Roberts Return From Vacation In Australia

Ethel and Merle Roberts and Carol and Jerry Druffel of Uniontown returned February 16 from a 25-day trip to Fiji, Australia and New Zealand with the Washington Wheat Growers Association. Leaving Seattle January 22, a brief stop was made in Hawaii enroute to Fiji where an enjoyable three days were spent at a beautiful resort situated on the beach.

From there, they flew to Sidney for two days. While there, the high light was attending a play at the Opera House after a tour and dinner. Adelaide was the next stop, where they experienced the hottest weather of the tour—115 degrees. The group was met by Rex Krause from the Waite Agricultural Institute. Mr. Krause had spent several years at W. S. U. about 15 years ago so knew our area very well. A farm visit was very interesting and also, tours to vineyards and wineries which surprised the group as they were unaware of the growing wine production in Australia.

Traveling by train overnight, they arrived in Melbourne for four busy days. While there, they were taken to Geelong to see the huge export facilities. Australia has had a 5-year drought and at the facilities at Geelong, they had not received any wheat this year. There was no harvest to see in Australia as what little there was had been completed.

After ten days in Australia, they departed for ten days in New Zealand. After arid Australia, New Zealand was a delight with its green fields, cattle, sheep and horses. We left Auckland by motor coach for Rotorua, enroute stopping at a Fresian dairy cattle farm and the glow-worm caves. At Rotorua, they saw the Thermal Reserve, a Maori village and the AgriDome.

Then on to Wellington, New Zealand's capitol, where they visited the United States Embassy, which was very interesting to all. They flew to Invercargill, the southern most tip of the South Island and traveled by motor coach to Queenstown, a resort area. Flying out from there, a day was spent at Mt. Cook, a 12,349 foot mountain in the Southern Alps of New Zealand. From there, Christchurch was the next stop for three days before returning home. In Christchurch, the Roberts met two young ladies from Idaho who were working with the experimental station in the Antarctic. Imagine their surprise when it turned out one of them was Julia Uberuaga who lives in the Linville area!

It was a great trip with a congenial group of people and they enjoyed it immensely.

The F. F. A. Public Speaking contest was held in Moscow Feb. 12 David Cvcancara placed third in the Public Speaking contest while John Baldus took fifth in the Extemporaneous speaking, which is a contest where the contestant is given a topic and 30 minutes to prepare a speech on that topic. The speech is then delivered to a group of judges. Both of these contestants did very well.

American Falls Hatchery Renovation Underway

Construction has started on a $900,000 renovation project at American Falls Hatchery to put the 50-year-old facility back on line as a major producer of rainbow trout in Idaho, according to Ewan Parrish, Department of Fish and Game.

The work is scheduled for completion next October. Following startup, the hatchery will be rearing about 150,000 pounds of rainbow a year and most of them will be "catchables"—fish about 10 inches in length—when they are stocked, the hatcheries supervisor said.

"We will be producing them more efficiently and with less chance of disease," Parrish added, "and we will also then be able to utilize other hatcheries for specialty fish such as brown trout, mackinaw, kokanee and coho salmon."

The spring-fed pond which supplied water for the hatchery has been a major problem, he said, because it has become choked with nongame fish and an aquatic growth that has plugged channels and valves.

"And when there is little sunshine particularly during winter months, the algae and aquatic weeds critically reduce the supply of oxygen in the water and build up disease-causing nitrogen," Parrish explained.

The pond will be eliminated and the spring water will be contained and channeled to raceways through a new supply system, he said.

Twenty raceways are planned, with 10 each in a split level arrangement that will allow water in the top group to flow to the lower section. "We will also have wire netting above the raceways to discourage hungry birds," Parrish said.

Pond renovation is phase one in a program that calls for eventual replacement of the old buildings as funds become available, he said. "The life span of a hatchery is usually no more than 40 years and American Falls Hatchery is about 10 years beyond that point."

vice. Bulletin No. 621, "How to Prune Deciduous Trees," is priced at 50 cents and will be available soon at county extension offices.

The new publication contains pictures illustrating pruning techniques Hanley is a co-author of the publication, together with Arthur D. Partridge, UI professor of forest resources and W. Michael Colt, UI extension horticulturist.

