Remissions May Give False Security Sense

In the 18th century, people believed that carrying Irish potatoes in their pockets, one on the left and one on the right, would reduce or possibly even cure the pain of arthritis. Today, some people believe in such exotic arthritis remedies as vodka-soaked raisins and green-lipped mussels. But why?

According to the Arthritis Foundation, one important reason is pain. Although the pain of arthritis can usually be relieved and controlled, most forms of the disease can be cured.

"Many people with arthritis are desperate for answers," said Lyn McCloskey, Executive Director of the Arthritis Foundation's Idaho Chapter. "So they're willing to try any treatment, however strange, unlikely or even unsafe it seems."

Another reason people believe in exotic remedies is an occurrence called a "remission." During a remission, some or all of the symptoms of a disease may disappear, usually temporarily and often without any treatment. Remissions are common in many forms of arthritis.

"People often associate the disappearance of their symptoms with whatever remedy they may be trying at the time, whether it's wearing copper bracelets or carrying potatoes in their pockets," says McCloskey.

"A flash link develops in the person's mind between the cause for feeling better, and the effect. This type of coincidence probably accounts for a large portion of the more than 1 billion that will be spent on quack arthritis remedies this year."

The period of remission can often lead people with arthritis to develop a false sense of security. Many even think they are cured.

"During a remission, the symptoms go away but the arthritis may not," says McCloskey. "It is still present in the body, lying in a dormant or inactive state. Don't stop seeing your doctor or following your prescribed treatment during a remission, especially if joint damage has already occurred."

Remissions in a disease like rheumatoid arthritis are usually temporary and symptoms commonly return in a few weeks, months or even years. If a woman with rheumatoid arthritis becomes pregnant, she will usually have a remission. Unfortunately after the birth, symptoms often return. This relationship led researchers to study the effect of certain hormones on arthritis. Despite intensive research, no one yet understands why remissions occur.

"Until we know this information, widespread belief in copper bracelets, Irish potatoes and other exotic items as arthritis cure will continue," said McCloskey. "But people must remember that these practices have no effect on improving a person's disease."

For more information about arthritis, contact the Arthritis Foundation's Idaho Chapter, 70C Robbins Road, Boise, Idaho 83702 or call (208) 344-7102 and request a free "Basic Facts—Answers to Your Questions."

CAGED BIRDS

Caged birds are becoming increasingly popular as pets. Birds require little space, are generally easy to care for, are cheerful to listen to and delightful to watch. There are many species of birds, each with its own special feeding and housing requirements.

Most caged birds are either Psittacines (sit-a-seens) or Passerines (pass-er-eens). Psittacines are the parrot-like birds with curved bills and feet that have two toes forward and two toes back. Passerines are the finch-like birds with straight beaks and feet that have three toes forward and one toe back.

The most popular caged bird is the parakeet, also called a budgie. Budgies were originally imported from Australia and can live for 15-20 years. Budgies are flock birds and thrive best in groups of two or more. Budgie are Psittacines as are parrots, macaws, and cockatoos.

The second most popular caged bird is the canary. Canaries are finch and get their name from their place of origin, the Canary Islands. The life span of a canary ranges from 6 to 16 years. They are most often kept for their melodious song and with canaries usually only the male sing. Canaries are Passerines as are various other finches and mynah birds.

Birds suffer from some of the same general illnesses as other animals such as infection, weight loss, broken bones, etc. In addition, birds have unique medical problems such as feather disorders, egg laying difficulties, and specialized nutritional requirements.

Birds are usually very ill before they show signs of illness. A sick bird may show a decreased appetite, ruffled feathers (sick birds chill), decrease in singing or talking, tail bobbing and narrowed or partially closed eyes.

V. F. W. Names Local "Voice of Democracy" Winners

Winners of the 37th annual VFW Voice of Democracy radio scripting speech contest at Kendrick High were chosen last Tuesday:

First Place: Paula Fliger,
 Second Place: Any Noren,
 3rd Place: Dan Emery.

