YIELD, STRIPE RUST IMPORTANT IN SPRING WHEAT SELECTION

Grain specialists at the University of Idaho say farmers selecting spring wheat seed should pick a variety that not only yields well and has high grain quality, but is also resistant to stripe rust and other diseases.

More than 38 million bushels of spring wheat were harvested in 1979 in Idaho, said Richard E. Ohms, crop management specialist with the UI Cooperative Extension Service.

Two of the white wheat varieties used frequently by farmers in recent years are no longer recommended because of stripe rust problems in 1981.

"Fielder and Fieldwin have been the most widely grown varieties in recent years," said Donald W. Sunderman, a U. S. Department of Agricultural Research Service wheat breeder at the UI Research and Extension Center at Aberdeen.

"However, they are susceptible to the new races of stripe rust which were prevalent in parts of Washington, Oregon and western Idaho in 1981," he added. "Yield reductions of 40 percent to 60 percent have been observed when severe stripe rust infections occur."

Among the white wheat varieties to select from that are resistant to stripe rust are Dirkin, Owens, Twin, Urquie and Waverly. Red wheat varieties with resistance include Borah, McKay and Wampum. Yields and grain quality of these varieties will vary.

"Variety selection can be one of the most important decisions a grain grower can make," said Ohms. "A grower should consider new varieties that may have a combination of desirable characteristics."

Besides resistance to diseases such as stripe rust, powdery mildew, ergot and leaf rust, growers will want to consider the maturity date, planting date, straw strength, milling quality and yield.

The choice of a hard red or soft white spring wheat, for example, depends on both the growing and milling requirements.

"Hard red spring wheat varieties do not normally yield as well as soft white wheats when grown under irrigation in southern Idaho," said Sunderman, noting that they will produce wheat with an acceptable protein level and satisfactory milling and baking quality if there is adequate nitrogen fertilizer.

Clothing Can "Color" Opinions About You, UI Specialist Says

Moscow — Does your clothing reflect the real you? If people react to you differently than you would like, maybe the color of your clothing is sending the wrong message.

Ernestine Porter, textiles and clothing specialist with the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service, says that colors cause physical and psychological reactions in people. "Clothing colors send emotional messages about the wearer. Therefore, if people don't seem to react to you the way you would like, take a close look at the colors you are wearing," she says.

Light colors generally seem more cheerful, active and feminine than dark colors. However, dark colors are viewed as sophisticated, reserved and business-like.

True colors are cheerful and exciting while subdued or greyed col-

BIRDS NEED EXTRA RATIONS DURING SEVERE WEATHER

This is the time of the year—with snow on the ground and chilly temperatures—that most birds need extra rations.

And even if the good samaritan doesn't know a junco from a cedar waxwing, it's fun to watch the birds cluster around a feeder in the yard.

Most of the smaller birds are seed eaters and much of their food source is cut off by a snowcover. Extreme cold also causes them to burn more calories, according to Dick Norell, Department of Fish and Game.

He suggests that if feeders are installed, they should have some overhead protection. Or, says the state game manager, if the feed is placed on the ground it should be under or near cover to protect the birds.

Feed that includes all of the necessary ingredients can be purchased and such goodies as bread crumbs and oatmeal can come right off the kitchen shelf. The birds also need suet or the fat from beef or pork, plus grit to aid digestion, Norell said.

Water can be another necessity and it must be changed often in freezing weather.

Game birds such as pheasant, Hungarian partridge, chukar and quail also come up short of food in winter weather.

Cracked corn, wheat and barley provide good feed. It should be placed in or near cover and, if possible, it should be scattered on some hay so the birds can scratch—and don't forget the grit, Norell said.

"That's why the birds, particularly pheasant, are seen along roadways during the winter. They are searching for grit in the bare spots," he said.

Idaho citizens will have an opportunity to help nongame species in another way when they file their state income tax returns this year. The tax forms include a space where a contribution can be earmarked for nongame management.

If Idahoans follow the pattern of other states with similar programs, they will provide about $48,000 the first year.

ors are quieting and restrained. Red, orange and yellow—warm colors—are lively, while cool colors such as blues, green and neutrals are restful and soothing. Cool colors recede while neutrals are reserved or aloof.

Dark colors are slimming while light or bright colors enlarge. Porter suggests deciding on what image you want to project on a particular day, then dressing in colors that will evoke that reaction.

Kendrick Girls Dump Potlatch

In a make-up game last Monday, Kendrick used strong defense to defeat the Potlatch Loggers, 63-43. The game was made up after a January 5th contest was postponed due to snow.

The Tigers held Potlatch scoreless for the first four minutes of the game, and raced to a 15-5 first quarter lead. By halftime that had stretched their lead to 15, 33-18.

In the second half, Coach Brian Pendleton allowed his younger players to get playing experience, as the district tournament is fast approach-

Kendrick Girls Breeze by Asotin

The Kendrick girls traveled to Asotin Saturday for a non-league basketball game. The Tigers overcome a third quarter defensive lapse and went on the wallop the Asotin Panthers, 61-40.

The Tigers were on, both defensively and offensively in the first quarter, jumping out to an 18-6 lead by the end of the period.

In second quarter, the Tigers continued to score, adding 14 points to their total. However they allowed 11 by Asotin. The score at half was 32-17, Kendrick.

In the third quarter the Tigers forgot to play defensive. Asotin scored 19 points, cutting 7 points off the Tigers lead.

In the fourth quarter, leading 44-36, the Tigers did their thing. They performed adequately, making the game a total team effort. It was an outstanding victory for the Tigers over the improving Logger team.

The Tigers were led in scoring by Lisa Vallem, the leading regional scorer, with 17 points. Bronwyn Manfull, who had a good shooting night, tossed in 14. Jane Glenn added 8.

The victory raised the Tiger's record to 12-2 overall, and 8-0 in league.

put it all together, scoring 17 points while holding Asotin to just 4, turning the game into a runaway.

Lisa Vallem scored a season high 28 points to lead the Tigers. Jane and Jean Glenn had 12 and 10 respectively.

The Tigers, who have just 2 games left, are now 14-2 and 9-0 in league. If they should beat Troy in their last game, they will have a 4-0 record against all league opponents in the last 2 years.

THE DALLAS COWBOYS

The Dallas Cowboys are a professional football team. They wore white and green. Whenever they run, they run with all their might.

My favorite players are: Tony Dorsett, Tony Hill and Danny White.