Tree Pruning Should Be Done Regularly,

Hanley Says
Clifton Anderson,
Associate Agricultural Editor

Moscow, Idaho—Your shade trees will benefit from careful pruning before spring arrives, according to Don Hanley, University of Idaho extension forester.

"This is the time of the year when you can easily see dead and diseased wood that should be removed. Pruning during the dormant season also simplifies the clean-up effort and reduces the possibility of spreading disease organisms," Hanley said.

The extension forester said pruning and other maintenance chores should be carried out regularly. "Trees are often taken for granted and receive inadequate care. You should inspect trees at least once a year and take corrective action whenever it is needed," he said.

Trees that have been neglected for years may require extensive pruning, but they should not be pruned back all at once, Hanley said.

"Never remove more than one-third of the total branches at one time. Numerous water sprouts will form on heavily pruned trees. These water sprouts are weakly attached to the tree and can result in a malformed tree shape," the University of Idaho specialist said.

For the pruning process, hand saws that cut on the pull stroke are recommended. Pole saws are useful for reaching branches up to 20 feet in height. Lopping shears and hand shears are recommended for removal of light, small branches.

"It's important to have good tools. Don't use hedge shears! They will not make a clean cut on tree branches. Similarly, chain saws should not be used for final cuts on large branches," Hanley said.

Small lateral branches on young trees can be pruned back to an outward growing bud. When a limb on an older tree is to be cut, it should be removed completely without leaving a stub. "Cut it just outside the branch collar parallel with the trunk or adjacent larger branch," Hanley said.

Information for world-bee pruners is provided in a new publication of the UI Cooperative Extension Ser-

Tests—

On Mar. 9 and 10, the Idaho Proficiency Test will be given to all 9th graders, all sophomores and juniors who failed any portion of the test before and any student new to the Genesee school district who has never before taken the test.

The results of the Idaho Proficiency Test help the state of Idaho determine where the areas in the schools are weak and need strengthening. These tests also help G. H. S. compare how its students rate against those students from other school districts.

Students who pass the four sections of reading, writing, spelling, and mathematics on the test will be recognized by the placing of a State Board of Education Seal on their diploma.

Jr. High Basketball—

On Feb. 22, Genesee's Jr. High 7th and 8th grade girls played Deary here at home. The scores of the two games were 9-8 and 26-19 with Genesee winning both. Coach Linda

McGrath commented for us on the games. "The 7th grade game was close towards the end but they stuck together and played great as a team. The 8th graders played good. During the 2nd half we put on a press and controlled the rest of the game with good hustle and defense."

On Feb. 24, Genesee's Jr. High 7th and 8th grade boys played Kendrick there. The 7th graders lost 28-34 and the 8th graders won 27-14. Coach Ozzie Kanikkeberg commented on the 8th grade game. "It took awhile to get going but after the 2nd half we were pretty much in control." Darrin Munden, who coached the 7th grade team for the game said, "They made a few mistakes which hurt but we still played well." The Jr. High basketball games are exciting to watch so let help support these younger teams by cheering them on to victory.

Targeting Funds, People Cuts Soil, Water Losses

Boise—Targeting funds and people to tackle Idaho's most serious natural resource problems is cutting soil erosion and saving water in more than a dozen counties where losses have been high in the past.

"The targeting concept accelerates conservation treatment in areas where soil erosion threatens productivity and where water conservation needs are critical," said James N. Habiger, deputy state conservationist as USDA's Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

"SCS is zeroing in on the most critical resource problems nationwide," said Habiger. "Here in Idaho, we're finding that targeting more funds and people to the effort gets more conservation work done quicker and reduces soil and water losses."

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), has joined SCS by targeting cost-sharing funds in the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) to attack the same problem. Emphasis is placed on conservation practices that provide cost-effective solutions to resource problems and encourage conservation tillage methods to reduce excessive erosion.

Both water management and erosion control measures emphasize long term agreements covering installation of conservation practices over a period of several years.

"The cooperation of farmers and ranchers in making use of accelerated assistance has been excellent," Habiger said. "Since soil and water conservation is a voluntary program we depend on the personal interest of land users to make targeting work."