This program was conducted by Mrs. Stewart and Mr. Vallem and sponsored locally by Baker Lind VFW and the Ladies Auxiliary.

Miss Fliger's first place winning tape will now be judged at the central Idaho district 2 level and if successful there will advance to state level.

This year's theme was "My Role in Upholding the Constitution."

"Participating in the Voice of Democracy program gives students experience in writing and speaking said Commander Bill Wilson in announcing the winner. "It gives them a chance to reflect on our nation and its meaning for them."

Vandeleers' Annual Christmas Concert Set for December 11

Moscow—All of the warmth and joy of the Christmas holiday season will be offered in the annual Christmas concert by the UI Vandeleers Concert Choir.

Entitled "Cocoon and Carols," the concert will be at 8 p. m. Dec. 11 in the Administration Building Auditorium. It will be "devoted to the warm spirit of the holidays, providing traditional music and refreshments to rekindle the joy of the season in all of us," according to Vandeleers director Dr. Harry Johansen.

The concert program will include familiar Christmas music and some less well known traditional carols from other countries. The choir will also sing motets and seasonal madrigals from the Renaissance and carol arrangements from the Baroque period along with many more modern and families Christmas hymns and carols.

The concert is free and open to the public and the Vandeleers extend an invitation to everyone to come and enjoy the music and gaiety of the Christmas season."

Club Meets—

Stonypoint Friendship Club met on Thursday, Dec. 1 at the home of Ruth Heimgartner for a day of quilting on table covers. Christmas decorations brightened the huge dining table, and a splendid meal was prepared by our hostess! Twelve members answered roll call, with interesting items told by many. A silent memorial prayer was held for our departed member, Beatrice Holsington, who will be sorely missed.

Next meeting is scheduled for Jan. 5th with Lois Johnston of Lenore as hostess—roads permitting.

The funeral service for our friend Beatrice Holsington was held at Brower-Wann Memorial Chapel in Lewiston and the burial at Memorial Gardens was attended by a very large group of mourners. Later a family dinner held in Kendrick, was served to between 75 and 100. The day was favorable, for this season of the year. November 30 was the date.

Son Phil of Eugene, Oregon remained for several days with the grieving mate, Cletis Holsington, who is slowly adjusting. He is brave.

Mrs. Effie Powell attended Sunday morning church services with daughter Marjorie Stevens and Glen. Later they attended the wedding of Karen Hunter and Eric Johnson held at Orofino on Sunday.

Leslie and Dolores Heimgartner were Sunday dinner guests in the Leland home of Mr. and Mrs. Arne Zumhofs. Walter Zumhofs was also a guest.

On Saturday, December 3rd, Wayne and Ruth Heimgartner assisted in moving Mother Hunter into her new apartment recently constructed for her at the home of Helen Slomp in Clarkston.

On Sunday, son Allen Heimgartner and the afternoon at the Stony Point ranch home of his parents.

Patti Stevens and hers enjoyed visiting her mother Greene in Lewiston on Sunday. A lovely new "perm" on mother, brot smiles of joy to all!

Our Mildred Heath reports she now feels much better after recovering from about 3 weeks of flu and its accompanying miseries.

Ken and Linda Steigers, with son Brant enjoyed cross country ski fun at the Palouse Nordic Ski Club, near Emida, on Saturday, Dec. 3.

Mabel Steigers Celebrates Birthday

On Sunday, December 4, Mabel Steigers of Gifford area, with husband Alvin, attended the annual Community Club potluck dinner at Gifford. Later, afternoon - evening guests at their ranch home included son Leroy and wife Jewel, and granddaughter Trina and husband Ron Huff with 3 small children, Stephanie and nearly 1 year old twins, Mathew and Jennifer, the latter group from Lewiston. (Walking is the newest achievement of the little twins!) Ken Steigers, with Ernest and Nellie Steigers, were also present at the gathering at the home. Alvin is improving from his recent knee repairs, tho still using crutches. Little Mathew carried great-grandpa's crutch around the room! He also displayed his muscles by two tiny clenched

Many Adults Feel Blue During Holiday Season

Clifton Anderson Associate Agricultural Editor

Moscow—Amid the festivities and gaiety of the holiday season, adults should expect to feel occasional sadness, according to Dr. Betty Turner, family economics specialist for the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service.

