal welfare which would ban raising livestock in confinement has also caused some concern among livestock producers.

Martell Smith of Blackfoot was selected as Idaho's Pork All-American nominee during the convention. He will be participating in the national program. Larry Arnzen, Cottonwood, received the award last year.

This year's convention also included a pork producers' trade show from Nebraska, Baldus said.

CONSERVATION EARNS TAX CREDITS

Farmers and ranchers who have spent money to reduce pollution and promote soil and water conservation may be eligible for tax relief.

"Substantial savings" in income tax bills are possible when credit is claimed for the costs of erosion control practices, according to University of Idaho specialists Neil Meyer and Chris Everts.

Meyer, an agricultural economist, and Everts, a specialist in the control of nonpoint source pollution, said tax-deductible expenses include most conservation projects involving treatment of earth and construction of earthen structures.

They cited these examples: leveling, grading, terracing, contouring, wind-break planting, construction of diversion channels, drainage ditches, irrigation ditches, earthen dams, water courses, outlets and ponds.
