City Dwellers Await Return Of Some Special Visitors
 By Hugh Wilson
 Department of Fish and Game.
 About next April some office workers in downtown Salt Lake City are sure to be watching for the return of some special visitors—a young female peregrine falcon and her mate.
 Their summer home again is likely to be on the ninth-floor ledge of the Westin Hotel Utah in the heart of the city.

The falcons first appeared late last April. Leg bands identified the juvenile female as a bird from southwestern Idaho and the adult male as a former resident of the Great Salt Lake area.

Both are part of the two states' efforts to reestablish the endangered species in cooperation with the Peregrine Fund, Inc., other agencies and private organizations.

The visitors soon became a featured attraction; diving, rolling and soaring as healthy peregrines do when they perform their courtship display. An adult female showed up a few days after the pair arrived, but she later flew on.

"She must have known that the male was spoken for," said Bob Walters, a nongame program coordinator for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

"We were soon receiving constant updates from an enthusiastic volunteer corps of downtown watchers equipped with binoculars and spotting scopes and the hotel went to the expense of vacating some rooms so we could keep the pair under close observation," Walters said.

The two started their southern migration in mid-October when a heavy snowstorm hit the city, but Walters expects to see them again next spring if they have formed a bonding pair, as peregrines are likely to do.

"We estimated the female to be about a year old last April. She could lay an egg if they return next year, but it's 'iffy'—she may still be too young," Walters said.

Although it is a rarity in Salt Lake City for peregrines to take up quarters on a hotel ledge, the birds are known to occupy roofs and ledges on tall buildings because it gives them a superb hunting vantage point.

"They were undoubtedly attracted to the hotel because of an abundance of wild pigeons, which are choice morsels for peregrines," Walters said.

In Idaho, the Department of Fish and Game through its nongame program has just completed the third season in its efforts to reestablish peregrines in the state, according to Mart Morache, state nongame manager.

"During the past three seasons, 32 young birds have been released in 3 locations in southwestern and southeastern Idaho.

"We have since identified the female in Salt Lake City, another peregrine as a returnee to the Cascade area and one that was seen just east of Los Angeles, some 700 airline miles from home," Morache said.

The Peregrine Fund supplies the falcons for release in Idaho and other states. Idaho's initial agreement with the Fund calls for the delivery of 90 birds over 7 years.

"Our program has received generous assistance from private enterprise, including The J. R. Simplot Company and Boise Cascade. We have also had excellent support from the Bureau of Land Management and the Bureau of Land Management of the U. S. Forest Service," Morache said.

"Based on the expertise of the Peregrine Fund, there is a good chance of restoring these majestic birds to some of their historic habitat in Idaho."

YOU SHOULD HEAR US NOW

General Telephone is helping the hearing impaired hear better at pay phones all over town.

We've replaced the traditional handsets with ones incorporating built-in amplifiers that let the severe hearing impaired customer regulate the volume of a conversation.

The amplified pay phones have two buttons on the underside of the handset. By adjusting either or both buttons, the individual can adjust the receiver to compensate for his or her own degree of deafness.

It's a public service we're proud to provide. So that our friends who do have a hearing loss can still enjoy some good conversation.

Just pick up the special amplified pay phone at any of these locations:

 the editor...

Editor:

At a recent meeting of the Latah County Wheat Growers at Moscow some very interesting and controversial points were brought up.

The main purpose being to form ideas for the 1985 Farm Program. (all programs expire next year.)

A majority consensus being: we are growing more of something we all ready have too much of!

Past and present programs were not working as evidenced by increased production, increased cost, and progressively lower prices.

In light of this some radical changes were discussed.

Resolutions adopted for presentation to the state I. W. G. A. were:

1. To eliminate all farm subsidies replacing them with market development, export subsidies, blended credit, P.I. 480, etc.
2. Receive 100% of Parity until the permanent surplus is gone (this surplus is being used to regulate prices and keep the drowning farmer reaching). This resolution is designed to protect against future grain embargoes.
3. Chemical usage is the concern of all segments of society as it affects all living things.

The conservation program would contain provisions for technical and financial aid in immediate establishment of more all organic and regenerative farms on a nation-wide pilot basis to further develop the new alternatives to chemical usage under large acreage and various climate and field conditions. Organic farming is especially beneficial on fragile and low producing land for erosion control and lower production cost.

Notes from the Meal Site

Friday, Nov. 16, was the Thanksgiving dinner at the Kendrick Meal Site—9 tables were filled and 80 senior citizens were served a delicious turkey dinner. There were many guests from places around here and as far away as Colorado and Western Washington. It is wonderful to enjoy the fellowship of friends old and new. Many thanks to our cook for preparing and serving the delicious meal.

Following dinner Genevieve Newton, assisted by Beulah Stephens of Princeton, Idaho showed many Indian artifacts that Genevieve and her husband John had collected in the Southwestern states. One article, a beautiful buckskin jacket made from deer or elk skin, that Genevieve had worn for 37 years, was greatly admired.

Thanks to these ladies for sharing their treasures with us.
