'Smooth As Silk" Describes UI One-Day Registration

Students were moving through the University of Idaho one-day registration process quickly and easily at mid-morning the day of registration in the ASUI Kibbie Dome.

Lines were generally short and fast moving, or non-existent, at class section sign up stations.

Two things were credited with helping ease the registration process -some pre-registration for classes that historically have had-to-estimate numbers of students, and use of a closed circuit television system to to show which class sections were filled and to infrom students of new

Neighbors, the Mitchells, who er home at the foot of Hubbard Gulch, departed Sunday morning, by car and small trailer for their home in Arkansas. They were Saturday evening supper guests in the home of Linda Steigers. Ken and Brant were gone to do assessment work on their claims on Gem Mt. in Montana where with Ken's twin brother, the 3 have "claims." They returned safely on Monday after the Labor

A large group, from distant home briefly on Friday noon. Sharon Steigers, wife of Wm. D. Steigers, Jr. of Palmer, Alaska with 2 small sons, Wm. D. Steigers, Jr., 4 years and Marc William, 2 years., Charlotte Steigers Sauer, wife of Dennis Sauer of Salt Lake City and 3 small adopted sons, David, 61/2, Mike 5, and Matt 21/2, and Michael Ernest Steigers and young Korean wife, Ksuk, of Georgia on 40 day leave from Air Force Base in Geogia all enjoyed a few brief hours together at Cherrylane. It is so seldom they can be together!

Kisuk's father, and mother arrived by plane at Seattle airport on Sunday. Daughter Kisuk and young husband Michael Steigers drove from Lewiston to meet them, and were returning the same day! A long hard drive. Recent news of great flooding in Socul, Korea, their home, could cause them much worry! They intended to travel to Yellowstone Park and various U. S. points of interest while here.

Mary and Bill Hayhurst had as guests from Colorado last week These included two sisters and a brother-in-law. They enjoyed the country very much and were very impressed with our church and neighbors, was the report given by Mary Hayhurst for our Cherrylane

This is the second year the closed circuit system has been used, giving them. up-to-the minute information at the dome and at several locations on campus, as well as in the community via cable channel 8.

Matt Telin, registrar, said he feels the system is of great help to students because they can learn, before they stand in line, which sections of a course are closed and adjust their chedules accordingly. It helps the staff involved in regisartion too bethe students are prepared for the section closures.

Bert McCrosky, associate dean of the College of Letters and Science, said the pre-regisartion process was used for some classes in the areas of communications, English and computer science. This allows administrators to plan class sections to accommodate students they know want to enroll in them.

He said that this year, as in the the past several years, ASUI students are wearing t-shirts with "help" in large letters on the front. Pruning - Sod Installation? have resided in the Lee Heath trail- He said the assistance they offer new students makes registration easier for everyone.

> Some of the areas where students were congregating were chemistry, computer science, English and math. People working at the regisration tables for those subjects said that no bottlenecks had developed by late morning and that they felt the preregistration procedure had helped make class sections available at the times that students want to take

The number of students in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Labor Day weekend, "The signs are Sciences, is expected to increase this year. If this expectation is met, it will reverse several years of small declines, James Fazio, associate dean for academics, said.

He said just as there were several reasons for the earlier decreases, there are probably several reasons for any increase, with the most significant being "that the employment picture is brighter for students."