In Idaho's Panhandle, where seven counties received extra USDA help beginning in mid-1981, targeting has benefited about 67,000 acres. More than 800,000 tons of soil have been saved there because of targeting in fiscal year 1982.

Farmers have used several management practices including conservation tillage, terraces, and grassed waterways in their effort to save soil.

Soil conservation districts in the target area are publicizing conservation tillage and other practices with demonstrations, tours, radio and television announcements, newspaper and magazine articles, newsletters, slide shows, brochures, and meetings.

Targeting efforts also resulted in much more efficient irrigation practices in counties along the Snake River Plain where water application rates and timing of application were given special emphasis.

Irrigation field trials conducted in Bingham, Franklin, Gem and Payette counties last summer were highly successful. In Franklin County, alfalfa yields increased dramatically under better water management. As the result of two complete irrigation system evaluations in Gem County, it was found that system improvements would almost double efficiency and reduce energy requirements.

In Payette County, the installation of 8 pair of tensiometers to monitor the soil moisture profile reduced as much as 2 irrigations on 130 acres of potatoes, sugar beets, and orchards—resulting in labor savings.

During fiscal year 1983, USDA funds for targeting in Idaho will total more than $1.4 million. Counties in the critical soil erosion target area include Benwah, Clearwater, Idaho, Kootena, Latah, Lewis, NezPerce and Shoshone.

Counties in the critical water management target area include Ada, Bingham, Bonneville, Canyon, Cassia, Elmore, Franklin, Gem, Gooding, Jefferson, Jerome, Lincoln, Madison, Madison, Minidoka, Owyhee, Power, Payette, Twn Falls and Washington.

Targeting in this 20-county area for water management is a pilot project to allow use of specific erosion

Restoration Efforts Needed for Idaho Chinook Stocks

Every effort should be made to restore critically low stocks of Idaho chinook salmon, once one of the most production upper river runs in the Columbia system, says Monte Richards, Department of Fish & Game chief of fisheries.

In a statement before the Pacific Fisheries Management Council at its recent hearing in Boise, Richards pointed out that no other chinook in the Columbia Basin are capable of returning to Idaho spawning grounds 700-1,000 miles from the Pacific Ocean.

"Once lost, they can never be restored," he said.

The PFMC hearing was one of a series conducted in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and California before the group makes recommendations that establish the 1983 salmon plan for commercial and sport fishing in the Pacific. The plan is scheduled for completion about mid-March, when it goes to the Secretary of Commerce for approval.

"Special efforts must come from the PFMC to protect upper river stocks in setting ocean fishing regulations in 1983 and following years," Richards said.

He told council members that natural spawning escapements are at 10 percent or less of the levels of 20 years ago, thousands of miles of natural spawning and rearing streams are understocked, existing hatchery facilities are operating at less than full capacity and egg sources for new facilities are inadequate.

"There has not been an open sport fishing season for salmon in Idaho since 1978," Richards said.

"We are in the midst of a major national commitment to restore upper Columbia River runs of anadromous fish," Richards added. "The Fish and Wildlife Service has given restoration a high priority and several pieces of federal legislation, including the Northwest Power Planning Act, commit national resources to the restoration program."

A recent U. S.-Canada treaty regarding ocean salmon management sets up an international commitment to the same goal, Richards said. "But none of the ongoing conservation measures will yield the desired results unless sufficient spawning escapement is allowed," he said. "With the four poorest runs, on record in Idaho in the past four years and a dim outlook for 1983, restoration becomes extremely important. Every fish counts."

(Editor's note: Public comment will be accepted by the PFMC until Mar. 12. Address statements or letters to Joe Greenley, executive director, Pacific Fisheries Management Council, 526 S. W. Mill Street, Portland, OR. 97201).

control practices in conjunction with irrigation water conservation. Franklin County will be eligible for additional conservation technical assistance only. However, regular ACP funds will be available for use by farmers.

Sixteen states now receive targeted conservation program funds from USDA, including Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

Our Mildred Heath is doing nicely! So is our Mystie Heimgartner, and the last we heard, so was 'grandma' Lena Zumhofs! And to cap off our happiness, "Auntie" Bea now walks in her walker, looks lovely, and feels much improved!