"Swings in your moods are normal. If you're up, you've got to come back down at some point. That's to be expected. What you should guard against are severe attacks of the holiday blues or episodes of real depression," Turner said.

Likely candidates for emotional problems are persons who don't fit the popular image of joyous, prosperous individuals living in the traditional all-American family the University of Idaho specialist said.

"If the media are saying that Christmas is for families and you can't be with yours—or don't have one—that hurts. If you don't have money to buy a lot of presents, that's another hurt. The media's repeated portrayals of a traditional family celebrating Christmas can be depressing to a single parent a single person or a couple without children," she said.

A positive approach can defeat the holiday blues, Turner said. "First, be honest about your emotions. Allow yourself to express any sadness or misgivings you may feel. Next, be honest about your capabilities. Plan the most enjoyable Christmas you're capable of having," she said. Single parents should think about the reality of their own situations and not try to live up to society's expectations regarding Christmas celebrations, Turner emphasized.

"It's hard for one person to be mother and father, plus grandparents as well. Why try the impossible? Often, the children are more realistic and don't expect all the things the single parent is trying to provide," Turner said.

To counteract feelings of loneliness, the extension specialist recommended the following joy-sharing procedures:

—People without children might borrow a child from a friend or relative. By spending some time with a young person, older people are able to enjoy a child's enthusiasm for the holidays.

—Single persons can celebrate with friends, forming a temporary "family" in order to make the holidays more meaningful.

—Small families that do not have grandparents may invite an elderly friend to join their festivities. Various community clubs and organizations can provide names of persons who would like to be a part of a family during Christmas.

"Money is a crucial problem for many people. The media urge us to spend, spend, spend. Check the impulse to over-spend. A tight budget in December may be depressing, but a big pile of bills in January would be even more depressing," Turner said.

Instead of placing emphasis on money, people can learn to make Christmas a time for sharing their time and skills. "Homemade presents are not only less expensive, but they can be fun to make. Making presents extends the holiday season over a longer period of time—and this may help prevent holiday blues," she said.

For the sake of your emotions, think of Christmas as a season and not as a one-day holiday, Turner suggested.

"Include friends or other members of the family into your Christmas plans and preparations. Slow the whole pace down. Prepare to do things over a series of days instead of gearing everything to one big day. By making Christmas last a little longer, you can avoid the usual post-Christmas let-down," she said.

Dorothy Partridge was unable to attend Club on Thursday, Dec. 1. She was entertaining (?) a bout of flu. Much happy family visiting occurred over the Thanksgiving holidays.

HUN, CHUKAR BAG LIMITS REDUCED TO 18 COUNTIES

Concern about sparse numbers of Hungarian and chukar partridge in some areas has prompted the Fish and Game Commission to reduce bag and possession limits December 5, the day after pheasant seasons close in southern Idaho.

Daily bag limits go to four hunns and four chukars and season limits are 12 and 12, December 5; then 8 and 8. Eighteen counties in Department of Fish and Game Regions 3 and 4 from Valley to Adams south and east to Blaine and Cassia, are included from the remainder of seasons that run through December 31.

The commission order, which reduced 1983 hun and chukar limits by one half, stated that their population levels "have been of concern to the Department of Fish and Game and sportsmen in general" and results of the 1983 hunting season indicated there are areas where numbers were low.

The department's annual survey of bird hunters showed an "excellent" 1981 season for hunns and chukars, but it was followed by the severe 1981-82 winter that was hard on the birds.

To compound the problem, brood production was cut back by cold, wet weather in the spring of 1982. A moderate 1982-83 winter helped improve reproduction in areas with a carryover of brood stock, "but hunting this year has been spotty at best," said State wildlife manager Lloyd Oldenburg.

"The timing of the fall greenup also dispersed the hunns and chukars which made hunter success particularly discouraging for those without good dogs," Oldenburg added.
