9th annual Tiger

basketball camp June 10-14

The 9th annual Tiger Basketball Camp will be held the week of June 10-14 at Kendrick high school. Camp fee will be $30 per person or $50 for two people from the same family. Camp will be held from noon each day until 5 p.m.

Applications have been handed out at the high school and grade school, anyone needing an application may pick one up at the school or call 276-7031 and one will be sent. Applications must be turned in with a $10 deposit fee-the rest of the camp money may be paid the first day of camp.

Each camper will receive a camp tee shirt plus other awards will be given out throughout the week. All students who will be entering grades 6th - 10th will be eligible for camp. Fundamentals will be stressed and games will be played each day.

Camp instructors will be Kendrick boys coach Brent Monroe and Gorden Presnell, and girls basketball coach Jay Henderson.

attended 5-county meeting at Winchester Saturday

The weather was cool and damp, but it couldn't dampen the spirits of the nineteen senior citizens from Kendrick, Juliaetta and Troy who boarded the school bus on Saturday, June 1, to attend the North Central Idaho Senior Citizen's Association (5 County) meeting at Winchester. A gala good time was created by June 18: Elk River at Deary 1 festivities which began with the warm greetings of old friends and meeting new friends-plus- a gourmet pot luck dinner at noon.

A young man, Jim Moore of Craigmont serenaded us with soothing vocal solos, accompanying himself on the guitar.

Series on Contemporary American Family Begins at Moscow Public Library

How do famillies make us what we are? Come talk about it at the Moscow Public Library?

The first program in a five-part reading and discussion series on the contemporary American family will take place Tuesday, June 11, at 7:30 p. m. in the library. The book to be discussed is THIS HOUSE OF SKY, Ivan Doig's autobiographical account of growing up in Montana sheep country.

Susan Armitage, Associate Professor of History and Director of the Women Studies Program at Washington State University, will open the series. Dr. Armitage will introduce the theme of contemporary American family relate the book to the theme, and raise issues to be explored in the discussion groups following her presentation. Copies of the book are available at the library. "We are hoping people will have read the book before they come to the program," said librarian Gloria Gehrman. "But the most important part of the program is thinking and discussing the issue and encouraging the reading of some excellent contemporary literature, so we hope anyone interested will which she shapes into bodies and come and listen-especially with

"A steelhead talks economics"-

By Ron Herman Clearwater Soil/Water

As we close down a very productive steelhead fishing season, there are a few things which we should think about besides 'grilled fillets'. According to Bert Bowler of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, there were approximately 75,000 angler man-days of steelehad fishing cost money to implement, and can last fall and this spring . . . an angler man-day is equal to 4 hours per day. This adds up to approximately 300, 000 hours of fishing annually.

This year, however, even with erosion and weather being moderate, we still lost about 3 weeks of fishing because runoff from the lower tributaries muddled the water on the lower Clearwater River. This condition has caused the few fishermen who still try to fish, to literally fight for a spot on the river above Peck and on the North Fork.

The lower tributaries that muddy the river are also important spawning streams for a natural population of "A" stock steelhead (5-10 lbs.) According to Al Espinosa, U. S. Forest Service Fisheries Biologist, there has been a 30% to 50% reduction in spawning due to sedimentation in these tributaries. The "A" stock fish move up river in September and October, hold over until spring, and then continue moving up the creeks to spawn when water flow increases. Unfortunately, this is also when sedimentation increases.

Among the main causes for excess sedimentation, are agricultural practices, logging operations and roads. Combined with highly erodable soils, and a 25 to 30 inch annual precipitation rate, it is obvious that we have a problem.

Currently, there is a State Program in the development stage which deals with the agricultural aspect. The Agricultural Pollution Abatement Program may be helpful in problems evident in this and other areas. This program is primarily funded through tobacco and alcohol a timely and economical manner, taxes, and offers assistance to farmers who wish to participate in newer farming technologies and conservation practices. The problems are: the amount of funding available, and the current poor financial condition of the farmers. Conservation practices reduce yields, in some cases both temporarily and permanently. This, combined with the fact that some of] these newer practices have not yet to state and private agencies for in been tested over a long period of formation. "We will take almost at District III Finals May 11-12 time, causes some farmers to be reluctant when it comes to trying them. whether it be by station or by coun The overall success of conservation ty," said Molnau. "Data especially practices however, is becoming more needed are locational information evident every day and more farmers periods of record, and data format are deciding to try these farming and source. We will do all the need essary translating into the NEDRES methods. Funding, if made available for erosion and sediment control, format and supply as much of th can help the steelhead population in necessary information as we can