Recent Callers—
On Sunday, Feb. 27, Sharon Freeman, daughters Robby, Christine and Mystie, all of Clarkston, with Bernice Foss, mother of Sharon, of Lapwai, were Sunday dinner guests in the home of Erma Stevens, on the ridge, and during the afternoon were callers of Beatrice and Cletis Holsington, at their home.

Glen and Marjory Stevens, Ruth Heimgartner and Laverne Harri, all were Bea's Sunday callers. Son Jim Holsington and family from the Rock Creek area of Culesac were present for the day. Sons Neale and Frank have also visited recently with their parents.

Bill and Laverne Harri of Clarkston enjoyed Sunday dinner, Feb. 27, with the Wayne Heimgartners, on the Ridge.

Dinner "Out" at Moscow—
On Sunday, Feb. 27, Leslie and Delores Heimgartner drove to Moscow, meeting with granddaughter Janice Heimgartner, WSU student, and grandson Brian Straw, U. of I. student, for a most enjoyable dinner together.

Due to necessary "butchering", the Stony Point Friendship Club will meet on Thursday, March 10, with Mabel Steigers, of the Gifford-Culesac area, instead of Mar. 3, as planned.

Josie Eller Passes—
Word phoned to Missoula, Mont. at 5 a. m. Saturday, Feb. 26, informed them that Carolee Steiger's mother had suffered a massive stroke. Carolee and Keith Steigers departed immediately over the pass, making a short stop at the E. Steigers home to call Lewiston, enroute. They arrived at St. Joseph's Hospital, finding mother Josie still living, but never having recovered consciousness. She passed away that day. Funeral services and burial at the Lewiston Memorial Gardens were scheduled for 1 p. m., Wednesday, March 2.

Some area residents enjoyed attending "Fiddler on the Roof", the musical play presented recently at Moscow.

The Moscow Mardi Gras Festival was also a drawing card at that city for many.

Among those from our community attending were the Steve Pettit family and members of the Ken Steigers family.

Our weather still is confused—"April Showers" and early "May flowers".

Friendship Club—
Stony Point Friendship Club met at the Lenore home of Lois Johnston, with a large group present to assist in finishing quilting on a lovely large, white spread (cross-stitch embroidered). This is the property of Gayle Kambitsch of Lewiston, who was present as a guest, as was our Alice Maguire. Mary Lou Cook, Lenore postmistress, also came in to enjoy the lovely meal, during her hurried lunch hour!

A late afternoon call was made by Alice Maguire, Dorothy Partridge and Nellie Steigers to see nearby neighbors, 101-year-old Helen Wilson, of Lenore, and her daughter, Irma White.

Priscilla Armitage visited Walt and Babe Benscoter on Tuesday afternoon.

The Bob Callison family were Sunday dinner guests of Nora and Mabel Callison. They helped their niece, Laura VanHouten of Moscow, celebrate her birthday.

On Sunday afternoon the Callisons travelled to Lewiston to attend the Idaho-Washington Symphony production of "Peter and the Wolf". Vicky Benscoter visited with Karen Gold and family and the Larry Galloway family Sunday afternoon.

Warney and Betty May attended the 25th wedding anniversary open house for the J D Wilsons on Sunday. Pat May participated in a bowling tournament at Moscow Sunday.

The May family enjoyed Monday shopping at Lewiston.

Ernie and Rena Andrews helped host a benefit luncheon for the Boise Elks Rehabilitation Hospital at the Jade Lantern Tuesday.

Last Friday Corey bought a sucker from the juniors and, like all people, he was eligible to draw a word from a box in which the words "Catch That Tiger Spirit", were written on different pieces of paper. Corey was the first person to draw all the words to complete the sentence "Catch That Tiger Spirit". He was the winner of the stuffed tiger and the contest which was sponsored by the junior class. Congratulations to you, Corey.

A very special thanks to Dave Jones who spends a lot of time working with all of our grade school athletes after school and on weekends. Also a special thanks to Bill Thomas who has not only coached but officiated many many of our ball games.
